

Paranormalis Epstein

◀ Draconis Et Umbra ▶

Project AngelBook - Volume XXVII - Part 3

Ezekiel Redik Yarbrough

What you are about to read exists at the intersection of documented history and the edges of human understanding — the place where official records end and something far older, far darker, and far less explainable begins. On January 30, 2026, the United States Department of Justice released what would become the largest document disclosure in the history of a single criminal case — over 3.5 million pages, 180,000 images, and 2,000 videos tied to the investigation of Jeffrey Edward Epstein, convicted sex trafficker, suspected intelligence asset, and man who died in federal custody under circumstances the world has never fully accepted as natural. The release came following the bipartisan passage of the Epstein Files Transparency Act in November 2025, a law that passed the Senate unanimously and forced an institution that had protected these secrets for decades to finally, however reluctantly, crack the vault. What emerged was not just a legal document dump. It was a confirmation. Of networks. Of names. Of power structures so deeply embedded in the architecture of civilization that even with millions of pages now technically public, the deepest layers remain redacted, withheld, or conveniently disappeared — sixteen files vanished from the DOJ's own webpage within twenty four hours of the first December 2025 release, without explanation. Congressmembers who viewed unredacted files in secured DOJ reading rooms emerged visibly shaken, with one describing the content as "bigger than Watergate" and another stating Trump's name appeared more than a million times in the unredacted material. Meanwhile, across the internet, in the places where the officially unsanctioned research has always lived — the anonymous boards, the paranormal forums, the digital communities that mainstream media calls fringe and intelligence agencies call threats — something extraordinary was happening simultaneously. The paranormal board of 4chan, a space historically dismissed as chaos and conspiracy, became during this period one of the most active real time research hubs on the internet, as anonymous researchers cross referenced flight logs against ritual calendars, mapped bloodline connections against ancient power structures, and began asking the questions that no congressional hearing would dare voice out loud: What if Epstein was not an anomaly? What if he was a node? What if the network he served is not a modern creation of greed and perversion, but the visible surface layer of something ancient, intentional, and non-human in its origin? This volume does not ask you to believe anything. It asks you to look. At the documents. At the connections. At the history that was never supposed to survive. Sanguis et tenebris — blood and darkness — has always been the language of those who rule from the shadows. This is their vocabulary, translated at last into yours.

Always has been.

Humans have been making the wrong sacrifices to the wrong god for a long time.

I'm starting to think nigger cattle are actually demiurge drones being used to orchestrate reality for PCs.

There's no way someone could just accept that way of life no questions asked not even a thought of rebellion or finding other ways to survive? Its like theyre all jacked into the same system under the same programming.

The hivemind hates people who go against the grain. Because they hate that creative divine spark. Its a reminder of what they arent.

The image is a cartoon-style illustration with a simple, black and white color scheme. At the top, there is a text that reads, "If God existed, He is evil!" The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is in a larger font size compared to the rest of the image. Below this text, there is a speech bubble with the text "By evil I mean my own basis and interpretation of what evil is, since without the concept of a creator, morality is subjective." The speech bubble is in a smaller font size compared to the main text.

In the center of the image, there is a cartoon character with a simple, black outline. The character is wearing a red t-shirt with the text "God NOT REAL" written in white capital letters. The character is depicted with a surprised expression, with one hand pointing upwards and the other hand pointing downwards, as if making a gesture. The character's eyes are wide open, and the mouth is open, suggesting surprise or shock. At the bottom of the image, there is a watermark that reads "@OrthodoxXUthan". The watermark is in a smaller font size compared to the main text and is placed at the bottom right corner of the image. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, using a cartoon character to convey a message about the concept of God and morality.

Man's job was to keep Satan out of the Garden.

Satan got into the Garden.

The Father, Son, and Holy Spirit watched the whole thing like shaking their heads as Adam and Eve messed up every single step of the way.

Then when God had enough he entered the Garden and Adam lied to him despite knowing God saw everything.

It was a big mess.

The issue is that God being perfect means his justice is perfect meaning killing Adam and Eve would have been the Just outcome which is what Satan really wanted.

Satan was trying to trap God in a situation where he had to destroy Humanity at the start. The Son instead choose to take the Sin upon himself and the Father was pleased by this.

Satan or Lucifer or whoever is an asshole. If you think he is the victim you lack understanding. He fucking loves what he does. God solved the problem of Evil already but as long as humans are born evil always has an inroad. Doing something would mean bringing a perfect decision which usually involves burning.

If god is all knowing and god creates us all then god knows what a person will become before he creates them. He knows that he is creating a person who will ultimately be damned to hell before they are conceived but chooses to bring them into existence anyway instead of changing them. So then after they eventually die he punishes them for being exactly what he created them to be. How is this not sadistic?

The image is a still from a film or television scene, featuring two characters in a dimly lit room. On the left, there is a person wearing a helmet with a visor, which appears to be a standard military or space helmet. The individual is seated at a table with a computer monitor in front of them. The person on the right is wearing a white shirt with a star on the chest, and their face is obscured by a mask that covers their entire head. The mask has a large, open mouth and a bald, baldric-style hairline. The person on the right is also wearing a watch on their left wrist. The background is dark and out of focus, with a textured wall that suggests a space-like environment. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the characters and their expressions, and the lighting is subdued, emphasizing the characters and their expressions.

What if I told you humans are morally quite neutral by the standards of the mortal realm biologically in their predispositions except that they exhibit more variety, more "freedom" of the astral to influence the direction their minds take. That souls are put in human bodies for their first incarnation many times because they're big deals, good or evil, and they'll be battling psychically and otherwise across the life times along with God Almighty. There are deities and powers from other planets too, and among the animals and plants. Psychic magnificence in corporeal form will become so numerous a human mind can scarcely imagine it. Without psychic help.

The image is a four-panel comic strip divided into two sections. On the left side, there is a dog wearing a costume that resembles a turkey's head and body. The dog has a red headband and yellow feet, and its body is adorned with a brown and white pattern that resembles a turkey's feathers. The dog's expression is one of surprise or shock.

On the right side of the image, there is a cartoon-style illustration of a man with a beard and a black shirt. He has a surprised expression and is looking at the dog. The man's face is drawn with a simple, cartoon-like style, and he is wearing glasses.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a group of five cartoon-style faces with various expressions. The faces are drawn with a simple, cartoon-like style and are arranged in a line, with the first face being the most prominent. The expressions on the faces range from surprised to angry.

The text in the image reads "That's a dog" and "That's a turkey." These texts are placed at the bottom of the image, with the first text being larger and more prominent than the second. The text is in a bold, sans-serif font. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, using a combination of visual elements to convey a message about the dog's costume and the man's surprised reaction.

The image is a meme featuring a cartoon depiction of a bearded man with a serious expression. The man has a long white beard and is wearing a gray robe. He is looking directly at the viewer with a serious expression. The background of the image is divided into two colors: the top half is yellow, and the bottom half is blue.

At the top of the image, there is a text that reads "CREATED HIMSELF: TO CREATE ANOTHER VERSION OF HIMSELF AND THEN SACRIFICED HIMSELF TO HIMSELF." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in black.

At the bottom of the image, there is another text that reads "TO SAVE US FROM HIMSELF." This text is also in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in black.

The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a focus on the concept of self-sacrifice and the idea of saving oneself from oneself. The use of a religious figure, such as Moses, is a common trope in religious humor, often used to represent the idea of self-sacrifice. The meme seems to be a commentary on the concept of self-sacrifice and the idea of saving oneself from oneself.

You already accept billions of unbreakable rules in the universe... laws of physics, chemistry, biology, limitations of matter and time. And things you can't even imagine because God doesn't allow you to. Are you seriously claiming that human free will somehow overrides all of that, yet God can't create a reality where free beings exist without children being raped to death by pedo jews? Ridiculous.

>So you want God to only give the paradise.

Yeah, why not? Christians and muslims believe that everyone in paradise has 100% free will despite not being able to do evil there. Mysterious....

Then the righteous will answer him, 'Lord, when was it that we saw you hungry and gave you food or thirsty and gave you something to drink? And when was it that we saw you a stranger and welcomed you or naked and gave you clothing? And when was it that we saw you sick or in prison and visited you?' And the king will answer them, 'Truly I tell you, just as you did it to one of the least of these brothers and sisters of mine, you did it to me.' >Then he will say to those at his left hand, 'You who are accursed, depart from me into the eternal fire prepared for the devil and his angels, for I was hungry and you gave me no food, I was thirsty and you gave me nothing to drink, I was a stranger and you did not welcome me, naked and you did not give me clothing, sick and in prison and you did not visit me.' Then they also will answer, 'Lord, when was it that we saw you hungry or thirsty or a stranger or naked or sick or in prison and did not take care of you?' Then he will answer them, 'Truly I tell you, just as you did not do it to one of the least of these, you did not do it to me.' And these will go away into eternal punishment but the righteous into eternal life." (Matthew 25:31-46) free will cannot exist unless in a vacuum.

Read your Bible again and find any part where it says this.

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 22:39:50 No.41977230 Report

Let's assume you're sat in front of God. He knows everything of course. Between you on a table are an apple and a banana.

You can choose either, or another third option you might choose to be clever or for whatever reason (I'm not hungry, I don't like either, etc). Let's assume he knows whichever you're going to choose by decoding your entire body into what seems to him like a simple set of rules. Let's assume that you are just that fucking predictable to him, like a windup toy. He already knows which one you like, he knows if you're going to dig into the apple, the banana, cross your arms and refuse, whatever.

He tells you one of the fruits has been poisoned, leads to hell, and one leads to heaven. He tells you that you have to choose or he's gonna send you to hell anyways.

Would he be responsible if you chose wrong?

Would that mean he purposefully caused your eternal suffering by poisoning the fruit he knew you would choose, or does he just get some bullshit excuse like "Yeah I know/see everything except how a brain works"?

Actually let's talk about that, because you don't need to be a god to know who'd choose the apple or the banana. <https://news.stanford.edu/stories/2021/01/watching-decision-making-brain>

You make a choice about 11 seconds before you even know you want to.

The greatest question of the moralizers hitherto has been the question of why God allows so much "bad stuff" to happen: death, mischief, fighting, rape, destruction and the dashing of hopes and plans. And the answer is, obviously, because God likes all that stuff. Because he loves mischief, conflict, destruction, and the dashing of hopes and plans — even his own, from time to time. Even a little rape now and then. God allows the "bad stuff" to happen because he himself is bad, among other things. Among many other good and hallowed things. And just like girls prefer bad boys, the universe prefers bad gods, and for the same reason (because "All good people are weak: they are good because they are not strong enough to be evil", said the Latuka chieftain Comorro to Baker).

The image features a stylized illustration of a character with a beard and glasses, set against a black background. The character has a large, green, serpentine body that curves around the character's head and neck. The character's face is characterized by a beard, glasses, and a stern expression. The character's eyes are wide open, and the mouth is open in a shout or scream. The character's hair is styled in a way that it appears to be spilling out from the top of the head, giving the impression of a wild or fierce expression. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the character's intense expression. There are no texts present in the image.

What do you guys consider God's ultimate sin or sign that He doesn't give a fuck about us in the way that the chrstian golems want us to believe? The fact that God allows people to be raped, especially children and disabled people, to me, is one of the biggest signs that God is a loser who is incapable of dealing with us without gaslighting us into believing that we are the ones to be blamed and the ones in the wrong. God is the biggest killer ever. I wold never feel secure around a person who kills children out of spite. They totally brainwashes us since birth to see God as some kind of good entity, but God is the creator of Evil so said Isaiah. This is crazy. People will kill you for saying that God is Evil an shit, but it is written in the bible that God creates Evil. How come people deny that God is evil? If a person creates Evil what does that say about the person? If I create evil what does this signal about me? But the chrstiam golems won't acecept this. God is not the good guy. God is teh author of evil. God is the one who makes thing happen. God could end the suffering of everyone, but no, the suffering must go on. And why? Because suffering powers the machine.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a text that reads "491194" in a bold, sans-serif font. The text is in a smaller font size compared to the face, and it is positioned in a way that it does not obscure the face. The number "491194" is written in a larger, bold font, which stands out against the white background.

The overall style of the image is modern and abstract, with a focus on the interplay of lines and curves to create a sense of depth and three-dimensionality. The use of black and white gives the image a timeless and classic feel. The text in the bottom right corner is a clear and legible element, adding a modern touch to the image.

Current 218/182 General.

Liber Falxifer series/Book of Sitra Achra discussion.

Last thread above bump limit:

>>41912886

>What is the current 218/182?

Qliphothic Draconian Current.

The books generated by "N.A-A.218" are advanced Codebooks to decypher; that leads the practitioner "Out of Eden, and into the path of Nod".

They act as guidebooks for those who want to live an "alternative type of unnatural lifestyle"; to walk the path that leads in the long term towards The Other Side; Sitra Achra.

The books are meant to be found and decyphered with time by those who feel the call. If you enjoy "Hellraiser" style stuff as well as advanced Puzzles then it's very worth trying out.

Liber Falxifer 3 is based on the sophisticated "Cross Stations of Nod" system; being a very good "step by step system"; teaching advanced spiritual metaphysics in a Step by Step manner; you should be able to go from "Novice to Master" with only these books if you're new to occult praxis, since this teaches all the basics you need to comprehend for any type of spiritual stuff (teaches you "meta-spirituality"; ie "how spiritual stuff objectively works").

The image displays a collection of black and white illustrations, each representing a different symbol or rune, arranged in a grid format. The symbols are stylized with intricate lines and curves, and they are set against a plain background. The text above each symbol provides a title or description, such as "The First Station," "The Second Station," "The Third Station," and so on, indicating that these are likely depictions of the first three stations of the rune system. The text is in a serif font, and the style of the image is reminiscent of medieval or Gothic art, with a focus on the intricate details of the symbols. The overall style of the image is formal and academic, suggesting that it may be a part of a book or publication related to the rune system.

The image displays a collection of nine black and white illustrations, each representing a different symbol or design related to the "The North Station" and "The South Station" in the context of the "The Great Seal of the United States." The symbols are arranged in a grid format, with three rows and three columns, each row containing three illustrations. The top row features the "The North Station" with the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the center, surrounded by the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the top left, the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the top right, and the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the bottom left. The middle row shows the "The South Station" with the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the center, surrounded by the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the top left, the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the top right, and the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the bottom left. The bottom row features the "The North Station" with the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the center, surrounded by the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the top left, the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the top right, and the "The Great Seal of the United States" in the bottom left.

Each illustration is a simple, stylized representation of the symbols, with the central design being a stylized representation of the "The Great Seal of the United States," surrounded by the "The Great Seal of the United States" in various positions. The symbols are composed of interconnected lines and shapes, with the central design being the most prominent. The text "The Great Seal of the United States" is written in a serif font, and the symbols are set against a plain background, emphasizing the central design. The overall style of the image is formal and academic, with a focus on the symbolic representation of the United States' national identity.

"Thus the Black Cross of the Place of the Skull, a branching of the ever expanding Cross of Nod, became at its elevated centre the throne of those that sowed the earth tilled with the corpse-seeds of the first ones killed, sowing one acre in order to let it Turn Into Another, sowing death to reap life and attain rebirth beyond the limitations of the living, placing one foot in each world so accessed, remaining ever unbound by riding the steed shoed to only stride the points In-Between, keeping the Riders in the Transcending Liminality of the Half-Life and Half-Death, granting the powers to allow the dead to ride the living and the living to ride with and as the dead."

People are attracted to different types of spiritual currents; I'm upkeeping these threads for assistance and initiations into 218/182 for those drawn in towards said current.

These books are "lifestyle guidebooks" for a "different type of lifestyle" for those attuned to this specific current; see for example >>41953710
"manifesting Him as the Saint of all those that do not belong to the world of man and instead walk the Path of the Dragon, as One Against All".

The "Path of Exile" etc comes with the path.
"Path of No Return".

If you're attuned to for example "Black Metal music"; "Dark Souls videogames", "Hellraiser and such in film/tv"; stuff dealing with "Sitra Achra/The Black Earth", then this is likely an interesting lifestyle path.
"Sith" in star wars for example is 218 attuned.

Watain - Sworn to the dark:
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ftHzBlvdGpg>
"So block not my path
Your spells can't fetter me.
Beneath the laws of man
I bend not!
For it is holy,
The sword I bury in thee.
It is the Lord himself
Who commands me.

Sworn to the Dark.
Sworn to the Dark.
Sworn to the Dark.
To the Death and far beyond!"

Good classic song.

containing text and the right column featuring an illustration of a symbol. The symbol is a stylized representation of a cross with a swirling pattern around it, and it is accompanied by a series of arrows pointing in various directions. The text surrounding the symbol is in a language that appears to be Japanese, and it discusses the symbolism and powers associated with the tobacco plant.

The text discusses the tobacco plant as one of the most powerful spirits among the Blacks, with its ability to manipulate the elements and to work with the spirits of the dead. It mentions that the tobacco plant is a holder of quickening, empowering, cleansing, and rejuvenating powers, and that it can be used to create a potent elixir of Saturn's poison and can also be used to create a powerful curse. The text also describes the tobacco plant as a conduit for the spirits of the dead and as a path to the elemental kingdoms, and it mentions that the tobacco plant can be used to create a variety of forms of invocation, exorcism, and manifestation, including shades and spirits.
The illustration on the right column is a simple black and white drawing of the tobacco plant, with the cross symbol and the arrows surrounding it. The text and the illustration together provide a comprehensive overview of the tobacco plant's symbolism and its potential powers.

The image is a black and white collage of two separate photographs. On the left, there is a portrait of a man with a mustache and glasses, wearing a suit and tie. He is looking to his left with a thoughtful expression. The background is out of focus, but it appears to be a room with a window.

On the right, there is a close-up of a man's face, with his hands clasped together in front of him. He has long, dark hair and is looking directly at the camera. The man's expression is serious.

The bottom right corner of the image contains text that reads "THE FUTURE OF MUSIC." The style of the image is reminiscent of a vintage photograph, with a focus on the man's face and the text, suggesting a theme related to music or a cultural context.

The image is a page from a book or a document, featuring text in a serif font. The text is divided into two columns, with the left column containing a paragraph and the right column containing a question mark followed by a series of three asterisks. The text is in English and discusses a historical event involving the tribe of Qayin and the tribe of Qalmana.

The paragraph begins with the phrase "In order to keep his bloodline, from the side of Seth, alive," which sets the context for the discussion. It mentions that Noah was also granted to bring with him and save his own family, consisting of his wife, his three sons, and their three wives. The text then transitions to describe the events that would lead to the bloodline's survival, mentioning that the events would be so significant that they would be remembered by the blind tyrant Demiurge.

The question mark followed by the asterisks indicates a question or a statement that is not fully visible in the image. The text does not provide a direct answer to the question, but it suggests that the question is related to the events described in the paragraph.

The image is a snapshot of a page from a book or a document, and it is important to note that the text is not fully visible, and the question mark is not fully visible in the image provided. The image does not contain any additional visual elements or graphics, and the focus is solely on the text.

The image is a screenshot of a text in a document, likely a Bible or a religious text, with a section of text that is highlighted. The highlighted text is a quote from the Bible, specifically from the book of Ecclesiastes, chapter 4, verse 17. The text reads: "And the name of the fifth force, the name of the sixth Cielloth, and the name of the seventh Fobloth."

The significance of this text is that it provides a list of names associated with specific forces or concepts in the context of the Bible. The names are likely to be symbolic or metaphorical representations of different aspects of the text or the author's thought process. The names are not literal but rather represent concepts or ideas that are significant in the context of the passage. The text is presented in a way that is clear and easy to read, with the names listed in a sequential order, which is typical for a list in a document. The image does not provide any additional context or background information about the names or the passage they represent.

In biblical mythology overall Qayin is "the founder of civilizations; the first cities upon the earth"; the Qayinite lineage is also attributed to "The first workers of copper and iron (blacksmithing/industry); the first weavers of Clothing; the first makers of musical instruments"; etc.

This quote from Genesis claims Qayin started founding cities already at just 15 years old.

Abel on the other hand was just a "Stone Ager".

Below the title, there is a paragraph that begins with "The West African Mystery Cults of the Yoruba and the Yoruba Mystery Cults of the Yoruba." The text is in English and appears to be a scholarly or academic article, discussing the origins and beliefs of the Yoruba people in West Africa.

The document is divided into two columns, with the left column containing a black and white illustration of a symbol or design, and the right column containing text. The illustration is a stylized representation of a geometric pattern with lines and dots, possibly representing a symbol or a motif. The text is in a serif font, which is commonly used for academic or formal writing.

The style of the image is typical of a printed document, with a clean and professional layout, likely intended for academic or scholarly publication. The document appears to be a part of a larger publication or academic work, as indicated by the presence of a title page and a page number at the bottom of the left column. The overall impression is one of a serious and scholarly discussion of a cultural or religious topic.

Gulgaltha 12: "Qayin Baal ha-Ateret ha-Atzamot":

"By this Cross-Seal the powers of Master Qayin in His aspect as the Saint-Maker and the Baptiser of the Mighty Dead, are manifested and made to flow through His Lineage via Initiation, Consecration and Dedication taken form as Pacts placing the living amongst the dead even before the advent of death, making it as a Mark of His Royal Covenant within the Gulgaltha Line, branding with Black Light His Priesthood of the Death upon this Point of Nod, and as such its solemn grandness makes it a very heavy cross to bear, as it signifies the step before final ascension of the Lord of the Black Cross, where instead of looking forward He, and those walking in His footsteps, looks back and gives focus and power to others worthy of partaking of the Azoth of Thoughtless Spirit accumulated, strengthening them so with a branching of their own Grace in an egoless act of sacrifice for the greater good, aiding so the elevation of the whole instead of only its personal fraction."

"This is one of the Stations of Nod that have the most attributes of relevance, but also one of those that do not allow open disclosure, besides that which has been written and hinted at, and initiates are thus instead encouraged to first reach it and then work it and receive Gnosis directly from it, based on that which has been given and that which by then will be further earned and received."

Unlike many other Orders/Temples; initiations into what "TotBL/TFC" is about happens directly through spiritual information conveyed to the people using the books practical systems; rather than through "meeting with physical people".

As mentioned in the pictured quote in; >>41953826

(had already posted picture i was originally gonna put here)

"as those who Know will read between the lines and fill in the gaps by the way of their own Insights; gained via Direct Experience with our Qayinite Necrosophic Current".

You'll for example find "very little information about TotBL and such on google"; direct comprehension comes from "becoming good at the books; by spending time with decyphering the advanced Sigil System".

The sigils are very far from "just visual imagery"; but rather "spiritual metaphysical information presented in Sigil format".

You process sigils overall with "The third eye; 'Pineal Gland'; being the 'spiritual information processing organ'".

(Sigils like the Emissaries in Book of Sitra Achra would probably also be extremely interesting to work with on for example LSD btw as a side note; would love to try this if I had access to any; sadly limited in such kinds of contacts).

On said subject; using weed is subtly recommended in Akeldama station 2 btw; something with "green tinted glasses"; and something somewhere else in the books about "lighting green candles".

Akeldama 2: "Qayin Consitor" pictured;

"This Cross-Seal is also a gate to the Master in His aspect as the bearer of the Green Flame of Wisdom and the Initiator into the Mysteries of His Legions of Akeldama, dispensing via possession, visions, inspiration or intuition His Gnosis to the chosen and the blessed, granting so insight into the occult application of plants and the means through which their Spiritual powers can within the sorcerous contexts effectively be harnessed."

Sounds like a plan ill grab one eventually. I actually walk the left handed path of the reaper in a more folklore practice in the context of La Santa Muerte but I've always known/felt that there was much past the surface level aspect of her cult. Ive been visited by a familiar of The Death Lord in my dreams and waking life and invoke him in few occasions. He would often guide me in divination. That said I already have an alter (but not one in the context of Book 1) and in that alter I made an offering box out of a old cigar box where I give Him tithe every paycheck as a thank you. When that tithe reaches a certain amount I will use the funds to purchase a goal piece for an alter. Last time it was a Tibetan skull brazier to burn incense.

With that said I have a real human skull and real human finger bones en route to my

The thing that I never understood is how the followers see Qayin? Do they see him as a human who achieved Demonhood or Godhood, or do they see him as a powerful spiritual entity?

The physical books usually cost a bit in Second hand; if you cant afford Ebay prices then wait for future New Editions and use PDF in the meantime.

We are likely to see Liber Falxifer 2 and 3 get Second editions soon.

The books usually cost "~52 EUR" in standard editions when they are new; so wait for eventual new editions of LF2+3 (Lf1 recently had a 3rd ed; while 2 and 3 have never had second ed prints yet).

Personally started buying the books back at "LF2 first ed; LF1 second ed; both first and secon editionions of Book of Sitra Achra" all at the price of 52 Eur each.

Can guarantee that LF3 is going to have a second ed release with time; though don't know how soon; since the readerbase/interest has increased with time.

LF3 was released 2016 originally.

All liber falxifer books + book of sitra achra (1st + second ed) have always been at "52 EUR" as standard price for Standard editions; have bought them all at pre-order myself;
can guarantee that they will eventually get more editions (especially LF3).

LF3 had 1300 copies at release in 2016; personally had "n.17 / 1300".

Read the Genesis myths in the Book of Sitra Achra and Liber Falxifer 2.

Qayin is the Messiah of Serpents; i.e. those of the Fiery Bloodline here in this plane of existence.

Qayin (which translates to "spear") was the intrusion of the Black Light (the Left Side of God, that Side which seeks to return all to Ain, the original source, the "True God"). Qayin was birthed through Eve when she ate of the Tree of Death by Samael and Lilith. Qayin is to us the Father of our Bloodline, our Master, the first farmer, murder and tamer of the horse, the founder of civilization, the first necromancer, the first Satanist, the list goes on.

Qayin is many things to us, but yes He and his Twin Sister did ascend to Godhood within the Sitra Achra. His Enduring Soul is still present here in this side of reality, due to the fact that He was once a man, and thus He acts as a bridge for those of his Spiritual Lineage to access and connect to the Other Side (the Sitra Achra/Qlipphoth/the Left Side of God).

I remember reading an interview from N.A-A.218 where he said the end goal of Current 2182 is essentially the same as a right hand path tradition like Buddhism or Gnostic Christianity (union with the Divine), but the means to that end are more in line with a left-hand path tradition. From what I've read from their literature, it basically does seem like Gnostic Christianity but with sinister or wrathful (in the Buddhist/Hindu sense) archetypes instead of the peace, love, and light archetypes from right hand path traditions. How accurate is that?

For example, the wrathful deities in Buddhism and Hinduism aren't "evil" in the sense they want terror and destruction for the sake of terror and destruction. They are noble beings that use terror to destroy the ego of the practitioner and to build resilience and bravery through suffering and scaring. They are there to steer the practitioner on the path to true spiritual enlightenment and away from the material world of vanity. And, if I'm not mistaken, there are wrathful deities within Current 2182, like Kali.

Shachor 13: "K-Ain Baal ha-Tanninim":

"Beyond any such operations focusing upon outer effects and manipulations we must perpetually hold in remembrance this Final Point of Nod and remain ever focused upon it as our Ultimate Goal, if not at all times with the thoughts of the conscious mind then constantly with our Spirit, and so keep its Burning Alogos in our hearts and strive, like Qayin and Qalmana did before us, to burn by and burn the world with such Glorious Divine Fire, until all is rectified back into Unrestricted Holiness, so that we then can be triumphant in and as K-Ain returning to Ain."

"Vexior" is a different author; publishing books through the same book publisher.

in actual reality the nordic pantheon is not demiurgic in essence.

I think Vexior was a bit "flexible" in said subject; of what he considers to be "logical correlations", to forge some sort of Narrative (ie doing his own "worldbuilding" rather than serious studies on the subject).

In reality; "the demiurgic heimanmene" (also described as "the deluded half-maker and his mad archons") is a type of "Anti-spiritual/anti-fun forces"; formed by Adamites in an attempt at doing a "world-takeover" ("In kether the demiurge mistakenly proclaimed himself the true divine" etc).

It's an attempt at "restricting the world to be only 'Eden; normie society setting'" through spiritual strategy games and spiritual negotiations; which has led for example to "Policemen being some sort of "Comedic lackeys of the demiurge; that sometimes show up surreally trying to block you from having too much fun if you end up physically in alternative dimensions and such"

"No fun allowed police" being a thing that literally happens physically irl sometimes.

There's a real "Police Blockage inbetween worlds".
policemen acting as a type of "Comedic enemies" sometimes; in "highly surreal circumstances" (you'll start noticing what this means when you get involved in physical experiences with the path).

See those "He's making a run for it" memes.

Yeah, Vexior, by his own admission, is autistic. I love Arckanum's music, and I know Set Teitan is close to Vexior, but I think trying to interpret the Norse tradition in an anti-cosmic sense is a bit confusing. Yes, Jon Nödtveidt sang about Jormungand on Reinkaos, but I think the difference is that the Norse Gods accepted their fate. Odin knew the Primordial Chaos would eventually win in the end, hence the Ragnarok prophecy. His goal was to prepare for that time. Whereas the Demiurge is actively trying to stop that from happening.

Liber Falxifer 4 is coming quite soon btw; so it's a good time to get involved in LF3's system.

LF4 looks Apocalypse themed;

"Liber Falxifer IV - The Book of the Apocalyptic Emissary of K-Ain" being the current title.

"We are happy to on this most auspicious date of Good Friday, for the third year in a row, report on the progress of our ongoing work and its manifestation within the forthcoming Liber Falxifer books. The scope of the transmissions have at this point only increased and the documents within which the ongoing 'Revelations of the Apocalyptic Emissary of K-Ain' are recorded contain now more than 300 000 words, plus an additional 100 000 words if we also would consider the still growing book of correspondences and gematric disclosures through which the Overseeing Spirit of our Work both communicates and confirms his dispensed Gnosis. "

Somewhere has been mentioned that "after the release of LF4 we'll likely see LF5-7 released in much faster succession than the previous books"; with something mentioning that we are "likely to see new books annually or bi-annually; every or every second year".

Military btw has an important "background role" in the stuff described in Liber Falxifer 3; so if you work in Military; study stuff related to "Background assistance of Qayinites";

Working directly with said book will give you "more conscious understanding of the background world politics going on"; as well as "comprehension of Ark-projects" (see "noah's ark; genesis).

Understanding of "why successful walkers of the Path of nod is high priority personell in the world" etc.

"The rise of Monarchs and Lords" going on among "those walking the Templar path"; new "long term world leaders on the rise".

Anyone can go "from peasant to Lord" with enough dedicated efforts; if you're interested in "Real World Leadership".

The Qayinite path is "The Harshest but Most Rewarding" spiritual path in the world btw; being "The path with the highest tier of potential gains; but also the harshest testings".

See for example Pesha 1 quotes; >>41953710

"manifesting Him as the Saint of all those that do not belong to the world of man and instead walk the Path of the Dragon, as One Against All, going against nature for the sake of the return back to the Unbound Source Knowing No Thought of Restriction and Accepting No Laws but those that aid to liberate the Black Flame Within."

It's the path you want to walk if you're "Aspiring Spiritual World Elite"; if you're ready for a "world unique lifestyle that leads you Outside of Eden before the masses; leading you to have the highest tiers of comprehension on what's going on in the world in the background before others; and the Highest tier of 'pre-knowledge' of 'the times to come' in advance".

"insider info stuff"; "spiritual elite tier intel".

"Hence much is expected of the practitioners that would consider themselves fit for the Traversing of the 52 Stations of the Crosses of Nod, and where details and instructions seem to have been left out they have been so intentionally, as those that Know will read between the lines and fill in the gaps by the way of their own Insights, gained via Direct Experiences with our Qayinite Necrosophic Current and will thus possess the keys needed for the unlocking of the doors that we have seemingly left closed."

"This safeguarded approach in connection to the giving out of the Esoteric Points presented within this book ensures that even if all virtues are placed within the reach of the Faithful, still nothing but the curses are allowed to befall those pretenders that seek only to exploit what we offer, instead of striving to be of gain and strength for the Spirit we work for and through."

"There are thus many traps laid upon the path ahead, many snares that shall catch the unfit and bind the unworthy, while at the same time allowing safe passage to those pure of heart and strong of Spirit."

May each of us be justly judged by Qayin, Qalmana and the Legions of Nod, so that Their sentences befall us all in accordance with our true intentions, thoughts and most importantly our deeds.

In Hoc Signo Vincas, aut Vincéris!

Amen."

Direct information on the "Apocalypse direct meetups of those spiritually connecting during The Great Awakening" through the Liber Falxifer 3 system; it conveys all the direct information required to make Real World Contact (for example which real world cities to meet up in) for those planning on meeting up during the Apocalypse with the beings they have made Spiritual Contact with during these periods.

The Liber Falxifer 3 Cross Station path leads to all the direct guidance you need to know "when and where to meet the Life partners you have spiritually connected with".

Exact meetup-places (different geographical Key locations for different groups) for groups who have connected spiritually to "the same endgame/apocalypse plans" is conveyed through Praxis of the Cross Stations.

Through praxis of said system you'll find direct guidance on the path towards "whichever Apocalypse destination you've spiritually connected to".

Good connection found between Death Guard and beelzebub/Aogiel Qlipha; "The Lord of the Flies" and "The Hinderers".

The spiritual systems in LF3 guides together "those who have spiritually found people of similar Caste/class going towards the same tiers of reality in 'Rapture'; ie 'different Rapture groups'; after the Apocalypse the world will be 'several separate different worlds'".

Said path connects people towards "different key-locations in the world; gathering hubs of people of the same crews";

If you're romantically involved with the real Beelzebub you are likely joining "the real Royal Group"; if so you are likely a "Queen or princess".

You're likely affiliated with "The Naamah Aspect of Azerate" if you have real romantic relations going with the actual "Beelzebub/Azerate/Qayin".

If so you're moving towards "the highest group in the universe" during the Apocalypse; being "One man (The Highest Dragon) and many women; spiritually planning on living together in group").

If so, also study if you have correlations to "Qalmana"; being "Qayin" in female variable.

"Qayin" is "one singular real world man"; while 'Qalmana' is 'Several Female Variables of the same being as Qayin, in Female Lives".

a lot of the women in the world are "Q in female lives" (like majority of Porn-stars and similar attractiveness women are literally Qayin in female lives); practitioners of the path also learn how to "start additional lives in opposite gender format",

Shachor 12: "Qayin Baal ha-Ateret ha-Esh Shachor" mentions:

"Thus the numerical formula of the Azothanic Transcendence of the Qayinite is also here disclosed where Azoth in its worldly state is shown to need a Doubling Union, or Marriage of Spirits, which is the Unfated Atazothic Addition of and from the Other, mimicking the union of Qayin's Spirit with that of Qalmana"

Beelzebub often shows me synchronicities pairing green with purple when i think of our relationship. all i've wanted since he and i hit it off in the astral and had freaky astral sex is to be either with him by his side or in his service, whatever he would prefer. he seems to have direct control over my heart and my arousal

i've often felt as though i was purpose-built to be his bride

Use Liber Falxifer 3's Cross station system to connect more firmly with Beelzebub.

During the Apocalypse people will have "additional assistance by Military to move the last part of their path" for those who haven't manually found the correct geographical meeting places btw.

In the end everyone in the world will find their way towards meeting up with those they have found "mutual spiritual connections with", during the Apocalypse; Military will assist during the final period for those who haven't manually found direct connections towards the correct meeting places yet.

He has a tattoo on his chest that reads "No Second" in a stylized font, and there are additional tattoos on his arms and neck. The man is wearing sunglasses and a choker around his neck. The background is dark, emphasizing the subject.

On the right, we see a close-up of a character's face with a red, swirling tattoo that covers the upper half of his face. His eyes are glowing red, and he has a fierce expression. The character is wearing a black hooded cloak and has a large, ornate tattoo on his chest. The background is also dark, with a hint of a wall or wall-like structure.

yes; at the Apocalypse; Military infrastructural movement will handle "the rest of infrastructural movements towards the endgame Fortress/Ark you're spiritually invited to/homing in on".

Military personell btw is a type of "infrastructural unit type personell"; a vast majority of Military is "non-real human"; rather "spirits presenting as human"; a type of "infrastructural spiritual unit type personell".

So Military personell handles the last part of the movement for those who haven't manually managed to find their ways towards their "Apocalypse End-game destination" before that.

At the apocalypse people are sort of "automatically moved towards their Ark destination by Military type infrastructural personell" (based on spiritual strategy games and/or whatever you have been invited to spiritually; ie by "mutual two-way interests").

Shachor 11: "Qayin Baal Orebmoth":

"The eleventh Cross-Seal of the Dam Lahat wa-Aur Shachor Line is that of the Lord of the Ravens of Death, the Conferrer of the Wings of Dispersion and the Monarch of the Legions of Black Venus, being the transcendent aspect of the Master Qayin that has assumed in His/Their traversing of the Path of Reversal and Return the Throne of Oreb Zaraq"

"Such workings transcend the simpler forms of our Necrosophic sorceries and must be accomplished within the settings of the Qliphothic Work proper, as for example disclosed in the Book of the Dragons of the Other Side, as one must remember that these Final Stations of Nod are no longer within this side, nor have they ever been, and thus the means to access them will be less akin to the witchcraft established by Qayin's and Qalmana's toiling in this world and attained instead through Their Points of Becoming transcending it, thus the Necrosophic approach must here leave way for the Chaosophic, or more correctly Ainsophic, ones and as such unfold more in line with the ceremonial approach of the Baal Shem ha-El Acher, knowing the names and letters of the Other Side and the ways and means through which such Divine Silencing Forces are communed with and manifested."

The image displays a page from a book or publication, featuring text and symbols. The text is in a language that appears to be Latin or a similar script, and it is written in a serif font. The page is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the text and the right column featuring a circular symbol with various symbols and numbers. The symbol is a pentagram, which is commonly associated with the occult and esoteric.

The text on the left column is in English and discusses the "Chronic Stal and Holy Key of Satan." It mentions the "Chronic Stal" as a "Black Light," "Throne of the Black Light," and "Throne of the Black Light of Satan." It also refers to the "Chronic Stal" as a "Black Light of Thunders," and the "Throne of the Black Light of Thunders" as a "Black Light of Thunders." The text also discusses the "Chronic Stal" as a "Black Light of Thunders," and the "Throne of the Black Light of Thunders" as a "Black Light of Thunders."

The right column contains a circular symbol with a pentagram at its center, surrounded by various symbols and numbers. The symbol is a pentagram, which is a five-pointed star. The text on the right column is in Latin and is not fully visible, but it appears to be discussing the "Ophidian Serpent and the Serpent of the Serpent," and the "Serpent of the Serpent" as "Serpent of the Serpent."

The overall style of the image is academic and formal, typical of a book or publication that deals with esoteric or occult topics. The symbols and the text are arranged in a way that guides the reader's eye from the left column to the right column, which is a common layout for such texts. The image is in black and white, which may suggest a historical or vintage context.

The image is a digital composite of two distinct elements. On the left side, there is a white computer monitor with a sleek, modern design. The monitor is attached to a white stand, and there is a cable running from the stand to the monitor, suggesting that the monitor is powered on and connected to a computer system.

On the right side of the image, there is a plush toy resembling a humanoid figure. The figure is wearing a golden headdress with a large, circular face, which is adorned with a detailed pattern. The headdress is embellished with what appears to be a golden crown or diadem. The figure also has a red garment with a black collar, and it is holding a small, round object in its right hand.

The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the objects and makes them stand out. There are no texts or additional graphics present in the image. The style of the image is a blend of digital art and a real-life object, creating a surreal and whimsical scene.

I have a question OP. Im reading through the second book and I have a few questions. So now im seeing that the creator of the books is teaching/espousing a form of satanic driven gnosticism with The Lord of Death as the seed of Satan and uses the bibles creation story of Abel/Qayin(Cain.) The beginning of book 2 mentioned something like "this isn't necessarily to be taken as a literal creation story but as a parable" much as how the bible isnt made to be taken literally. So here's the question (questions)

How much is to be taken literally? How much does the founder want to espouse as truth? If its a metaphor, whats the true meaning? If Book 2 is only a metaphor, does that mean that the systems and rituals and magical works in book 1 are also a metaphor? I would like to begin practicing some of the rites and rituals in book 1 but are those rituals just a metaphor for something deeper?

Not OP, but Current 218 is the more strictly Kabbalistic/Clippotic current, while Current 182 is more the folk magic current. They are combined under the 2182 current and are both needed to fulfill the goals of the TotBL. Relevant texts for 182 are the Liber Falxifer books, while the texts for 218 are Liber Azerate and The Book of Sitra Achra. The Liber Azerate is considered out of date by most though. It is heavily influenced by O9A teachings and has outdated methods of communion. The Book of Sitra Achra is the more accurate.

I should also add that Nathan of Gaza's teachings directly influenced the cosmology of 218. Treaties on Dragons is quite important, though you'll have to translate from Hebrew or try to find an accurate translation of it, though that can be hard.

<https://www.alibris.com/search/books/isbn/9798645697884>

This is the only translated copy I know of, however, the translator has been known to be a bit of... let's just say performative. He claims to be a Sabbatean Frankist, and likes to imply he is Sabbati Zevi reincarnated. Though, he does have a video about The Book of Sitra Achra and says that it is very accurate to Nathan of Gaza's teachings. That video is unfortunately deleted now.

Sometimes ritual text is "analogy/Code language" for other uses than "what's stated literally". You'll notice with time.

There's probably interesting lore correlations; wouldn't surprise me.

Not an expert at the Vampire bloodlines the masquerade setting personally, but "The Masquerade" is a real thing going on in the world;

"Qayin being at the top of a "background Shadow Empire that is only noticed by those with the correct knowledge" is common repeating lore in different settings; also see "Kane in Brotherhood of Nod"; in Command and conquer games (tiberian sun etc)".

The diagrams are arranged in two rows, with three diagrams in each row. Each diagram consists of a series of interconnected lines and shapes, some of which are connected by arrows, suggesting a flow or transformation of energy or matter.

In the top row, from left to right, the first diagram shows a series of lines and shapes that form a complex pattern, with a central point that seems to be a point of focus or transformation. The second diagram in the top row is similar in design, with a similar central point and a series of lines and shapes that seem to be converging or diverging. The middle row starts with the first diagram on the left, which is similar to the first but with a different central point and a different series of lines and shapes. The second diagram in the middle row is also similar to the first, with a central point and a series of lines and shapes converging or diverging.

The bottom row starts with the first diagram on the left, which is similar to the first but with a different central point and a different series of lines and shapes. The second diagram in the bottom row is similar to the first, with a central point and a series of lines and shapes converging or diverging.

Each diagram is accompanied by a title in the top left corner, which reads "a) Rekh Symbolism for Death Rekh" and "b) Exoteric Rekh for Death Rekh". These titles suggest that the diagrams are related to the symbolism and esoteric meanings of the word "Rekh" in the context of death magic or alchemy. The diagrams themselves do not contain any text or symbols that are not part of the visual representation.

The image displays a collection of six black and white illustrations, each depicting a symbol or glyph. The symbols are arranged in a grid format, with three rows and two columns. Each symbol is accompanied by a title in a smaller font size, which appears to be a transcription of the symbol's name. The titles are as follows:

1. "By the Star Bearer to the Celestial"
2. "By the Star Bearer to the Celestial"
3. "By the Star Bearer to the Celestial"
4. "By the Star Bearer to the Celestial"
5. "By the Star Bearer to the Celestial"
6. "By the Star Bearer to the Celestial"

The symbols themselves are intricate and feature various shapes and lines, including stars, crescent moons, and other geometric and organic forms. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional esoteric or magical art, often used in the practice of magic or divination. The overall style of the image is simple and clean, with a focus on the symbols and their titles.

The image is a black and white photograph featuring four different symbols, each with a unique design and text. The symbols are arranged in a grid format, with two rows and two columns.

The bottom row starts with the first symbol labeled "Qwem Raite de Réveil" and the second is labeled "Qwem Raite de Réveil." The third symbol is labeled "Qwem Raite de Réveil" and the fourth is labeled "Qwem Raite de Réveil."

Each symbol is composed of a series of interconnected lines and shapes, with some lines forming a cross or a pentagram, and others forming a star or a circle. The text accompanying each symbol is in a different font and style, suggesting that they are likely names or titles of the symbols. The overall style of the image is formal and academic, with a focus on the intricate details of the symbols and the text.

The image is a page from a book or publication, featuring text in a serif font. The text is in English and is divided into two columns. The left column is titled "The 12 Princesses of the Olyphothic Zodiac," and the right column is titled "The 12 Princesses of the Olyphothic Zodiac." The text is written in a formal and academic style, discussing the characteristics of the 12 Princesses of the Olyphothic Zodiac.

The left column begins with a heading that reads "The 12 Princesses of the Olyphothic Zodiac," followed by a paragraph that provides information about the Princesses. The right column begins with a heading that reads "The 12 Princesses of the Olyphothic Zodiac," and continues with a paragraph that discusses the characteristics of the Princesses.

The text is in a serif font, which is commonly used for formal and academic writing. The page number "12" is visible at the top of the right column, indicating that this is the second page of the text. The overall style of the image suggests that it is a page from a book or publication, possibly related to astrology or a similar field, given the mention of the Olyphothic Zodiac.

Benny the Helpful Potato

In a quiet garden filled with tall sunflowers and buzzing bees, a potato named Benny grew beneath the soil. Benny was round and cheerful, and he loved listening to everything happening above him.

He heard the bees humming as they worked.

He heard the wind brushing through the leaves.

He even heard the soft footsteps of the gardener as she watered the plants.

Benny wished he could help the garden somehow. The tomatoes grew tall and proud. The carrots kept the soil neat and tidy. The herbs filled the air with wonderful smells. Benny wondered what he could do.

One morning, Benny felt a tiny tap on his skin. A small earthworm peeked in beside him.

"Hello," the worm said. "I am lost. I cannot find my tunnel."

Benny brightened. "I can help you. Follow my roots. They will guide you back."

The worm wriggled along Benny's roots until it found its tunnel again. It waved happily before disappearing into the soil.

Later that day, a beetle scurried by in a hurry.

"I dropped my seed," the beetle said. "I cannot carry it alone."

Benny gently shifted in the soil, nudging the seed closer. The beetle cheered and carried it away.

As the sun set, Benny felt proud. He might not stand tall like the sunflowers or smell sweet like the herbs, but he could help in quiet ways.

The next morning, the gardener knelt beside the potato patch. She touched the soil above Benny and smiled.

"This spot feels healthy," she said. "Something good is happening here."

Benny glowed inside. He knew he had made a difference.

From that day on, the garden creatures visited Benny whenever they needed a little help. He became known as the potato with the kind heart, always ready to lend a gentle push or a guiding root.

And if you ever dig in a garden and find a potato resting peacefully in the soil, it might be a potato like Benny, listening closely and waiting for a chance to help.

Keep in mind, San la Muerte is an exoteric form and "Spiritually Overtaken" symbol for Qayin. Sort of a "springboard" for the manifestation of His current.

Give what you can when you can; the most important part (if you feel the call to this Current) is to do what you can with what you have. Of course, you will want to put in maximal effort with what you do in this Current, but if you don't have everything you need then work with what you have.

I would advise against putting statues on whatever altar you are using until you decide that this is a lifelong commitment you're willing to take and go through with the Ablution Ritual. Draw His first sigil, activate it with His calling formula and spray liquor and blow smoke upon it. Serve what offerings you have on that.

I've made the decision about two years ago, before I came to read book one. Being once baptized in the Roman catholic faith, I performed a personalized cord cutting/covenant breaking unbaptizing with personally made baptismal water in the name of The Holy Death which took me a few months to make (what with the planing and the moon cycles.) I forsake the religions and traditions of my forefathers and now only wish to serve Our Holy Death and whatever that may entail. I'm not sure where the books are taking me and that very well may be in the path of Qayin but one thing I hold for certain is that I understood from that day on that there is absolutely no turning back or all that I hold dear in this life will turn to ashes before my eyes. I'm just relieved that there's a system to explore and read upon about PROPER veneration. Before I just knew I was born under His shadow but had no guidance circles and lines, forming a symmetrical design that resembles a tree or a mandala. The text on the pages is in English and is divided into two columns. The left column contains a paragraph of text, while the right column contains a section titled "A Brief on the Tree of Life."

The illustration depicts a stylized figure with a crown on its head, a sun-like emblem in the center, and a serpent-like creature with a trident in its right hand. The figure is surrounded by a crown, a sun, and a crescent moon, which are all part of the same emblem. The text on the left page is in Spanish and lists various names and titles, such as "El libro," "El libro de la muerte," "El libro de la vida," "El libro de la muerte," "El libro

The text in the left column is not fully visible, but it appears to discuss the concept of the Tree of Life, which is a central theme in various spiritual and philosophical traditions. The right column, on the other hand, is titled "A Brief on the Tree of Life" and includes a section titled "The Tree of Life: A Brief Overview." This section seems to provide a brief introduction to the concept of the Tree of Life, likely explaining its significance in various spiritual and philosophical systems.

The style of the image is academic and formal, with a focus on the text and the intricate design of the pattern. The layout is typical of a book or publication, with the text and illustration presented in a way that allows for easy reading and comprehension. The image is in grayscale, with the text and pattern in black against a white background, which helps to highlight the details of the design.

From an interview with N.A-A.218, author of the Liber Falxifer series and magister of the T.F.C.:

"5. There seems to be a confusion made between San la Muerte and Santisima/Santa Muerte amongst those not versed in the Latin American forms of sorcery and some people have misinterpreted your work as being connected to the Mexican Cult of the Death Goddess, while it is clearly stated in the first Falxifer Book that the folk magical aspect of your work is centred around the Argentinean cult of Señor San la Muerte, could you please give us your comment concerning this topic?"

Our Work, as presented within the Falxifer books has nothing to do with the Cult of Santisima Muerte and as you mention, she is a female Saint and belongs to a whole other tradition than the Argentinean one we presented in the first section of Liber Falxifer. Santisima Muerte is in no way connected to our Qayinite Work and is a Spirit venerated separately within her own line of practice.

San la Muerte and Sancte Qayin are the ones that hold connections to each other within our own Tradition's esoteric Crossing of the Paths of the Lord of Death and it is those two male Saints that we presented within our writing and not the female Santa/Santisima Muerte of Mexico.

People need to be more attentive to that which is actually written instead of causing confusion for themselves and others; as such confusions can end very badly within these contexts."

The image is a page from a book or publication, specifically a section titled "The Eighth Station D'brech de Jeug," which translates to "The Eighth Station of the Youth." The text is in English and appears to be discussing a topic related to esoteric or mystical practices. The page is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the main text and the right column featuring a symbol or emblem.

The main text is in a serif font and is written in English. It discusses the concept of the Cross-Seal of the Quina Line, which is a symbol associated with the Quina Line, a line of the Quina Lineage. The text mentions that the Cross-Seal is a symbol of the Quina Lineage, and it is associated with the Monarch of Outlaws and the Master of the Masterless, who are the rulers of the Quina Lineage. The text also refers to the Monarch of Outlaws and the Master of the Masterless as the "Lawless King," and it discusses the Monarch of Outlaws and the Master of the Masterless as the "Lawless King" and the "Lawless King."

The right column features a symbol that appears to be a stylized cross with a crown on top. The symbol is accompanied by a text that reads "The Cross-Seal of Quina Lineage." The text is in a smaller font size compared to the main text and is also in English.

The page number "178" is visible at the bottom of the page, indicating that this is a part of a larger document or book. The overall style of the image is academic and formal, typical of a scholarly or religious publication.

Pretty sure Santa Muerte cults are in reality under Pesha Line leadership; ie under the protections and such of the Pesha tradition (offering a type of real legal protection for Outlaw movements; being put legally "outside of standard legal jurisdiction" based around a bunch of pacts and treaties).

ie the sort of stuff that requires "additional Legal expertise from law enforcement personell when interacting with".

From what I can see they have said kinds of "Pesha Tradition specific guidance and protection".

More specifications of said Pesha tradition and its "additional rights and such" are explained in the Pesha Line cross station sigils; for example pic related; Pesha 8.

Also described in the Bible as "the founder of the first cities upon the earth".

See the bible quote in >>41956251

It's not like the Qayinites are new to the world.

These books originated to begin with from "the same being who is called Qayin/Cain in the book of Genesis"; it's not a "man-made" system.

The books have to begin with also always been "supernaturally generated";

"N.A-A.218" for example isn't a "physical human writing books by hand", but rather a "current 218/182 Grimoire generating Spirit".

Something I've noticed, correct me if I'm wrong, is that the essences behind the names are reversed from more mainstream Gnostic systems. For example, many Gnostics call the Demiurge 'Satan', yet Current 2182 would obviously not identify the Demiurge with Satan. Satan would be the enemy of the Demiurge in this case. This kind of vocabulary makes more sense to me than the vocabulary of traditional Gnosticism.

Trees and mountains definitely are the greatest form of spiritual meaning of which you can easily relate to. All others relate a level of rational decision making and testing which can take a long time for a correct assessment to be made. But nature never fails since it tune you into the spontaneous world which the world has forgotten about and tried to manufacture a fake environment through cities and so what.

The goal is to stop thinking. Just focus on taking long slow breaths. You don't need to pray, but if you want you can repeat a mantra from any religion you believe in or if not then just a philosophical mantra would work. Ideally you would just listen to your natural surroundings. Try to get into the mindset that everything around is music. If you have trouble with that or your surroundings are particularly disturbing there is a huge variety of meditation music. If you only have 10-20 minutes to meditate at a time it can be hard to get settled in. I would recommend just getting a little work out in. The perfect time to meditate is when you are pretty worn out. You would notice much greater benefits if you take an hour after work to meditate.

For meditation I usually focus on staying present and not letting my thoughts wander.

What do you hear? What do you see? What do feel? What do you smell? What do you taste? What are you thinking?

Then repeat and focus on answering these all at once. Stay in the moment and if you have distracting thoughts, acknowledge them but don't follow them.

What do you hear? What do you see? What do feel? What do you smell? What do you taste?

You're just guiding yourself back to the senses to stay present. It's an exercise in focus that allows your mind to ground itself.

Here's the thing. Our body is controlled by our nervous system. But there's one part of that nervous system we don't have conscious control of and it affects everything from your heart rate to contraction of muscles you don't know you have.

The one and only way to interact with your autonomic nervous system is through the amygdala, a part of your brain responsible for emotional process. If you can control your emotions by grounding yourself in the present, you can gain indirect control of what the autonomic nervous system is doing.

It's very sad when your expectations or desires (or dissatisfactions) in life cross the line into the realm of possibility (and it's especially frustrating if they weren't "special" but rather simple and accessible) and no one has done anything about it yet... miracles are unknown.

Probably, if people were offered a choice, millions, or at least a significant portion of them, would take it. And all that remains is despondency.

A copy of an executable consciousness is just a copy.

>>41982320

There is a sort of metaphysical light body you can activate and use to transport your consciousness into its other form. It won't be physical, but that might be better, your species might not even be human for all I know. You do it by allowing your love to reach your physical body, and that does something to the dna and makes you start feeling and hallucinating more and more that you are how you feel. Somewhat paradoxical in feeling. Its like the more you let your consciousness love your body, the more your opposite parts come into contact, the more you feel aroused, the more you feel like you are the female that your male body is trying to have sex with. Its both extremely gay and extremely heterosexual, its like trying to marry your body and soul together. At a certain level of awareness, you start seeing a multidimensional view of your body and dna, and thats when the hallucinations of your multidimensional nature starts taking over, and you see more of yourself manifesting into ethereal awareness.

I don't really know how to take the process all the way, as far as I can tell it actually makes you less physical and more metaphysical, rather than what you seem to want, which is to make your feelings more physical. This is like making your desire to physically manifest your feelings take a backseat to the actual metaphysical nature of said feelings, and allowing them to express what they actually are to you, rather than what you want them to be.

I've temporarily shapeshifted into various other forms of female life this way, ive seen other sorcerers who can shapeshift as well.

I heard one sorcerer explain it to me, that the male dragon spirit takes control of the female body and shapeshifts with itself by immensely pleasuring the female side of the consciousness until it manifests itself.

I can't say whether or not this will ever make you truly 'physically female', but I think the final outcome would actually be better than that.

That said,

Not the tranny OP but I get annoyed every time this question is asked. Sure in theory the world as it is could sate any emotional desire people have but practically it is impossible for most. For example I would like to change the world and fight back against the evil ruling it. Volunteering at a homeless shelter isn't going to cut it. In theory if I had several billion dollars or extreme charisma I could create the sort of change I would like to see. Practically I could never get rich or influential enough to do so (and all collective action is infiltrated). So yea I am pursuing the Occult instead.

Religion is basically self-purification with the aid of higher than human powers. This self-purification is much like cleaning tarnished silver: removing the old deposits that hide its true and natural brightness. This process must be voluntarily chosen and cannot be performed without a deep and sincere effort to change one's behaviour in accordance with one's original bright nature. Thus this purification process may be looked upon as salvation in the sense of saving oneself with the aid of higher help. The conventional concept of being "saved" (found in both Eastern and Western conventional institutions) by a mere verbal affirmation or assertion, is obviously in the light of the above facts a patent deception if taught to others as a true doctrine, and an equally sad self-deception on the part of any who have given it their credibility.

Religion is thus the hardest work that one can do and it requires sustained practice until the margin of safety is reached, before which point one could easily slip back down a too easy slope into the tarnished, groping and half-blind state of ineffective and/or baleful behaviour.

The image is a card from the Pokémon trading card game, featuring a character named Chatot. The card is predominantly white with a black border. At the top of the card, the name "Chatot" is written in bold black letters. Below the name, there is a depiction of Chatot with a large, colorful head and wings, and a smaller image of a character with a white face and gray hair. The character has a surprised expression.

The card has a text description in the center, which reads: "Disrupting Spy from your hand, you may turn when you get Chatot & from your hand, you may look at the top of your opponent's deck. Put them back on top of your opponent's deck in search and escape."

At the bottom of the card, there is a yellow banner with the text "Team Galactic's Pokemon" in black letters. The card also has a number "60" in the top right corner, indicating its value. The bottom left corner of the card has a small, circular logo with the text "Pokémon" in black letters. The card also includes a small, circular logo with the text "Team Galactic's Pokemon" in black letters.

The style of the image is typical of a Pokémon trading card, with a focus on the character and the text, designed to convey information about the card's abilities and features.

>As the foregoing healing, cleansing and transfiguration continues, a time field goes ahead of you on the Lion Path and creates harmony before you. Compare the old Navajo chant: "May beauty precede and follow your steps and be present on your right and left, above you, below you and all around you. May you be clothed in beauty." We recall also Byron's lovely and significant line, "She walks in beauty." But on the Lion Path, if we persevere on it, we ourselves, like the Great Goddess, our Divine Mother, shall walk in beauty too.

out over a vast landscape. The artist has chosen a realistic style, with attention to detail in the depiction of the clothing and the texture of the rocks. The color palette is muted, with a palette dominated by earth tones, which gives the scene a serene and contemplative mood. The sky is painted in soft, muted colors, suggesting either dawn or dusk. The horizon is visible in the background, and the sky transitions from a soft pink to a deeper blue as it recedes, indicating the time of day is either dawn or dusk. The overall composition and the choice of subject matter suggest that this painting is inspired by religious themes, possibly depicting a moment of prayer or reflection.

>What kind of wife would I be if I didn't try my best to be everything I want for him?

have you considered that 'being the best' for him might actually mean finding a way to be at peace with yourself?

if he loves you for the (you) he already sees, then he probably would want a wife who is happy and present, not a wife who is constantly in agony, feeling like a failure because she can't perform the impossible. by focusing so much on the one thing you can't give him in a biological child, i fear you may be overlooking the fact that you've already given him the person he chose to marry.

have you told him you feel this way? does he know that you feel like a failure as a wife because of this, or that you're looking into rituals and things to fundamentally change yourself? if he loves you as you say, he may truly be heartbroken to know that you think your form is something that needs to be fixed for him to truly love you i won't soapbox on religious things too much, but the materialists will probably always rule the material. there's little one can do about that without playing into their game, effectively toppling the hierarchy only to replace it with yourself. it's 'what comes after,' that counts, beliefs aside.

Take active steps towards it. The body can only do so much with only thought, but add things that align with your goal. Eating better, stretching, yoga, gym, etc.

I used this to become a body builder, yoga and all. Really slow down and feel every muscle, ligament, bone alignment, how they interact. Learn to feel all of it, then tell your body what to do to it.

It's not norse but you could try a blood sacrifice to Tezcatlipoca, he was the god of shapeshifters known as naguals. His own naguals Huehuecoyotl and Chalchiuhtotolin were considered to have the ability to change the fate of mortals and could be even better options. You'll want to cut your own skin, collect the blood on paper, and then burn that bloody paper as an offering. Your calves, earlobes, and penis are among recommended targets for the cutting because those are areas the Aztecs targeted when sacrificing their own blood. You may achieve better results with thorns or obsidian. Draw a picture of Cipactli and lay it face down beneath the bowl or plate you use to burn the blood offering. You might want to way for a day governed by Tezcatlipoca or his naguals, or a day considered auspicious for communing with the gods as recommended by this site: <https://www.azteccalendar.com/>

Using this method I temporarily lost 80%+ of my ability to sleep, which is a supernatural result.

You think yokozuna are just sumo champions. You are wrong. There is a second layer, a ceremony nobody talks about, a threshold beyond the dohyo. When a rikishi is promoted, they stop being athletes. They are assets. I've seen enough to know how deep it goes.

There is a ceremony hidden from cameras, from officials, from records. Only elders with no public history attend. Only certain handlers, the ones who never appear on official rosters, are present. This is where the oath is taken. The oath is not symbolic. Yokozuna do not swear to sport. They swear to something older, transnational, something that predates modern sumo.

It is a consumption cult, centered on the idea that vital essence must be taken to preserve authority. "Children" are mentioned, but this is not what outsiders think. The term refers to a population controlled from birth, trained to serve, renamed, reassigned, made nonexistent to anyone who might notice. Lower initiates get substitutes. Higher ones... do not.

The sport exists because it gives ritual legitimacy and allows obedience to be normalized. A yokozuna is trained from childhood to accept inevitability. That makes them perfect for induction. Publicly they are champions. Privately, they are vessels.

The leadership is Western, a dynastic pair hidden in postwar institutions. They do not appear twice under the same name. They do not care about sumo culture. They care about continuity and symbolism. Yokozuna represent stability without accountability. Retired ones disappear or become flawless public figures. No scandals. No memoirs. No deviation. That is not discipline. That is containment.

Watch the ceremonies. Watch the silence. Notice the traditions everyone swears by. Not all cults look like cults. Some look like something you have been watching your entire life and never questioning.

At the top of the card, the word "Timeloop" is written in white, and below it, the number "3" is visible. The card also includes text in a smaller font, which reads "Sorcery" in white and "You may pay an additional 5 mana you cast this spell. If you do, put this card on top of your library as it resists." The text is in white, contrasting with the blue background.

At the bottom of the card, there is a small logo that reads "Wizards of the Coast," indicating the manufacturer of the card. The card's design suggests it is a Magic card, and the text and symbols are typical of the game's artwork. The overall style of the image is clean and modern, with a focus on the card's design and the text.

This is so busted wtf. It's the famous Nexus of Fate combo that lead to the UWx T5feri deck dominating standard control shells for years. Except it has NO requirement to empty your library first. It's just a simple check - do you have 10+ mana? If so, win the game.

This would immediately replace a number of other combos across multiple formata.

Notably, Ux tron (I think it's simply U-tron nowadays) would run this over a slaver lock, and I would honestly prefer this to basically any other control ender just because of how hard of a lock it is.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a frog with a green body and a large, round head. The character is facing away from the viewer and appears to be gazing upwards at a bright, white star that is visible in the sky. The background is a dark, starry night sky with a gradient of blue and white hues, suggesting a night sky. The character's expression is one of awe or wonder, and it seems to be looking at the star with a sense of wonder or curiosity. The character is wearing a blue shirt, and the image is framed by a dark border, giving it a cartoon-like appearance.

There are no texts present in the image.

The image displays a stylized logo consisting of a circular shape with a black border. Within this circle, there are two intertwined symbols that form a crown. The upper symbol is a stylized letter "X" with a crossbar, and the lower symbol is a stylized letter "B" with a crossbar. The two symbols are connected by a line, forming a continuous crown. The style of the image is abstract and appears to be a logo or emblem. The use of black and white colors gives the image a classic and timeless feel. There are no texts or additional elements within the logo.

time travel to the future is possible, not sure about going to the past. but simply by going into space you time travel.

time is slower or faster in some parts of space. that twin astronaut who spent 6 months on the iss was tested and was biologically 9 minutes younger than his twin on earth.

if you go fast and far away from earth for many years, you could come back and find younger people are the same age as you back on earth, while for you only a certain amount of time has passed

On the left side of the image, the man has a large, intricate tattoo on his forehead, which includes a purple oval with a white outline and a small, circular design in the center. He is wearing a black suit with a white shirt and a gold chain around his neck. His hair is styled in a braided updo.

On the right side of the image, the man has a short, neatly combed hairstyle and is wearing a white shirt with a black tie. He has a small, neatly trimmed beard. Both men are smiling and looking directly at the camera. The background of the image is a yellow gradient with a pattern that includes green leaves and yellow circles. The style of the image is a portrait, with a focus on the subjects' expressions and hairstyles.

The image is a meme featuring two cartoon characters, one male and one female, from the video game series "Mario." The male character is wearing a blue outfit with a green hat and is seated at a desk with a computer monitor in front of him. The female character is wearing a purple outfit with a green hat and is also seated at the desk. Both characters have a serious expression and are looking at the computer screen.

The meme includes text overlaid on the image. The top text reads "DO THE IMPOSSIBLE SEE THE INVISIBLE ROW! ROW!!" and the bottom text reads "FIGHT THE POWER!!!" Both texts are in white with a black outline, and the text is arranged in a way that suggests a challenge or a battle.

The background of the image is a gradient of orange and yellow, which contrasts with the characters and the text, making them stand out. The overall style of the image is humorous and seems to be a playful take on the concept of "impossible" tasks or challenges.

The image is a still from a film or television scene featuring a man in a surprised or shocked expression. He has dark hair and is wearing a light-colored, possibly white, long-sleeved shirt with a collar. His right hand is raised, pointing towards the right side of the frame, and his left hand is extended outward, as if gesturing or drawing attention to something. The man's expression is intense, and his eyes are wide open, which suggests he is reacting to something unexpected.

In the background, there is a shelf filled with various items, including what appears to be CDs or DVDs. The shelf is against a plain white wall, and the lighting in the room is soft, casting a gentle glow on the man's face. The overall style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in a domestic setting, possibly a living room or a similar space.

Even though OP is a semi retarded fed becuase "looshing" "light/shadow work" and the "law of one" is real (not flat earth though) I would agree with both of you about nobody and semen retention. The truth about semen retention retards is they engage in tantric sex and constant edging. Theres no real health benefits to holding your semen besides building a bigger load for next time and maybe for lifting because of the extra testosterone. However theres also negative health benefits if you goon too much :/

In regards to the nobody general, look man it should've been obvious thats the feds trying to push a new religion, I'm not abrahamic but it's obvious the nobody is just another christ parallel and the elite seem to use abrahamic material or even follow it like

I could tell you what's probably the truth to "god" or "source", probably....and you still wouldn't accept it. But I'll at least tell you this much death is no different from closing your eyes to sleep and dream, only when you die you dream without a body. The image is a composite of two separate photographs. The upper half of the image features a close-up of a person's face, with a smile and a slight tilt of the head. The person appears to be a woman with short, wavy brown hair. She has a fair complexion and is wearing makeup, including eyeliner and lipstick. Her eyes are looking directly at the camera, and she has a slight smile.

The lower half of the image is a blurred background with a pixelated effect, suggesting that it is a digital image. The pixelation is uneven, with some areas appearing more detailed than others. There is a blue icon in the upper right corner of the blurred background, which is not clearly discernible due to the blur. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a digital artwork, with a focus on the person's face and the blurred background.

The foundation of purpose-driven karma and karmic debt.

The fact one will take God/Source's word for it is astonishing. The meaning of our actions are all made up, and the purpose of this life and its karma is arbitrary.

This will make a lot of new agers seethe and even those who aren't because nihilism scares them, but I don't see why it's bad that life doesn't have to have a inherent meaning or purpose.

The God/Source consciousness had to define it. It doesn't mean that is the only definition if our divided consciousness and ego can make one up too, including what I am saying right now. There's no end all be all.

Anyway, what I'm trying to say is that purpose-driven reincarnation is bullshit and the idea of "guides" guilt tripping you into incarnating into a life is a God desperate to find meaning in itself, which includes right now and this very moment.

Absurdity, yet we're all a product of it.

Extreme synchronicity.

A lot of supernatural phenomena can be experienced without revelation. You might see a ghost, but then within a few minutes, the reasonable and logical person will question what they actually experienced, they will question their senses. After all, the world is full of illusions and we must use skepticism and reason to navigate through it. It's very hard to accept a supernatural explanation if there's any room for doubt and so acceptance never really sticks.

But extreme recurring bouts of synchronicity, you can only ignore it for so long. It's not a one and done thing, it doesn't stop as fast as it starts. It continues, over and over, and you're forced to reckon with it.

To the right of the central figure, there is a second man with a neutral expression, wearing glasses and a hoodie. Above her, the curve is labeled "FINE-TUNING IS A GOOD ARGUMENT" with a percentage value of 55.5%. The text is overlaid on the image, providing a humorous commentary on the concept of fine-tuning. The meme is designed to convey a humorous and satirical take on the debate over the effectiveness of fine-tuning in certain contexts.

>The fine structure constant determines the strength of the electromagnetic force. If it were stronger fires and biofuel wouldn't work and so there would be no practical way of harnessing energy. If it were weaker fires would burn through all the wood and harnessing energy would also be impractical. It falls in a very narrow range needed for viable science.

>We use the cosmic microwave background radiation to discover how the universe works and that the big bang happened. Our ability to do this depends on the Baryon to photon ratio "which is just the ratio of the number of baryons (i.e., protons and neutrons) to that of photons (particles of light) per unit volume of space." The ratio is one to one billion which is precisely optimal for fine-tuning, representing a share of the parameter space at probability 1 in 1 billion.

>In particle physics, lots of things are in a narrow range important for discoverability. For instance, Collins originally thought his thesis was refuted by the Higgs Boson, and that it was outside of a narrow range needed for discoverability. He later, however, realized that he'd made an error in his calculation and that it was precisely ideal for discovery.

The image is a black and white photograph of a man with a mustache, wearing a suit and a white shirt. The man appears to be in his late 20s to early 30s. The photograph is taken from a side profile, and the man's gaze is directed straight at the camera. The background is plain and does not provide any additional context.

On the left side of the image, there is a text block with a list of bullet points. The text is in a serif font and is arranged in a column format. The list includes various topics such as "THE FUTURE OF SCIENCE," "THE FUTURE OF SCIENCE," "THE FUTURE OF SCIENCE," and "THE FUTURE OF SCIENCE." The text is in a smaller font size compared to the bullet points, and the list is not fully visible due to the cropping of the image.

The style of the image is reminiscent of a historical or educational document, possibly from an educational resource or a historical archive. The monochrome color scheme adds to the vintage feel of the image.

The "Out of Africa" bullshit contributes just as much to this problem. There's more than enough evidence to suggest that humans evolved separately in multiple places. The idea that we're all "homo sapiens" is ridiculous, we're different subspecies.

Archaeologists identify other extinct human subspecies through skull and teeth shape, but they don't apply that same standard to modern "homo sapiens."

Interestingly, this article leads to a 404 and can only be found on the wayback machine now.

Similar for me. What reinforces my belief in the supernatural is that all knowledge is technically blind faith. The Allegory of the Cave hits that point perfectly. Scientific materialism is just a system for measuring and calculating perceived data. It describes patterns in the shadows but doesn't prove what ultimately is. It's a method, not an ontology. You'll hear atheists like Neil deGrasse Tyson dismiss "the God of the gaps," arguing that what ancient people called God was just ignorance waiting to be filled by science. Fair enough. But the gaps aren't closed, not even close. Until they are (if that's even possible), science remains a framework we've constructed in the dark to stay productive, sane, and stable. It works, but working models aren't the same as final truth. Believing in something beyond strict materialism feels like trying to explain light to people who've only ever known darkness. If you glimpsed something outside the cave, you wouldn't have the language for it, and they wouldn't have the reference point to understand it. You'd barely understand it yourself, but you'd know you saw something.

If by supernatural you mean spiritual realities. I've been extremely receptive my entire life to guidance outside of myself and societal influences. I was basically forced to get into bitcoin in 2014 (still fucked up trading it, mostly broke now LOL, but it supported me for a long time in making spiritual gains). Also had an immediate knowing not to get vaccinated. As for direct, unexplainable personal experience I had Kundalini fireballs and intense spiritual energy activated during a Vipassana.

Last month I had a consciousness expansion experience after doing "The Great Work" where I successfully remembered why I incarnated, what my karma is, how to resolve it, and what the meaning of life is. There was a primal spiritual force outside of the ego me leading me during this experience. After those realisations my field of view temporarily turned panoramic ultra high definition and my range of vision extended 30% so I could see outside of my normal range. I also perceived the benevolent spirits guiding me in my third eye (felt like my mothers soul but that could be my mind grasping).

I was a lone spiritual seeker in a past life who kept the knowledge to himself and I felt incredibly bad about it after the life was over. I also had a bad experience with "evil energy" in either the same past life or another. I came to rectify this karma.

It's impossible to say which particular text is 100% right, but the fact they all have so many major similarities is enough synchronicities for me to know there's more to existence than our basic senses and most definitely are not just physical objects.

Somewhere on the Columbia River, not sure where. I took a bus to some random stop and got off.

Got off and walked on a highway for a while, then walked back.

Walked towards the river and found some train tracks and started walking. There was an access road so it was pretty easy.

Had a couple of religious books, zen bhuddhism and something muslim, and an nas new testament.

Walked along the road, got huge blisters on my feet. Didn't really get anything from the books.

In the new testament read something that struck me, "Don't worry about what you eat or drink, or what you wear, it will be taken care of."

I paraphrase.

I thought, "That is a provable statement" that it was something that wasn't reliant on intellectual bullshit, but practical.

I thought, here I am out in the ass end of nowhere, and if its true it is provable.

And if it isn't I can ditch this book in the river and never look back.

So, I thought about it. What it means to "not worry" but expect that "it" will be taken care of.

So by now I'm sitting out in the ass end of nowhere, walking and camping along this river away from everyone, with double blisters on my feet. Yes, once you get a huge ass blister on your foot, if you keep walking you will get a second blister. Wear good shoes or train your feet.

So, anyway, "not worrying" is an action. To "not worry" requires energy. It is literally actual faith. Not religious faith, but actual "not worrying" faith.

It puts you into contact with things outside of your meat brain. And you will never be the same, or accepted again.

Former fedora-tier hardcore atheist here

1. Cornucopia ME was my first real awakening that there's truly something paranormal or anomalous about our universe. A lot of MEs (Berenstain, etc) don't hold much water and can be explained through more mundane means, but there are a handful, like the Cornucopia or Dolly's braces, for which there is no satisfactory mundane / naturalistic / atheistic explanation.

2. Studying more about biology and evolution: natural selection & Darwinian evolution makes a lot of sense on some levels, but go small enough and far back enough, and eventually it stops making sense. For instance, the zipper mechanisms responsible for decoding DNA. There's a certain point where you're no longer in the fuzzy realm of "best environmental fit" and you're in the realm of binary "either this works or it doesn't, Y/N", and to my knowledge there is still to this day no satisfactory explanation or theory of how the very mechanisms that allow for natural selection (namely DNA/RNA replication) could themselves have evolved naturally, even given a massively long timespan. It just doesn't check out.

3. Once my heart was softened by the above two things, reading more about NDEs and psychic phenomenon from there started to really open my eyes up.

The UFO attacks in Colares Brazil during the 70s. Hundreds of people witnessed UFOs, they got attacked, they got injuries, they got photographs, the military launched an operation to investigate, people even died. It's undeniable proof of the reality of the supernatural, and for some reason I'm the only person on this board who talks about it. It drives me mad. When people ask for proof of UFOs they always respond with like a little light far off in the sky that can be proven to move in impossible ways when subject to extreme scrutiny, or a couple of guys with a wild story with maybe a gentle piece of physical evidence; both of these are pretty easy for normies and skeptics to dismiss or ignore because the tiny far off light doesn't affect anything and if you yourself aren't an expert on aircraft physics there are many debunkers who are happy to claim that they are, and the guys with a wild story are easy to dismiss as crazy people looking for attention because even if telling their story made their lives worse in every way and the mental illness explanation doesn't make sense for two people to the skeptic the meager 1% chance those people are lying for attention becomes 100% when you consider supernatural stuff to have a 0% chance of being real. And meanwhile the well documented Colares attacks and Operação prato are right there, unknown to the public, never discussed. It drives me nuts that no-one talks about it, I always bring it up when people talk about proof of the supernatural because it's impossible to ignore. I wonder if part of the reason it's so unknown could be that skeptics debunking and "debunking" supernatural events is one of the most common ways knowledge of these events spread, and that skeptics don't want to cover an event like this which is much harder for them to "debunk" for the public.

Long story. A book. On more than one occasion.

The titles;

Majestic by Streiber read in aug and sept 1991

Secret Weapons by Herscha read in summer 2001

Mk ultra not technically paranormal but the function of the multiple identity structures qualify.

Other than those two instances I had direct experience. Ghosts ..and some of the unusual physics involved in their ability to move matter, Bigfoot ..didn't see him but it passed overhead jumping through trees, Outside of body during "dream", Cognitive perception within the mind, etc.

I spent years with nearly full conscious awareness during a majority of the interactions with the beings from the stars, I found other beings that are present here co evolved with us who live absorbed into the ground just as our consciousness is absorbed into our physical bodies.. and spent several years fully conscious during the time my body was 'sleeping'

There was some kind of conflict in their realms and they left the area.. it's reasonable to hypothesize that they are still present elsewhere.. I am in a populated area so maybe they moved away from the human civilization.. but they have a very different relationship to physical material and they have technology to interact with it with physics properties that we are currently not yet aware of..

Only found them because I had become capable of remembering the entire time I was sleeping.. and that was due to several friends that had heritage in native American heritage groups

At this point I have far more experience than most..

The image is a color photograph capturing a moment from a wrestling match. In the center of the frame, a wrestler in a yellow and red singlet is in mid-air, appearing to be in the process of performing a move. The wrestler's right leg is extended upwards, and his left arm is extended forward, suggesting a powerful throw or jump. The wrestler's face is obscured by his mask, which is black with white stripes.

In the background, there is a blurred audience, indicating the focus of the image is on the two wrestlers. The background is dark, which contrasts with the brightly lit wrestlers, emphasizing their actions.

The image is framed by a white border, and there is a watermark text that reads "PSA/DNA" in the bottom right corner, indicating the authentication or certification of the photograph. The overall style of the image is dynamic and captures the intensity of the moment in the wrestling match.

I figured out how Bessler built his wheel.

It's not really all that complicated. Effectively it's a mobius Jacob's ladder in terms of the primary moving function.. that utilizes properties of inertia, improper rotation and the reflective functions of a pseudovector to reflect a portion of the ascending weight value of one of a pair of two masses suspended in a directionally confined rotating pendulum function during the rotation.

It has dawned on me that it doesn't seem to matter how much information you hand to someone who doesn't want to believe it is possible.. for them, it can't exist so it doesn't.

People who have not developed a connection to nature have an unnatural concept of what exists within it. A human declaration that nature is somehow unnatural is a self reflexive joke.

Human declarations of the existence of levels (i.e. super-natural) are actually a reflection of the limits of their own ability to perceive and comprehend.

When I was 7 8 9 I used to spend the entire day in the woods seeking to sneak up on and observe the Louisiana version of a Bigfoot.. named by the French.. a "rue"
It didn't seem to be that much more dangerous than what my father had done in Vietnam sneaking up close enough to watch chinese soldiers eating in the middle of the night. I never found them and I would turn around to go home once I found other human activity and construction.. or alligator domain. Then I had to move back to Germany where we lived with the daily reality of expectation that the former Soviet Union would be entering west Germany just as you saw them entering the Ukraine in recent years.

It was around the time I turned 19 when I finally got direct personal observation of Bigfoot.. and then it was in a populated area.. passing through by jumping from tree to tree.. faster than I could have run.. maybe 20 to 35 mph just jumping from tree to tree. Made each trunk sound like a wooden xylophone key.. and then only a tiny sound of leaves rustling as it moved into the next jump.

The spring is the means of containment of the pendulum function.. as if that wasn't obvious.. but it is also responsible for the redistribution of the weight value (across the perpendicular pseudovector of the wheel relationship to the field of gravity) and thus also the inversion of it into a negative value.. super efficient and clever.

The lateral motion of the pendulum function is the variable that is the source of the apparently excess energy which is actually delayed inputs of the gravity force effects of the two masses suspended in the configuration.

But yeah.. any 5th grader could probably figure it out

The image is a still from a video, showing a man seated at a desk in an office setting.

He is wearing a blue shirt and appears to be in his mid-40s. The man is smiling and looking directly at the camera, with a slight smile on his face. He is holding a pen in his right hand, which is resting on a piece of paper.

The desk in front of him is cluttered with various papers and binders. There are binders with visible text on them, and the binders are stacked on top of each other. The papers are spread out on the desk, with some appearing to be in a binder. The man is using a black marker to write on the paper.

Behind the man, there is a chalkboard with a wavy line drawn on it. The chalkboard is white with a black outline. The room has a white wall and a shelf with various items on it, including what appears to be a computer monitor and other office equipment. The lighting in the room is bright, and the overall atmosphere suggests a professional or academic environment.

The background of the image is a gradient of blue, transitioning from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom. The character's eyes are a light yellow color, and the rest of the face is a darker shade of yellow. The character's mouth is closed, and there are no visible teeth.

At the top of the image, there is a text overlay that reads, "AUTISM" in bold, capitalized letters. Below this, there is a question in a smaller font that reads, "Why Advertising Falls Flat in Individuals With Autism? What is a certain mindset and disability made you a sevrer consumer?"

At the bottom of the image, there is a text that says, "Please be patient I have autism." The text is in a smaller font size compared to the question above.

The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, using a character from a popular children's cartoon to make a statement about autism awareness. The meme uses a simple, cartoonish design to convey a serious message about autism.

Can we get GATE Program thread going? Mainly, I would like personal stories or stories that you know about someone being in GATE.

I'll start

>be me

>around 3rd grade

>me and my classmates were testing for the Gifted and Talented Education

>i didn't think i would be selected because i am not really a great student, but was read above my grade level >they test for basic iq and reading comprehension

>i didn't think anything was weird about that >they complement my reading comprehension >feelsgoodman.exe

>then they tested my hearing

>weird but okay

>it started out normal; beeping sounds coming from the left and right ear and sometimes both >they tested my hearing ability for a long time >the beeps frequency started getting higher and lower >it is getting difficult to tell but i try my best because it seemed like a game >they tested me longer than the other students; it lasted for around 10 minutes >the test ends and i go back to class >several days go by and i was selected for the program >asked other classmates if they were selected >none of them were, not even the really smart kids >excited because it made me feel special it's weird because i don't remember how i got to the testing center or where it was at, so i will skip it. i think it was still at my school but to a room that i have never been at. anyways...

>was in a room with 2 people >i was expecting really hard homework >they had me drink a pink liquid and put on headphones >umokay.png >drink the pink liquid >it was whatever >put on the headphones and watch the tv they put in front of me >they told me to just relax and focus on meditating >i do so >headphones have ocean sounds >the tv plays ocean waves going back and forth >nothing happens at first >then 5-10 minutes go by >i started to feel really good now that i am older, i can only describe it to an opiate high >feel like i am floating >feel like i am at a beach

>they assure me that it is okay and that anything that i experienced is a good thing >i was then honest and told them how it felt like i was transported to a beach and how it felt almost felt like i was on a different planet >they are happy with that response and let me return to class >i was very happy because i basically was allowed to sleep instead of study in class >went home and told my mother about what happened >she decided to not let me return >mainly because she didn't like how i was watching tv instead of studying since my grades were Cs, but a little because it sounded weird but that wasn't the deciding factor.

The image is a candid photograph of a person drinking from a large, white jug of Clorox disinfectant. The person has curly hair and is wearing a green shirt. The jug is labeled with the Clorox logo and the word "CLEAN" in red and white. The person is holding the jug to their mouth, with the nozzle facing upwards, as if they are drinking from it. The background is a plain, light-colored wall. The style of the image is informal and seems to capture a spontaneous moment.

I got placed into a reading class, sort of as an elective. For some people the class was remedial. Because I was already able to read at a high reading comprehension level for me it was a speed reading etc class.. l9ts of reading material and equipment.. film speed projectors etc.

Because the teacher would let me, I would stay in the classroom alone during lunch and read everything. I read all of the test cards at every level for the other reading levels of the other students in the class. I read everything on film for every level. I read novels and other literature that was from the curriculum material for all the other reading levels and even most of the elective optional extra credit reading materials in the classroom.

During that time I noticed that I was able to see auras.. not so much around other people but around the writing on physical books.. if the words had been read by someone else before me I would occasionally be able to see something like an aura staining the page around the words. For books that had never been opened it wasn't present. For books that had been issued to students through previous years I could discern that multiple staining periods had occurred and even see different degrees of focus.. just in certain lighting it was faintly visible and eventually I noticed it.

I was not in gate specifically but had been subjected to trauma based conditioning and other aspects of the mk ultra type programs.

I 'did this' when I was in primary school.

I was really into drawing and art and could pick things up quite easily and generally 'got' new concepts and could anticipate ideas and analyse well. I was also massively emotional and would have little tizzes a lot.

I remember another similar boy and a girl (she was quite shy and unpopular) doing it. We'd go up to the high school, sit in a room, do IQ-like tests. Lots of pattern recognition, optical illusions, and writing prompts. I also remember hearing tests - if you're Australian, they reminded me of a beep test you'd do in phys ed classes.

I was clearly a dud though because they stopped inviting me after a few years and now I work an unremarkable job and am mostly bang average intelligence. I am very smarmy and aloof, though. That also seems to be a trait...

At the top of the image, there is a question in bold text that reads, "Who remembers these from elementary school?" accompanied by five emojis. That shit all sounds familiar to me, also that pink liquid some other anons mentioned, but I'm pretty sure I was just sick. They also had me hopped up on ADHD meds, so I think that might have been all that it was. I was misdiagnosed anyway. Who knew that my hag teacher just didn't want to deal with an energetic kid. It's been so long, honestly. I was in GATE for 4th and 5th grade, then it turned into Pre-AP (Advanced Placement) and AP classes in Jr. High and High School.

I think they had us do a Meyers-Briggs Personality Test in 4th grade, and I wound up as an INTJ. I don't remember taking an IQ test, but the subjects we studied were just above the level of regular classes.

I didn't notice anything out of the ordinary, but it warped my perception of intelligence pretty drastically. Teachers said I was the smartest in the class, and often favored me despite my laziness, but upon entering the social, druggie world, my intelligence felt very stunted and I started to go crazy (schizophrenia).

I probably should've done more than just watch cartoons and play video games to then blow past the tests, but I prefer a life of leisure than one of accomplishment, so probably I don't think the system failed me as much as I believe that I'm a natural fuck up.

nah, anon. i think that you had your priorities straight. you focused more on living in the now and didn't worry about social status. the only thing that you should have done different is find a hobby that you really liked and get a career in it. for example, i thought hacking was cool, so i decided to learn that and get a job in IT. now i think robots are cool, so i am studying that now.

to be honest though, it is my goal to buy some land and learn to be self sustaining in the middle of no where. and i could focus on me the entire time.

The image is a screenshot of a Twitter conversation. The conversation is about a program called "GATE" and its effectiveness in helping people with dissociative disorders. The text is in English and is divided into two columns. The left column is a tweet, and the right column is a tweet with a link to a website.

The tweet on the left column is from a user named "Kikura" and is dated 14th. The tweet is about the program's effectiveness in helping people with dissociative disorders. It mentions that the program is designed to help people who can't dissociate, and it's because they realized that people who can dissociate have fallen into the ESH (Excessive Shame) category. The user also mentions that the program is not designed to help people who are already in the ESH category.

The tweet on the right column is from a user named "Kikura" and is dated 14th. The tweet is a link to a website, which is titled "Dissociative Identity Disorder (DID) - Effects of Dissociative Identity Disorder (DID) on the brain and body." The website provides information about dissociative identity disorder (DID) and its effects on the brain and body.

The image also includes a timestamp in the tweet, which is 14:04. There are also two emojis in the tweet, one of which is a red heart and the other is a blue heart. The emojis are used to indicate a positive sentiment or emotion.

Yeah for ADHD, I don't necessarily think I was involved with any GATE stuff, but a lot of the tests mentioned ITT are familiar, and being medicated really fucked me up keeping me locked in with my inhibitions and never sleeping. Plus there's that odd bit where I can hardly recollect anything from ages 7-10, besides summer when I was off those meds. Then again, maybe the psychiatry and meds were all part of that. When I was about 16 I decided that I had enough with it with the belief that it was all bullshit, and later in life for my flight physical I had to get a psych eval which confirmed my intuition. What a bullshit lie they sold to our parents man. Millennials and zoomers were the first generations with both parents largely being dual income, and then they treated our unchecked energy like a disease. The same case is with my half sister who is way worse off with that poison my mom gives her, despite my warnings. I'm just glad I achieved some form of self

>Was that around the age of 13 to 23?

I became a little loopy whenever I started taking psychedelics at 18, but it was manageable despite my erratic behavior. I didn't suffer a complete implosion of sanity until 23-24, then again at 31. (I'm 32 now) I'm on medication now, though, so I don't live under the spell that life will just magically work out despite reckless activity, a belief that had consumed me until everything went to complete shit.

Thanks, that makes me feel a bit better. My family expects a lot out of me and has these weird delusions that I'm some godsend uber-genius, when my most recent IQ test has me at only a 118, so I'm nothing remarkable.

As for the hobby, I used to be a pretty good writer, often scoring perfect marks in English tests where I would just bullshit a story, so that's what I wanted to do with my life, but that didn't pan out. I barely write now, so I don't see that as going anywhere.

>to be honest though,

That's a pretty cool plan, honestly. Very respectable. Currently I'm just looking for a part time job to help supplement my income. I get disability payments every month, but it's not enough to live off completely. I'm totally fine in living in my decent apartment with few friends and reading/playing video games/watching TV. The only thing that irks me though is the inability to find a partner. I gained a lot more female attention whenever I was young, but now it seems like I'm just a worn down husk. A part of me doesn't mind it, though.

market helped allow (((corpos))) to pay people a smaller wage since there was now 2x the amount of people looking for jobs, so they paid less for "competing wages". So, both parents had to work in order to make the wage of 1 parent, so they were too tired to take care of us.

Yeah, conformity is pretty essential in school. If anything, I think I was just a brainy kid, and had the intelligence of a college student while young, but an intelligence that never developed beyond a college student.

There was this thing called the STAR test and accelerated reader program and in the 1st grade I scored a 22.4 (which is apparently supposed to be equivalent to schooling level. i.e. post graduate level comprehension)

I was allowed to read whatever books I wanted and they would ship books in from other schools and districts because there weren't enough books in my level.

This sounds like a flex but it's just a report of what happened idk.

That said, I did try to read Romeo and Juliet in the first grade and it made absolutely no sense to me. I could read and comprehend most the words but all of the deeper symbolism, early english vocabulary, etc was fully lost on me.

There were two people in love and they weren't allowed to be because their families were beefing so they both killt themselves for love.

>I find that people tend to be more honest on the web...

That's the conclusion I came to as well, so I always saw an anonymous post as being more reflective of the truth. Although I should really place more emphasis on my successes in college than I should to people on the internet. Like I said a while ago, GATE really warped my conception of intelligence, along with having it challenged by the more socially experienced around me, so even though I don't have the more accurate perception of the quality of my work because of that, I tend to teeter more often on the self-critical side so as not to create something of poor quality. I don't mind it, though, it's useful in improvement, even though there's always going to be a naysayer.

The image displays a collection of colorful, small, round objects that resemble erasers. These objects are arranged in a somewhat disorganized manner, with some overlapping each other and others lying flat. The erasers come in various shapes and designs, including animals such as a monkey, a pig, and a cat, as well as fruits like an apple and a pineapple. The colors of the erasers are vibrant, with hues of pink, yellow, green, blue, and orange. The background of the image is blurred, making the erasers the primary focus of the photograph. There are no discernible texts or brands visible in the image. The style of the image is a close-up, close-to-the-subject, product photograph, likely intended for a retail or catalog context.

The STAR test gave you your score. Then you had to read books within your range (So if you got a 5 you could read between 3 and 7 for example). All the books in the library were assigned a STAR level.

After you read the book you had to take a test on the computer related to your reading comprehension.

Each book you read earned you points and if you got enough points you could trade it in for like a sweet ass eraser or something.

The overall program was called the Accelerated Reader Program

I remember buying a bear for a girl, though I'm not sure what happened to her. Also read Hank the Cowdog. That shit was cash.

Unfortunately there were no tests for Scary Stories to Tell in the Dark, or if there were, I don't remember them.

The image is a screenshot of a text message conversation. The conversation is between two individuals, with the text appearing in a chat window. The conversation is about a dream and the characters are discussing various aspects of the dream, such as the characters' appearance, the dream itself, and the characters' reactions to the dream. The text is in a language that appears to be English, but the specific language is not clear from the image. The characters are using emojis to express their thoughts and emotions, and there are multiple emojis used throughout the conversation. The text is formatted in a standard chat format, with the conversation taking place in a chat window. The timestamp at the top of the image indicates that the conversation took place on May 30, 2018 at 07:54:41. The chat window has a header that reads "Anonymous Wed 30 May 2018 07:54:41," which suggests that the conversation was initiated by an anonymous user. The chat window also has a header that reads "View," which implies that the conversation is being viewed by someone else.

The image does not provide any additional context or information beyond the text itself. The focus is solely on the conversation between the two characters, and there are no visual elements or additional information provided in the image.

The image is a cover of a book titled "The Transall Saga" by Gary Paulsen. The cover art depicts a desert landscape with a bright, blue light source in the sky, casting a glow over the scene. The sky is a gradient of warm colors, transitioning from orange at the horizon to a deep blue at the zenith. The landscape is barren with a few scattered rocks and a few small mounds. The title of the book is prominently displayed in large, bold, orange letters, with the author's name in smaller, white letters below it. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a science fiction or fantasy genre, with a focus on the landscape and the light source, which could suggest a setting in a distant or alien world.

the Gate Program's main goal was to monitor the effects of subliminal brainwashing that the government was and still is using on the population and specifically after their MK experiments. back then technology was in the early stages so they needed to see the budding fruits of their labor up close, now they just monitor you through your devices and social media. sure in the 50s - 60s they might recruit a someone when their older but now that they've mastered the craft and created the technology to utilize it to its fullest potential, you are their perfected slave. Remote Viewing is just rebranded hindu pagan occult bs. It is a trap designed to get spiritually sensitive people communicating with demons.

True spiritual experiences don't require tricks or funny noises, and are often to prevent the person from spiritually harming themselves.

Seek Christ above all else. He will protect you from those devils.

And if you do occult stuff anyways and find yourself talking to an 8 armed blue monkey demon, make the sign of the cross and repeat the prayer "Lord Jesus Christ, Son of God, Have Mercy on me, a Sinner" and watch the demons recoil. Then never do occult again.

I dunno about all the conspiracy stuff, but I honestly remember GT being fucking awesome and always looking forward to my "GT days" in school. I remember it started in the first grade, and petered out in significance around eighth grade.

I was in the Texas GT program - and it was mostly composed of cool field trips, esoteric testing (pattern recognition, media literacy, communication skills, the ability to extrapolate data from missing information, etc.), one-on-ones with guidance counselors that weren't from my school, and special projects that required significant coordination — not only amongst your fellow classmates, but with GT classes from other schools across the country. I remember participating in live streams regularly with classes around the world. It was all incredibly useful, not only academically, but from a practical standpoint I learned many "soft power" skills from GT. We learned how to read between the lines, communicate both frankly when it was required, and with subtext when such openness was impossible. I remember a series of GT classes around the fifth grade that seriously emphasized the necessity of "white lies" and how to use them effectively.

By the time I graduated high school, however, GT was little more for me than a college readiness study hall, where I could apply for scholarships and goof off with the portable computer lab and play Halo custom edition and Gary's mod and stuff like that with my friends. There were still some badass group projects, though; my favorite was this model UN program my GT class got to take part in. It was over several weeks, and schools from around the world participated both online and in person (G7 nations only was something I noticed at the time). I guess by that point all that could really be taught to us by GT had either been thoroughly instilled, or it was a failure and we were being phased out anyways to not tip-off whatever hidden lessons were being secretly instilled in the "successful" GT kids.

Sounds like you have a non-falsifiable orthodoxy. We were taught legitimately esoteric knowledge and what could be described as an extrasensory ability to "suss out" truth, context, and an understanding of systems necessary to manage the messy inner workings of. We were certainly apart from the typical AP kids, taught things they weren't, and were actively encouraged to "experiment" with what we've learned in GT class on our classmates.

For example, I remember in the second grade actively encouraging my classmates to speak in gibberish and to refuse to learn to read or write because we were just taught about how flexible language is and how easily it can change. It actually caused a significant problem for my school for several days because kids would randomly encourage each other to abandon the rules of language at random times. Instead of being held responsible for this - I was rewarded with free vouchers for the book fair; I bought an issue of shonen jump and captain underpants.

Outsiders don't seem to understand how high the expectations were for the performance capacities of the mk program subjects. You sound like you are complaining about sour grapes. You were not included due to not qualifying.

If you had been put into the same circumstances you would very likely not have survived.

Exposure to hazard was apparently a method used to reduce costs and liabilities. Ineptitude would resolve itself. Maintaining situational awareness is a fundamental requirement.

Or the GATE program has been intentionally mystified behind fantastical stories that have zero evidence, so that way the intelligent would be warded off by the stupid before they begin to actually investigate the true motivations behind GATE. Funnily enough this is actually another strategy that was taught to me as well.

It's to select for people who can effectively serve the deep state (as poisoned as that term is). And I'm not talking about the Military Industrial Complex side, I'm talking about something much more subtle. You underestimate just how important communication is.

Below this, in a smaller font, the phrase "I'm special" is written in a playful, cartoonish font. The background of the image is a plain, light-colored wall with a few small, indistinct objects that are not clearly visible.

In the center of the image, there is a person wearing a white lab coat with a blue shirt underneath. The person is wearing red and blue headphones, and they are looking down at a handheld device with a microphone. The person's face is not visible, and their expression is not clear. The person's hands are resting on the device, suggesting they are in the process of using it.

Probably 3rd grade too, I was brought by my mom to a school I'd never been to on a Saturday to test for a gifted program. I remember her dropping me out front and then being in a classroom with 10-20 other kids doing a scantron type test, and then that's literally it. Don't remember anything else until walking through the door at home after getting picked up by my mom. It was mid afternoon, I went right to my room and fell asleep until noon or so the next day.

All of it was extremely strange. I never slept that late, never went to some random ass school, never had blank spots memory wise, and certainly don't have many other memories as vivid as this (the parts I remember and described.)

Obviously I didn't get in I guess, because after that life carried on like normal as far as I can remember. Tha said I don't remember too much from that year. We moved a lot when I was a kid and I'm almost sure that we moved following that event and I was at a different school the following year.

The image is a meme featuring a man in a suit drinking from a glass. The man appears to be in a professional setting, possibly a press conference or a similar event, as suggested by the microphone in front of him. The text overlay on the image reads, "When Hollywood is finally exposed as a pedophile and sex abuse ring." The text is in a bold, white font against a black background, which contrasts with the image of the man and the glass of wine. The style of the image is humorous, combining a serious statement with a light-hearted visual element. The overall tone of the meme is satirical, using the context of Hollywood to make a joke about a scandal.

Thus, I realized I could read a bunch of first grade books and test all of them. I got the most points of anyone on the east coast, unironically. I was later selected for "SAGE" which is what GATE was called in the southeast. In SAGE we had a "snobhopper problem" anyone else remember this?

Other (maybe) pertinent bits: this was in Texas, around 1992-93 (I'm old) in I think Bryan TX.

I do have scattered memories of meeting with counselors, maybe hearing tests? And definitely lights off head on desk type shit that I was stoked for because I figured I could take a nap. I've always hated school and was a mediocre student at best, while frustrating the shit out of my teachers because they thought I was pretty smart, but just didn't do the work.

Also I ended up having an absolute compulsion toward joining the military from that stage of my life forward, until I did.

11 years of active duty and multiple combat deployments. No idea if any of it is related but I definitely have weird shit in my life.

I was forced into GATE and all I got was this PTSD. (Allegedly.)

Truthful disclaimer: most of the school age memories, beside what I wrote in the first post, could easily be interpolations I put on myself. The nap time bit for sure happened. And I definitely joined the infantry at 19, but everything else might be false memories based on shit I've read.

I read everything in the box during the 1983/84 school year. It actually went from the lowest levels of early reading into postgraduate level reading samples. Some of the questions were probably measuring doctorate levels of comprehension. It was just a reading class and not a part of any program though I did have experience with the programs as they existed in the 70s and 80s. Most people in the class were stuck in a particular level for remedial reading purposes, some were in the class for advanced reading and speed reading. I read it all and wanted more. If I had known that the box had a sequel I would have sought it out and read it.

Or you're just trying to be special, whereas I actually am special. I'm telling you what it actually was about. We were, and still are, being properly educated and selected to "succeed" in a time and place when the American education system is actively and genuinely trying to make the average person dumber, and less capable of comprehending media and communicating complex ideas. You obviously weren't in the program or it would be very clear to you what we were actually being trained for, even though it was never explicitly stated — we were supposed to reach the conclusion ourselves and approach them. There is a "real world", and a "fake world"; you live in the fake world. I had an opportunity to live in the "real world", but I didn't, because it sucks to work for them. You still think that this is an anonymous message board, that we aren't being actively monitored with a full profile for each user with all their posts across multiple IP addresses? You still think the GATE indigo child disinfo bs is real?

It's genuinely so funny seeing all the stranger things hogwarts shit brought up in here; actual paranormal shit looks a lot more mundane and honestly unimpressive in the age of technology. Yes, esp is real — we all have it, some people are just born more sensitive than others but there is genuinely no ceiling even clinically retarded people can become psychic with enough training. It's not special, they just hide it from everyone because that would mean the end of secrecy, which they thrive on.

I even had a career in USAID waiting for me when I graduated from college; it was just a starting point, of course, like a stepping stone. End goal was to work for a think tank and boss around the politicians. Started running into actual, real fucking sickos in my final two semesters in uni and decided to abandon my career and work at an art museum for two years.

I'm seeing a lot of similarities between my own GATE experience and those in this thread. I'll blog about it I guess

>I remember the hearing tests and flash cards as well as the Rorschach tests >separate from GATE (I think), I was tested on my ability to detect pitch before joining band and was told I have an "exceptional" ear >in GATE class there were these large rolls of paper that they would sometimes pull down over all the windows to darken the room >effortless straight A student until senior year of high school when I started skipping class and skipping assignments that I thought were "pointless." I always did the essays though, and my essays were frequently pulled up on the projector to use as examples for the rest of the class. Despite skipping classes/assignments, most of my teachers still gave me top marks. My AP English teacher in particular would give me good grades in exchange for helping with her class planning and making her power points >despite often feeling like a fish out of water, I have ALWAYS made excellent first impressions. It's only when people try to get to know me on a deeper level that it all falls apart >like a lot of you, I have always been a gifted writer. My writing portfolio in high school earned a perfect score and I won a state competition for composition

>I have always been able to CLEARLY visualize things in my mind, in perfect detail. I was shocked to learn that this isn't universal, and that some people don't even have internal monologues.

>It is common for random people who are not close to me to give me exactly what I want in that moment, without me expressing it out loud. Too many examples to get into in this post

In spite of all of that I work a corporate 9-5 lol but my boss frequently tells me I'm his "rock" despite never EVER showing up to work on time. Outwardly I'm a normie but internally - I don't think many people visualize/process things the way I do. I'm probably just coping with being a corporate drone.

It's funny how fed is thrown around like a defense mechanism around here. I think you romanticize what actually happened to us because the reality is much more horrifically mundane. By the way, it's not even secret what was going on; you can literally google the very real parapsychology papers and see for yourself what they were actually doing to us.

Anything more severe than what we actually went through would've been done on Monarch children who are raised in cults around the world (Julian Assange was born in the Finders Cult). Slave kids with no names, no identities, no families. I've met them, you know. You can see the soul behind their programmed eyes, begging for liberation. I dream of freeing them all, all of us really, daily.

To be clear, I had some weird fucking assignments, too. Nothing torturous compared to monarch, but it was weird. One time, there was this student teacher actress in one of those portable classrooms who was absolutely crying her eyes out, and we were supposed to figure out what happened and why she was crying. She never stopped crying at any point, and we weren't told to try to console her — but I tried anyways. She actually broke character, and said I was sweet for trying and was the only kid who did, but that she's supposed to keep crying until we get the information and leave the room.

You really don't know how good these guys are, do you? They literally run Saint Jude's children's hospital — they know how to appear wholesome to children; sensitive kids most especially. We're more vulnerable to those tactics, not less. The other side of that is we become absolute masters of illusion. You learn awareness and how to detect deception — which is literally what the GATE program was teaching us. They wanted us to be aware of how manipulation works so we could run the machine for the real wizards of Oz.

I'm not romanticizing anything. you are consistently trying to explain away weird experiences as just mundane, when all I've insinuated was that there was something else going on. something much larger, and in my opinion still not known. tell the kids who were actually admitted into the program who have giant lapses in their memory that their experience wasn't "that big of a deal" or that what was going on was normal even in the slightest. the fact that a lot of us share these experiences, and live hundreds if not thousands of miles away from each other, and at different points in our lives, means that there was a larger coordinated and well funded effort to gauge some sort of attributes in children. what they are i don't really know, but I feel and suspect is way more insidious than we think.

Interesting.

They kept screening me for GATE

but the weirdo I am

I selected myself out of it

Probably a good thing seeing the osyop around it.

Plenty of my friends WERE in it

Called it TAG

>Talented And Gifted

They did the hearing test

I raised my hand right or left hand when there wasn't a sound just to mess with them

They had me identify pictures and one was a toolbox tool, probably a wrench, and I recognized it but didn't know the name - the tester could not comprehend and asked me how I don't know the name of this very common household item tool dude didn't think I'm raised by a single female guardian who is a dumbass and the closest thing to a tool she owns is a pair of scissors

They have me take a math test

I see multiplication symbols

But we haven't been taught multiplication yet... or division.

So I don't know what the fuck to do/what they mean. And I don't ask. I just put some BS answers.

I ask my TAG/smart friend during recess what the X means.

She says oh, you just add the top number as many times as the number on the other side or bottom etc

oh. that's easy af.

didn't get selected for TAG.

Have always wound up friends with TAG/GATE/actually smart people.

Have also been told I'm smart.

But I'm also a weirdo.

Which has saved me so many times.

Government psyop.

Police male pedo molestation.

Church molestation.

HPV.

Has also gotten me hotties because "you're so different." and me treating them autistically makes them feel special simply because it's different.

Pretty funny thinking about it.

Cool thread, I'll share some:

>Between ages 5 to 7

>Pink liquid from an institutional paper cup

>Hearing and card tests

>Advanced reading ever since

>Riddles and puzzles, class vs teachers

>The lead was a clean cut fit type teacher
>Same teacher also taught advanced reading

It was odd to have new teachers in a new repurposed room. Others asked about it, heard it was fun. New stuff, fun culture.

Same lead teacher shared a magic trick we were to figure out, in a normal class, other gate kids present. We figured out the gag after a couple demonstrations. I may post the trick later.

Memory gaps are a sign the program failed you (there are no such things as bad students, only bad instructors and bad parents).

They scrub a lot of shit with the pink stuff and see you on your way, trying to give you a normal life. They don't do a good job of it, but at least they try for us, which is more than can be said for the monarch kids.

If you had worked out you would've "graduated" into opportunities relevant to managing systems of power, both public and hidden.

Truth scares away those not ready, although really this one isn't even that secret or shocking. They were selecting for the "middle managers" of the system that undergirds the world order. It's not that complicated. They were, and still are, looking for kids that test well both logically, emotionally, and intuitively, under a variety of different pressures.

You want it to be something where you're the chosen one to go fight aliens in Stargate or something. I'm telling you what it was for, and why. I'm telling you why you have memory gaps. You probably made it even further than you remember, didn't do well, and got the memories shocked out of you and new memories eased in with the pink shit. If you were in the program - you would know. I don't remember much of my childhood either, for what it's worth: most people don't.

I'm also not saying you weren't also a victim of something, but you would know if you were GATE/GT. No doubts, no wondering.

It's really not complicated. You know they make fun of us, right? They tell us all their secrets - openly now even - because they truly believe that the overwhelming majority of humans are little better than factory farm chickens. They really, truly believe they can tell you all these things openly, and that you will do nothing about it. In fact, the data would suggest that telling you so frankly and nonchalantly will inspire apathy rather than action.

It's more comfortable to dismiss me as fiction. I understand that. I really do. Like I said before, it's very mundane and horrible. Crazy fantasies or outright denials are easier.

Genuinely and truly — I don't know. Reliable hypnotherapists are few and far between. Most aren't even aware of the Green conditioning or any further. Most don't even know of the field of parapsychology. You'll have to look carefully. But the first step is being aware that you're a victim - no matter what anyone tells you.

The essential feature of narcissistic personality disorder is a pervasive pattern of grandiosity, need for admiration, and lack of empathy that begins by early adulthood and is present in a variety of contexts.

Individuals with this disorder have a grandiose sense of self-importance, which may be manifest as an exaggerated or unrealistic sense of superiority, value, or capability (Criterion 1). They tend to overestimate their abilities and amplify their accomplishments, often appearing boastful and pretentious. They may blithely assume that others attribute the same value to their efforts and may be surprised when the praise they expect and feel they deserve is not forthcoming.

Individuals with narcissistic personality disorder believe that they are special or unique and expect others to recognize them as such (Criterion 3). They can be surprised or even devastated when the recognition of acclaim they expect and feel they deserve from others is not forthcoming.

Zerner card sabotaging is for the potentially un psychic. If you were accused to be psychic they would probably drink your adrenochrome and eat your pineal gland if you didn't work with the lesser demons in their asses. >Any GATE kids have a really weird emotional response to certain paranormal stuff esp aliens?

For all my life until earlier this year I was terrified of greys. My only irrational fear other than heights, and markedly stronger.

Then, for a shitpost response in an /x/ thread, I drew eyebrows on one of the David Huggins paintings in ms paint. I was struggling with my aversion to their faces even while drawing it.

But once I saw it, something inside me snapped and I bust out laughing for like 3 solid minutes with no explanation, and when I finally settled and took a good look again, not only did I feel no fear at all, what I felt instead I'm not sure if I can describe any way else but romantic attraction, like the same involuntary bubbly cheerfulness as when I see picture of an old crush, and a silliness for thinking she was ever scary?

And while monkey me was suddenly no longer terrified, and basically hasn't been since I have no more aversion and generally no longer fear a home invasion from then, non-emotional intellectual brain me finds everything about that even more disconcerting.

None about aliens that I remember, though I have always have a very intense dread at looking directly at a grey, even pictures. No idea why that is. It's strange, but I wonder what happened. The image is a screenshot of a text document with a dark background and white text.

The text is divided into two main sections. The first section is a list of bullet points, and the second section is a paragraph. The bullet points are numbered and provide information about a specific event or incident. The paragraph below the bullet points is a narrative describing the event.

The first bullet point states, "A gun has been fired in space exactly once, specifically in 1974 when the Soviet Salyut 3 space station test fired an onboard 22mm outboard cannon while Russian cosmonauts carried the TP-92 survival pistol from 1982 to 2006 for post-landing protection against wildlife in Siberia, these were never fired in orbit."

The second bullet point reads, "The Only Incident: The Soviet Almaz military station program involved a 22mm cannon designed for defense, which was tested while the station was unmanned in orbit."

The paragraph below the bullet points provides additional context and information. It mentions that "Spacecraft Survival Guns For decades, Russian Soyuz missions carried a three-barrel pistol, which was intended solely for survival in remote, wolf-inhabited areas."

The image is a screenshot, and the text is in English. The style of the image is informational, with a focus on providing details about a specific event or incident. The text is clear and easy to read, with no images or graphics present.

>You are assuming the mentality of the people you've never met, so you are using your own bias to fill in what would happen. Therefore, you are projecting. What if they are more normal than you and feel comfortable with being isolated?

Wrong. You're the one assuming that they won't. Preparedness is about having a plan for all possible outcomes. Hopefully the gun goes unused, but if you need it, you really fuckin need it. His reasoning is correct.

The only issue why it's a wrong answer is it's a takedown method that's as much a danger to the craft as it is whoever needs to be stopped. If you miss, or it blows through and keeps going, now you've got a hole in your equipment. At minimum you're probably leaking O2, at worst the hole hit a hose or circuit board or battery and now you're really in hot water.

The short of it is, there is no good answer, anything dangerous enough to handily take down a resisting human threatening mission safety is also itself dangerous to very delicate mission safety. Thus far the problem has been mostly avoided through preventative psych eval screening; reduce the chances going in. But we don't have a real plan if it goes down, it's just wrestle them down and sedate for the rest of the mission until you run out of sedatives, there's a solid chance of good crew getting hurt in the process.

contrasting with the blue background. The text is centered and appears to be a statement or a warning.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with its clean lines and vibrant colors. The character's serious expression and the text suggest a theme of propaganda or a message of caution.

>large brown headphones, beeping >zenner cards, inkblot questions, lots of them >me and this other girl are often tested together

>she was a problem child, behavior issues

>one day the instructor placed a pencil in front of us and told us to make it move

>I think I failed the test, because my memory gets hazy >the pink liquid was given to the rest of the kids in the class, but not to us

>I wanted some but the lady told me no, it's for them, not you >my friend steals a little cup for me and I drink it >the lady scolded me for doing so even though I did not understand how she knew >never see them again

There was one instructor who was an older man with a well-kept beard who often wore sweaters. He would always bring up my father for some reason which used to bother me. The others were usually younger women who I remember not being very nice for some reason, but the man always seemed genuinely happy to see me. The other girl involved grew up to have a bunch of kids and always be in some sort of trouble. To this day I wonder what the fuck they were up to, and how nobody from the school or any parents questioned any of this.

The image is a black and white photograph featuring a large, detailed painting with a dramatic and fantastical theme. At the center of the composition, there is a large, ornate throne with a figure seated on it, holding a scepter. This central figure is surrounded by a variety of other figures, including a group of people with long hair, a group of people with short hair, and a group of people with elongated features. The figures are depicted in a variety of poses, some standing, some sitting, and others in dynamic poses, suggesting movement and action.

The background of the painting is filled with intricate patterns and designs, including swirling patterns, floral motifs, and other decorative elements. The overall style of the painting is reminiscent of Baroque art, characterized by its dramatic use of light, shadow, and color, and its emphasis on the human form and the human experience.

The painting is framed by a decorative border with a pattern that includes what appears to be a stylized representation of a tree or plant.

The image is a fine art print, and the style is reminiscent of historical portraiture, with a focus on the human form and the human experience. The photograph is taken from a perspective that allows the viewer to appreciate the depth and complexity of the painting's composition.

I was put in a gifted class as a young kid, from kindergarten to 5th grade but I never did the GATE, at least not until I was older. The test I remember doing was more of a standard pen and paper test, looking back it was kind of like the GED. What I remember most vividly was a section where you had to solve division, because it's the section I fucked up the hardest and almost prevented me from getting into the program

I have distinct memories of being brought in for something that's almost identical to every description i've ever heard of the GATE test but I don't remember it being called GATE. It was specifically when I was 11 years old during my last year of elementary, during 5th grade. They took me into the nurse's office, they had me redo an IQ test, then tested my hearing, can't remember for how long, but then they brought me and two other kids from 3rd grade into the library and brought out the TV cart and had us put n headphones.

What did the liquid taste like? Because mine wasn't pink, it was clear like water but I remember it tasted better somehow, fresher than bottled water is the only way I can explain it. I can't remember what they put on the TV, I remember the headphones having some kind of classical music playing. There's a gap in my memory at that time, the next thing I solidly remember from that day was being in my mom's car, heading home, when I started throwing up. After that year of 5th grade, when I went into middle school, I was just told the school didn't have a gifted program. I knew they did, though, because one of my friends from my old gifted class was put into it.

Doing random tasks and those results getting used in buisnesses and industries.

Getting tested, like having my notes to things taken away and having to do the test from memory. Not getting any praise (especially online) for anything or medals for winning things - think they is so they can keep farming your mind. To this day I basically get kept on little money but being given fake offers to motivate me and then they take them away. I can do about 20 things to a very, very high level but cannot get the credit or anything to put on my CV. I get told to do things, do them and then get punished. I don't think it ever stops if the government deemed you talented enough. A few more things, childhood got left alone with books and the next door neighbours would bang around and run up and downstairs really loudly to take the fear out of my, caused some street fights actually. Also got tested a lot on navigation and doing things people my age weren't really doing, like going to other cities to get things aged 8 or so. A lot of my life I have been lied to. Barely any birthday or christmas presents. Really bad women in my life and then the good ones people would either stop them speaking to me or stop the calls and texts go through. For years every girl I spoke to had a boyfriend, then did dating apps and they changed all the pics with ai and stopped messages going through, now I am being told to start approaching women in real life. All internet usage monitored, when the internet first came out I did some forum stuff with people who went on to be successful, and even copied some of my stuff and I never got praised for it. Now people keep bringing up stuff I have mentioned. A lot of false memories been implanted and lies spread. Got to the point where I was almost killed several times. I don't think the gate programme stops until you die. But thats just my personal experience. Still going though it.

The image depicts an interior space that appears to be a room within a building, possibly a hospital or a similar medical facility. The room is illuminated by a soft purple light, casting a calm and serene atmosphere. The walls are adorned with a floral wallpaper, and the floor is covered with a checkered pattern in shades of blue and white. In the center of the room, there is a large whiteboard with a map or schematic on it, suggesting a focus on patient care or medical procedures. To the right of the whiteboard, there is a row of vending machines, indicating a space for patients to purchase snacks or beverages.

On the left side of the room, there is a bed with a white sheet, indicating a place for patients to rest or be monitored. The bed is positioned against a wall with a window, allowing natural light to enter the room.

In the foreground, there is a small table with a red and blue checkered cloth on it, possibly used for patient care or for personal items. The table is situated in front of the vending machines, suggesting a space for patients to access items without leaving the bed.

The overall style of the image is realistic and appears to be a digital rendering or a photograph, capturing the essence of a medical room in a calm and quiet environment.

The image is a close-up photograph of a circular object with a central hole. The object appears to be a small, round, metallic object with a smooth surface. The background is a dark, textured surface that resembles a wall or a similar material. The lighting in the image is even, with no harsh shadows or highlights, suggesting a controlled environment such as a laboratory or a controlled environment photography setting.

There are no visible texts or discernible markings on the object. The style of the image is a straightforward, non-artistic photograph with a focus on the object itself.

sorry that was a shit story let me tell it abit better.

I went to school like every other kid. My first memory of school is being forced into the classroom by my mother while frantically trying to pull on the door to get back out, she was holding the other side shut so I couldn't leave.

Every now and then we would get taken to separate classes from the normal year group class in primary school. These classes took place in rooms where there were no windows or the windows had been covered with paper or cloth so that no natural light entered the room. Perhaps to help distort the sense of time passing?

In one of these instances of being taken to a separate class, there was an androgynous teaching assistant whom I hadn't seen before anywhere in school. SirMaam was about 50 years old, had wrinkles, a very feminine male. I saw them a couple times whilst walking around the village where I grew up.

The tran tran teaching assistant handed out the activity for the class, I can't remember what the activity was as the memory was overshadowed by the touching of my cock and balls by said tran tran on my pee pee. After about 5 seconds of touching, I clocked what was happening, 2 seconds of eye contact with the TA gave me enough information to know this was somewhat predatory behaviour (i wasn't enjoying it at least) so I bolted as fast as my 5 year old legs could run, out of the class and through the hall into a cloakroom, a dark room where all the kids would put their jackets.

Not sure how long I stayed there for but it was a while. I saw the teaching assistance a few times after in the course of normal school life. I observed the tranny TA interacting with other children in a non predatory manner but kept my distance and never engaged with the individual again.

And that itself is already a giant leap of logic because how could that be possible if the young mind still haven't learned, matured or did anything to be considered genius ? Before the moment of creation, the genius is just a weird person. So, the other thing, they thought they had privileged information. In a quiet field at the edge of a small town, a potato named Milo grew beneath the soil. Milo was calm and thoughtful. While other potatoes dreamed of sunny days and warm dirt, Milo liked to imagine the night sky.

Every evening, when the world grew still, Milo listened to the crickets and watched the moonlight shimmer through the thin cracks in the soil above him. He wondered what the moon felt like. Was it cold. Was it soft. Did it glow because it was happy.

One night, something unusual happened. A pale silver light drifted down through the soil, brighter than any moonbeam Milo had ever seen. It settled beside him and formed a tiny glowing potato, no bigger than a pebble.

"Hello," the glowing potato said. "I am Luna. I fell from the moon."

Milo blinked in surprise. "You came all the way here."

Luna nodded. "I wanted to see what life is like in the soil. The moon is beautiful, but it is very quiet. I wondered what it feels like to grow."

Milo felt a warm excitement. "I can show you. The soil is soft. The worms are friendly. The rain sounds like music."

Luna nestled closer. "Will you stay with me while I learn."

"Of course," Milo said.

For many nights, Milo taught Luna everything he knew. He showed her how roots stretch gently through the earth. He explained how the soil holds stories from every season. He told her how the world above changes with each sunrise.

In return, Luna told Milo about the moon. She described the silver plains and the soft glow that never fades. She told him how the stars look from above and how peaceful the sky feels when the world is sleeping.

As the days passed, Luna's glow grew softer. She was becoming more like a regular potato, warm and earthy. She smiled at Milo. "I think I belong here now."

Milo felt proud. "You shine in a new way."

When harvest season arrived, the gardener found two potatoes resting side by side. One was Milo. The other was Luna, still holding a faint silver shimmer.

I left high school senior year, mid-year, to finish early at a continuation school. The administrator who processed my paperwork had all my files on his desk, and one of them was a GATE file with my school picture from elementary school taped to the front of the file. I was in GATE for 3rd, 4th, and 5th grade, in the late 80s. My elementary school was like one third Jewish kids (I'm not.) I was in a program called TAG and a program called Humanitas in junior high and high school, and I thought I was put in these programs due to being in GATE earlier. These junior high and high school programs didn't do much, but they had special field trips once in a while. One was to Olivera Street near Los Angeles.

I think that is true. If we did better on test and/or acted more normal, then the frequency therapy was working.

They were trying to test if they could change our brain function on frequency tone alone. The 1980's test may have been created to fine esper children, but it later changed to a form of brainwashing by the 2000s

Good entities do not get involved into people's lives most often than not because they have a higher level of respect for free will. As in contrast to evil entities who are much more prone to meddling in worldly affairs and in the seduction of consciousness. Aliens are also interdimensional beings that carry the anxieties of the collective consciousness and present it to humanity in a Promethean way to disrupt established systems and provoke changes specially in times of change and transitional eras such as the one we're living now with the Age of Aquarius. That's why many abduction reports are about clinical settings since one of the anxieties of the modern world is losing our grip on technology and when you go to the doctor you surrender to the knowledge of science.

The image is a stylized cartoon illustration featuring a man with a stern expression. He has a bald head with a receding hairline, and his hair is white. He is wearing a dark suit with a white shirt and a red tie. The suit is well-fitted, and the shirt appears to be neatly tucked in. The man has a pair of glasses on his face, and his eyebrows are slightly furrowed. He is looking off to the side with a serious expression.

The background of the image is a simple, unadorned wall with a window. The window has a clear pane and is framed with a simple, unadorned design. The overall style of the image is cartoonish, with a focus on the character's facial features and the simplicity of the background. There are no texts or additional elements in the image.

The image is a meme featuring a white figure with a surprised expression, holding a toothbrush in its mouth. The figure is set against a backdrop of a wall covered with various papers and posters, some of which are yellow and others are green. The text on the image reads: "20 years of 'Illuminati Research' it's the Jews. <3tw" The style of the image is a combination of a meme and a satirical commentary, with the figure's surprised expression and the text suggesting a humorous take on the concept of "Illuminati Research."

On the left side of the image, there is a small, square icon with a golden glow, possibly representing a treasure or a collectible. On the right side, there is a smaller icon of a character wearing a hat, which could be another character or a part of the game's interface. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of classic video game graphics, with a focus on the character's intense expression and the mysterious atmosphere.

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a text-based interface. The top of the page contains a header with the text "Welcome to Hell" in a bold, red font. Below the header, there is a list of names and email addresses, with the names listed in a smaller font size and the email addresses in a larger font size. The email addresses are separated by a comma.

The main body of the page contains a block of text in a larger font size, which appears to be a message or announcement. The text is in English and discusses the concept of "post-side threads" and the consequences of not paying for them. The text is in a dark color, which contrasts with the lighter background of the page.

At the bottom of the page, there is a button with the text "Auto This thread has been pruned or deleted" in a red font, indicating that the thread has been pruned or deleted. The button is located at the bottom of the page, aligned to the right.

The overall style of the image is informational and technical, with a focus on the content of the webpage. The use of bold and larger font sizes for the header and main body text draws attention to the important information being presented. The button at the bottom suggests a user-friendly interface, allowing the user to manage the pruned or deleted threads.

The image depicts a statue of a figure that appears to be a representation of Jesus Christ, with a humanoid form and a halo around the head. The figure is depicted with a beard and long hair, and the face is characterized by a stern expression. The statue is surrounded by a vibrant blue sea, with a multitude of small, colorful fish swimming around the figure. The fish are scattered throughout the water, creating a lively and dynamic underwater scene. The overall style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the details of the statue and the sea life. There are no texts present in the image.

The image is a cartoon-style illustration featuring a character that appears to be a robot or a mechanical figure. The character is seated on a large, spherical chair with a yellow and gold color scheme. The chair has a curved backrest and four legs, each with a circular foot. The character is holding a bowl with a handle, which contains grapes. The character's face is anthropomorphic, with a large, smiling mouth and a pair of blue eyes. The background is a simple, cartoon-like room with a brick wall and a television set. The style of the image is reminiscent of the animated series "The Simpsons," which is known for its humor and exaggerated characters.

The image is a screenshot from a social media post, likely from a video or a photo. It features a person in a grocery store, appearing to be in a state of distress or confusion. The individual is wearing a black t-shirt and has a wet, dripping substance on their face and upper body. The person's mouth is open, and they are holding a bottle in their right hand, which is also dripping with the same substance. The person's eyes are wide open, and their facial expression is one of surprise or shock.

In the background, there are other people, but they are blurred and not the main focus of the image. The setting appears to be a grocery store, indicated by the presence of a checkout counter and other store fixtures. The text "MILKING 62" is overlaid on the image, which is likely a reference to the person's name or a hashtag related to the content of the post.

The image has a watermark that reads "RJJUNICE" and a timestamp that reads "10:10". The watermark and timestamp suggest that the image was taken and shared on a social media platform, possibly Instagram, as indicated by the "Instagram" logo in the top right corner of the image. The overall style of the image is candid and appears to be a spontaneous or edited moment captured in a public setting.

This. The captcha is so stupid and simple that I feel like I'm being kidded every time.

This stupid captcha and this even stupider time limit do NOTHING except annoy users.

They want you to feel as stupid as possible for posting here. The fact that you put up with it and just accept it is noted in your shadow profile, just like everything else. You also mustn't forget what 4chan is. It's not a place of free speech. Just like all the other social media crap, it's a tool of the Mossad, because the Jews are scared shitless of people who could potentially organize themselves against their Jewish bullshit. Of course, they want to know exactly who they're dealing with and ultimately be able to correctly assess those who could potentially become dangerous. Without sites like 4chan, people who generally come here to post would be completely unpredictable and much harder to control. Either way, it's a pain in the ass.

Wojak is a voodoo doll, the demons* (I prefer to call them turdmons since calling them demons is a sign of respect, but I will write the generally known word for them in order to prevent confusion [*]) who made it try to force-meme it into representing you/you identifying as it, to inflict psychic/spiritual damage via sympathetic link.

In general if something is made to look of very low quality without depth like 'wojak', 'corporate memphis', etc... it's designed to inflict a sense of hollowness/soulessness into the observer, to bring the consciousness into a lower state of 'thinking' in general.

You should stay away from it and not use it to make memes if possible since it may create associative 'karma' between you and its creator/s. I only did it here in order to show an example.

memes have a life cycle, and when they die, you can tell because you feel a visceral aversion to them, similar to how you'd feel if you saw roadkill. when memes die, they get stale, bloat as in being overposted or plastered on merchandise ages after they become "cringe", and finally decay.

there's songs on the radio i used to love as a kid, but now i just get irritated to hear them a million infinity times. they get worn out. worse than background noise, they take up space that something better could be taking up.

the snobjaks though, there's something curious going on with that stuff.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a text that reads "be me" in a pixelated font, which is a stylized representation of the word "be." The pixelation of the text adds a playful and modern touch to the image.

The overall style of the image is a blend of historical and modern elements, with the text and the papyrus scrolls being the central focus, and the pixelated "be me" text adding a contemporary twist. The image seems to be a humorous or satirical take on the idea of ancient texts and their influence on modern thought.

Real meditation helps you astral project and leave your body. Or see with your eye lids closed maybe even see sound or hear stuff far far away. Anything other than this is cope slop from the matrix. I won't explain more as you humaynes should not know plenty of things per matrix.

>what is the point of meditation ever want to get rid of all those "intrusive thoughts" you kids have that you claim to hate so much but never do anything about but desperately "dissociate" away with media and drugs? all those "thought spirals" that make you "crash out" and feel "down bad"? ever wanted to "lock in" whenever and wherever you want, regardless of how many distractions are present or how much red bull or monster or cocaine you haven't had all day?

yeah, meditation does all that. if done correctly, it completely ceases the thought process and introduces gamma frequencies to your brain, which literally change you brain chemistry to assist and enhance things like memory, focus, intellectual/creative ability and more. Also you'll become fluent in "rizz" and handle anyone's "clapback" with ease. but don't take my word for it nigga on god no cap fr fr take a look it's in a book

>Real meditation helps you astral project and leave your body

yes that's a feature but it's not the point, you can leave your body and still be very distracted by worldly things real meditation turns your body into a self-actualization machine

What you get out of being regulated and centered ultimately wins you more time, but meditation can be a simple 10 minute habit. You get to see how to resolve the things that nag at you. You improve at controlling your impulses and emotions without repression. You adapt to situations and exercise your judgment more quickly and clearly. It can be a 10 minute habit.

Meditation helps you become receptive to god(the real god, not the god of earth's religions). It's a tool, not the goal itself. But I'd recommend you practice it so you can better differentiate between the mind and your conscience.

>how do I do it well?

Just experiment and find what works. I like to start mine with 3-5 sets of 24 second breaths(8 seconds in, 8 seconds hold, 8 seconds exhale). Sometimes I like to use binaural beats, they can really put you in the zone.

>what is "real" meditation

there's a saying that goes

>"you can't smoke while you meditate, but you can meditate while smoking"

the point is not about smoking - it's about the practice of meditation being an active or deliberate activity, more than it being a passive one. you can do it almost anywhere and anytime, but it doesn't work if you're distracted by another activity.

There are hundreds of "ways" to meditate, and no singular one is "correct" - you find the one that works for you, and after that it's the practice, or the activity itself, that brings your mind/consciousness into a state of alignment and expansion. In other words, your mind can enter this state through various methods, the point is that you are accessing it and improving your awareness of it with diligent practice. (1/2) long ago, I was taught 'za-zen' meditation, which is a simple "sitting and breathing" style you can look up and try easily. Personally, i've never needed anything else. It was taught to me for the sole purpose of 'arresting the thought process', and through strange neuro-magic the 'emptiness' you create in your mind allows actual neuro-chemical changes to occur. All you do is sit in a chair with your head and spine aligned (look online for postures) and, with your eyes closed or open, focus on counting your breaths in cycles of 12, and nothing else, for 20 minutes (it takes about 20 minutes for gamma frequencies to become activated). if a single thought enters your head or if you lose count during this time, you must start again from 1. This is the meditation.

this will be surprisingly hard to do the first few times, but as you find ways to eliminate your thoughts (you can force the count or use your imagination to do things like 'blow' thoughts away like leaves) you'll start to notice the strange departure from your body and the 'material world' other anons have mentioned. the point is not to focus on that, but on "Focus" ITSELF - while allowing your breaths to rise and fall naturally, do not lose focus on the count and and you will reap the benefits of gamma frequencies coursing through your brain waves.

>What is the point?

This largely depends on the type and school etc of meditation but seated mediation does 2 things at a fundamental level. Regardless of technique

>Increases the gap between urge and reaction

Basically you spend a bunch of time just kind of sitting there. And just sort of not acting on random impulses or fancies or whatever so like eventually you reach a point where you just internalize the fact that you can feel a certain way and are allowed to feel that way but don't need to let that feeling determine your actions type of thing. And become more able to act accordingly in the moment

>Soft resets and unplugs mind from external influences

More important now than ever before but it's just you and where ever you are gives your mind time to get really bored adjust to that and also shake off some baggage you picked up at school, work online etc.

Anyways for a beginner the best strategy is to just sit there in meditation position for 10-15 minutes and just try to observe how you feel what you hear see, what thoughts feelings and visualizations pop through your head you don't have to block out thoughts just don't intentionally think them. Like it's not necessarily going to fast track any spirit powers but is a good base to build other techniques off of that is low pressure.

I also really like kings active imagination technique it's sort of like a daydream except with less control so you can explore your subconscious It can be both entertaining, insightful yet also scary and traumatic sometimes. I can't describe it to do it justice so I'd look it up

I'm the most spiritual, shiny, bright, new age alien there is and I've never meditated. You don't have to meditate to be spiritually liberated or enlightened at all. It's basically just mental yoga. It doesn't have to be your cup of tea. I do however LOVE people who meditate tho. My dream is to maybe have a girl who knows how to meditate. Every person should at least try it. It just isn't my style but I do know it works.

Yep, and that base truth of reality is consciousness itself.

That's why meditation requires you to not think or feel about anything in particular.

You just be. Meditation itself is not necessary to achieve this alone. But it's a common method that helps achieve that goal for many people.

how can you tell if you were a monarch type victim? i don't really know if it is real stuff or not but i think something of some kind is really wrong and i don't know what. basically i routinely have these intense episodes of disconnection from reality like invasive daydreams and feelings of places and things that are like memories but those of things which i have never experienced. often they are complex symbolic networks like for example flowers - gardens or white lattice fences leading to gardens - dark wood rooms and burgundy colored sheets - dim sunlight - the air feels different like from a different time entirely and the light too, like my eyes are different or were - i spy - marbles, also a sense of wonder and amazement but also profound melancholy and depression, it immediately makes me sink into dejection and a feeling that there is some mysterious and latent thing i am completely missing or which is always out of my reach, just incredible frustration and upset ness at not being able to identify what it is that i am "remembering" gives way to fatigue and misery. i am obsessed with these thought loops and they can randomly invade me with imagery and symbolism. my mom says it is parallel lives but i wonder if it's related to something else like monarch type stuff or some other esoteric things i dont know about

The main text in the logo reads "ABILIFY" in large, bold, blue letters. Below the main text, there is smaller text that reads "aripiprazole" in a smaller, bold, blue font. The font size of the text is consistent with the main logo, maintaining a bold and clear appearance.

The overall style of the image is simple and clean, with a focus on the logo's design elements. The use of blue and yellow colors gives the logo a vibrant and eye-catching appearance. The text is clear and legible, indicating that the logo is intended for use in branding or advertising purposes.

The image is a stylized, cartoon-like drawing with a dark background. It features a man's face with a mix of facial features. The man has blonde hair and blue eyes. His facial expression is one of concern or distress, with his mouth slightly open and his eyes wide open. He appears to be looking at something or someone, possibly with a sense of urgency or fear.

The drawing is composed of two distinct parts. The upper part of the image shows a close-up of the man's face, with a focus on his eyes and the area around them. The lower part of the image shows a different perspective of the same man's face, but from a distance. This part of the image is more detailed and shows the man's mouth and teeth, as well as the area around his eyes.

There are no texts or discernible objects in the image. The style of the drawing is simple and cartoon-like, with a focus on conveying emotion and action through the use of shading and line work. The overall impression is one of a dramatic or intense moment captured in a simple, direct manner.

Usually what happens is I wake up, and my body is immobilized.

I try not to move because I notice that things will come to you in the dark, beings, and move your body.

>"beings"

My favorite are the female spirits that "ride", it's like someone plops your penis inside them and you have sex with them.(I want to see if I can father a hybrid)

Sometimes you do have a homosexual encounter, but you can shake off the paralysis before it goes anywhere.

I have even run into alien monsters as smart as dogs; goblins (like the size of the monster sitting on the girls chest), and giants. I've been attacked by said monsters and it is a painful ordeal (I feel the pain).

My theory is that people shift neurologically into a virtual space occupied with monsters and humanoids. Cause the somatic "body" can be interacted with by them, and on one occasion half my bed lifted up. They are not hallucinations along the lines of images or impressions, but physical beings that can be ambivalent

The best so far is making out with the night hag in my sleep paralysis, and she asked me for my name. Most ominous one was the spiked tongue alien that licked my neck after I tried kissing it and it kissed me back with it's tiny mouth.

The longer I'm awake, the slowly my head stops feeling "open" and the ringing slowly goes away. When it goes away I can't remember the dream so well anymore.

Sure. Dreams take place inside a small private theatre type room which is pitch black save for an old-school projector in the middle and the film it's projecting is lowish quality black and white or sepia. Footage seems based partly on variations of the images you can find of the theme. There were scenes of sweeping landscapes of forests and castles with figures barely visible, barren plains with winds, medieval people milling around sparse villages who every so often look into the direction of the camera but were far enough you couldn't make out detailed faces. Towards the end the shots are of the people moving closer to the camera/looking toward it continuously, and I feel a sense of agitation or an apprehensiveness that they are fully aware of me/the camera's presence mixed with fear something is behind me or in the dark part of the theatre.

You're astral projecting into the past, but your superego makes this very difficult for you — so it shows up in the only form it can without triggering your internal "agent smith" programming that says this MUST be a dream, and so the brain instills more "dream-like" qualities to the projection.

All humans are psychic — we are trained from birth to believe otherwise. Especially men, we start from a young age with a statistically-higher ceiling than girls when it comes to intuition: here's a study I actually remember - or at least I remember participating in an incredibly similar series of studies when I was a kid (I was Texas GT) - <https://ijhc.org/wp-content/uploads/2022/07/Hallman-5-3.pdf>

<https://psycnet.apa.org/record/1975-26556-001> - men do better at intuition games and luck-games when they're trying to impress women; there is limited evidence when women are in the same position, however (doesn't mean women don't do this too, though. There's just little evidence so far).

<https://www.research.ed.ac.uk/en/publications/luck-in-action-belief-in-good-luck-psi-mediated-instrumental-resp-2/> - sincere belief in good luck is often more than enough for you to do measurably better than your peers.

To reiterate — you are astral projecting into the past. I don't know why you are, but you are. Your superego rejects it as reality so it puts a funky filter over it to "accept it". The people you are seeing are aware of you on a metaphysical level, but not consciously; you only have a tangential effect on them at absolute best. Even the greatest masters can only barely affect the past via projection. I would say that you're an ultra novice right now.

I wouldn't go any further if I were you, either. Astral projection is a two-way door; shit might get attached to you (not yet at least), or malevolent actors in the present will find you and exploit you. Juice also isn't worth the squeeze — the past is way more boring than the present to be honest.

Tonight when you lay down to go to sleep, tired, as you drift to sleep think of this dream. The details. The moments before falling asleep are when a person has the most access to their dream memory recall. But, to put it to test, if you don't believe, you could, in that pre-sleep state, recall one road that you've been on in your dreams. You'll find that in this state you could easily remember where up to a dozen or more roads have gone in your dreams. Also, other anon is right about astralprojecting. [64 / 24]The image is a digital illustration that depicts a scene from a fantasy or adventure story. At the center of the image, a large lion's head is prominently featured, with its eyes wide open and a fierce expression. The lion's mane is depicted in a rich, golden color, contrasting with its dark fur. Surrounding the lion are various characters, including a group of people in armor, a knight with a sword, and a woman with a long white cloak. The people are depicted in a dynamic pose, suggesting movement and action.

In the background, there is a snowy landscape with a dark sky, and a large polar bear is visible. The polar bear is chained to a structure, and the chains are visible, indicating a scene of captivity or imprisonment. The overall color palette of the image is dark and moody, with a mix of blues, grays, and blacks, contributing to the dramatic and intense atmosphere of the scene.

The image does not contain any text, and the style of the illustration is realistic with a focus on character design and action. The style of the image is reminiscent of fantasy or adventure genre art, which is often used in movies, books, or video games to convey a sense of adventure and the fantastical elements of the story.

"In The Chronicles of Narnia, the lion Aslan represents Jesus Christ as a Christ-like figure. Created by C. S. Lewis, Aslan sacrifices himself to save Edmund, dies on the Stone Table, and is resurrected—paralleling Jesus' crucifixion and resurrection. Aslan is also portrayed as the creator and moral authority of Narnia, reflecting Christian beliefs about Christ's divine nature. Lewis described Narnia as a "supposal," imagining how Christ might appear in another world—hence, a lion."

It somehow escaped me that the Lion in the "Narnia" story is a god and world creator. What a coincidence.

The image is a black and white graphic with a circular design at the center. Within this circular frame, there is a stylized depiction of a snake with its mouth open, appearing to be biting or biting into a large rock. The snake's body is coiled around the rock, and the rock is positioned in the center of the snake's mouth. The snake's head is facing the viewer, and its body extends outward, creating a sense of movement.

At the bottom of the circular frame, there is a text that reads "I just gotta make it to Friday." The text is in a casual, informal font and is positioned in a way that it appears to be floating above the snake and the rock, suggesting a sense of urgency or determination. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a social media post, with its use of a simple, bold font and a clear, direct message.

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a text-based interface. The top of the page contains a header with the text "Welcome to Hell" in a bold, red font. Below the header, there is a list of names and email addresses, with the names listed in a smaller font size and the email addresses in a larger font size. The email addresses are separated by a comma.

The main body of the page contains a block of text in a larger font size, which appears to be a message or announcement. The text is in English and discusses the concept of "post-side threads" and the consequences of not paying for them. The text is in a dark color, which contrasts with the lighter background of the page.

At the bottom of the page, there is a button with the text "Auto This thread has been pruned or deleted" in a red font, indicating that the thread has been pruned or deleted. The button is located at the bottom of the page, aligned to the right.

The overall style of the image is informational and technical, with a focus on the content of the webpage. The use of bold and larger font sizes for the header and main body text draws attention to the important information being presented. The button at the bottom suggests a user-friendly interface, allowing the user to manage the pruned or deleted threads.

The text is a narrative excerpt from a book or a story, and it discusses the creation of the world in the story of "The Chronicles of Narnia." The text is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the English text and the right column containing the Chinese text. The Chinese text is in a different font style and size compared to the English text, indicating that the Chinese text is likely a translation or a different version of the English text. no anon its not all creativity. there is Creativity where youre aware of your genius and the muses blessing you, and recognize the divine favour and then consciously act as their vehicle because it is your destiny and then there are npcs being hijacked who are completely incapable of recognizing any divine presence whatsoever. but because the gods couldnt catch a break and use the person they wanted to use because that person was stuck working at a car wash or something they were never meant to do as a result of human greed obstructing every single aspect of purpose for creation, they use the npc, and the npc then goes back to their two thousand more years trust the plan npcness, totally oblivious to having been in any divine presence whatsoever, having found no differentiation to the lack thereof

The image is a close-up photograph of a dolphin's head and upper body. The dolphin appears to be in a calm, clear water environment, with visible ripples and reflections on the water's surface. The dolphin's eyes are covered by dark sunglasses, which are positioned over its eyes. The sunglasses have a reflective surface, suggesting they are made of a shiny material. The dolphin's mouth is slightly open, and its nose is slightly curved upwards. The dolphin's skin is a shade of gray, and its eyes are a lighter shade, possibly indicating a lighter skin tone. The overall image has a playful and whimsical quality, as the dolphin is wearing sunglasses that are not typically associated with marine life. the only distinction is whether the person is worthy of our praise, or just the gods.

i am a great fan of all of those works i cited, but more often than not the people responsible are handicaps and impediments to that creation after the fact. herbert probably being the worst, jrr tolkien being up there, but surprisingly his son christopher seems much more spiritually pagan. like theres an example of family members sharing identical dreams, its a pagan family, some will be more attuned than others.

as far as their further post-contribution, i.e. interpretation of their provided work, it depends on how spiritually pagan/spiritually not-jewish they are, as its something which is underlying their conscious selves which motivates their actions and interpretations.

and youre either a knower, or a believer. its complicated, very rarely will they miss the muses and then attune themselves after the fact.

The image is a screenshot of a text document with a dark background and white text. The text appears to be a discussion or explanation related to the concept of a "M.O.N.A.D." (Mental Organization of Non-Augmented Drones) and its design philosophy. The text is written in a formal and technical tone, discussing the design philosophy of the M.O.N.A.D. and its implications for the design of artificial intelligence systems.

The text mentions the M.O.N.A.D. as a "more of a M.O.D. (Mental Organization of Drones) proposition myself," indicating that the document is likely written by someone who is familiar with the concept of M.O.D. and its implications for artificial intelligence. The text also refers to the "Charioteer," which is a primary memory system used in the M.O.N.A.D. system, and discusses its limitations and the need for a "limited reserve cache" to prevent the system from becoming overwhelmed.

The text discusses the concept of "symbiosis" with the M.O.N.A.D. and its ability to "synthesize with D-regenerate and retain some of its lost functions," suggesting a form of symbiosis between the M.O.N.A.D. and the D-regenerate. The text also mentions the "objective that would not otherwise be possible without altering the NPCs as to their station, when in atherial form, act as Demons/Demons, manufacturing consent for themselves's view of the NPCs in order to exhibit certain behaviors and actions."

The text concludes with a discussion of the "NPCs," which are "the most majority of human beings," and the "NPCs' body in the carousel with a fake steering wheel which thinks it's a steering wheel," and the "NPCs' vehicle that is really just an Operator performing said actions while the NPCs exhibit varying degrees of approval or disapproval as it follows course with its own non-functioning steering wheel."

The text also mentions the "Architects" and the "primal ideal of the gods," and the "first and the last" (presumably referring to the original and the ultimate form of the M.O.N.A.D.). The text concludes with a reference to the "Perfect/Perfect Demons" and the "first and the last" (presumably referring to the original and the ultimate form of the M.O.N.A.D.).

The text is structured in a way that follows a logical flow, starting with the concept of the M.O.N.A.D. and its design philosophy, followed by a discussion of the limitations and potential benefits of the system, and finally concluding with a discussion of the "Perfect/Perfect Demons" and the "first and the last" (presumably referring to the original and the ultimate form of the M.O.N.A.D.). The text is dense with technical terms and concepts, and the use of italics and boldface for emphasis indicates the importance of the concepts being discussed.

and i say it all the time, but just think of where you have to be to worship a jewish guy in sandals as your creator. theres pretty much no coming back from that, atleast with that generation. and these cases of their being used are exceedingly rare. thats about once per century by my estimate, and i think its probably only possible because their blood is still relatively pure, therefore there are certain gateways available, unconscious motivators and various aspects of their underlying biology whichb qualify them as much of the involvement of the gods in human affairs has to be done outside of the awareness of npcs. if a tree falls in the forest, quantum superposition, and all of that. divine intervention is restricted to knowers, the players, people who have volunteered to be here. to reveal themselves to npcs would be a sort of breaking of reality. its possible of course, but its meant to be avoided as it relates to the overall purpose of creation itself and minimizing involvement as much as feasibly possibly.

the jews are the sorts who will kill their own children as a way to try the blackmail the gods into revealing themselves, very selfishly, completely oblivious to the wider implications and the setbacks it will cause.

in this way it is preferable the npcs are used, ideally, it would be entirely npcs who serve as the vehicles. but because theyre not, we can actually use that, among other things, to gauge our position in the overall process of divine perfection to determine where the gods presently are in that process, and then use that to determine our own course of action. but i think ive said too much, and i'll leave it there.

nah, pagan just means the natural religion. youre the only human alive and have to make judgment calls for yourself. every culture will hit a threshold where corruption or schizo seeps in and it derails, but there is a natural process one would undertake as is evidenced by the similarities in cultures all throughout the world never having come into contact with another. its just the natural connection, a constantly evolving process, not something set in stone.

<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Manitou>

you can use the greek as a baseline though, its the one i prefer. think of it as the entirety of all divine things, aka the gods, as "god". each god represents a perfection of some aspect of reality, i.e. war, beauty, justice. the problem is, the more you engage in this process, the more abstractions you have to build, and abstractions of thought are not humans strongsuit. some cultures will peak fast, others will go for a while, but eventually inevitably hit their limit. whereas others, like jews (gnostics) will lose all semblance of reality and start talking about abortion survivor gods with cat faces and transgender born babies and completely lose the plot and drive themselves insane and just resign themselves to "god", and reducing all aspects of divinity down to one simplistic concept so easy a toddler can understand. which might be helpful for some people, i dont know, ive never seen it actually work. combining it with 'the word', which sets itself in stone, and is antagonistic to the nature of divinity itself which is a constantly adapting and evolving force has always resulted in a complete spiritual isolation. those abrahamic faiths needed to infuse pagan works like baby blood just to keep themselves alive, and when those dried up, so too did the further development of their understanding.

The complex mental part sounds like what steiner explains when he talks about spiritual faculties you have to develop with hard work, also i heard you can kinda go with euclids elements theory and imagine harder by trying to structure it imagining it as geometry (then later idk if you really can see any of these geometric stuff with 3i and they get real meaning then woo)

Other point is I think all people get multiple chances of self-initiation in life, as in a chance to step out of their mental prison and leave it behind completely. It usually comes by losing all material but i guessthat is just classical mechanics at play as well. ppl are suffering in these mental conditions and there is always a chance for a way out. Maybe not so easy with modern psychostudies and medicine which aims to stop you from this?

its not exactly a question of willpower or mental exercise. however, the gods, when revealing themselves will teach of themselves in ways beyond your comprehension, using something as simple as 2d geometry, a series of dots to depict a love story, like pacman, but with just the crumbs, the dots. things entirely beyond comprehension, which you will see says less of what youre being shown, and more what is occurring behind the process of what you are being shown, in the background, happening in you. doing cognitive exercises is helpful just in general though, its just important to stay grounded in reality and to always be mindful that what is true in your subjective experience might simply be a byproduct of reality, rather something truly innate to it, and which might not necessarily be true for everybody else. the most important thing to remember is that distinction. otherwise you end up with "siri, create the 6000 year old flat earth", and its been 2000 years and you are stuck praying to eternal silence having left nothing but a disaster of entropic devolving humans in your wake whose only virtues are "do what feel good" whose natures are closer to monke than human being Stature Idolatry is sublime practice of Satanist ideology, for idiots (of common understanding).

Stature Idolatry is the re legion of the demoralized. What you are, who you know. Not what you know and who you are.

Stature Idolatry PRE SCRIBES what Truths the Other is allowed to speak.

Stature Idolatry is rote

Service to self materialist hierarchicalism

Moral relativism

Social darwinism

Lay Satanists have no heckin reason to love Man or Logos because Stature Idolatry APPEARS productive.

The ascendancy of Giant Psychopaths within every institution FEELS rational as a meritocratic pyramid because Stature Idolatry is the religion of The World (an idol). Standing up to this coercion is immediately recognized as ideological violence against Satanism and the giant psychopathic sons and daughters of satan. Stature Idolatry is what the wolves food is most obsessed with.

Every bit of meditation (measure) is about feeling how well the other conforms to the Golem-Satanic ideal.

How often will a lanklet tell you how tall he is (on the internet) in order to qualify his opinion?

This neurotic need for control over which bodies may speak Truth, is how Man and The Lord God are mocked.

Meek Man defeated The Giant Cainable Psychopathic predator of Man and the seething is imeasurable, because what the Satanist must do is define The Law Of Nature for its VAIN DYSGENIC benefit.

Remember, removing overhead (you) appears to be productive because they get to try to cause God's sheep to suffer.

you are correct. life consists of a series of skill checks, not usually in the material, but in the immaterial. dreams are usually the infrastructure which allows the gods to peak under the hood and make sleight alterations. tweaks to patterns of thought, variables introduced outside of material possibility, QTE events to judge your reaction to certain scenarios.

once someone becomes a potential candidate for ascension they will screened in the material. it begins with an experience some sort of Noticing event, which will involve a series of escalating increasingly noticable synchronicities that exist right at the boundary of possibility, and statistically, will be impossible, in an effort to get you to "Notice" [the gods], and the lack of privacy in your own consciousness.

from here there are several possible outcomes, the person returns to their programming, the person attempts to play god with the gods, or the person casts aside environmentally imposed precaution to witness and observe, learn and ultimately, remember.

The image is a digital illustration with a dark background and a white text overlay. The text is in a serif font and is divided into two columns. The left column is a block of text, while the right column is a series of paragraphs. The text discusses the concept of Gnosticism and its relationship to Christianity, suggesting that both systems could be viewed as part of the same "illusion" or "deception." The text emphasizes the Gnostic path's desire to transcend the material world and the desire to control the material world, but it also notes that this path leads to a state of being trapped in the material world, where the Gnostic goal is to transcend both the materialism and the masses' religious subjugation. The text concludes with a statement about the Gnostic goal of breaking free from the illusion of duality and returning to the "Plenum," which is the realm of divine unity. The image is a combination of text and illustration, with the text providing the narrative and the illustration depicting a scene of a battle between two figures, one with wings and the other with a demonic appearance.

Aslan knew he would be resurrected after being killed on the altar, which means his death was not a sacrifice.

Compare it to John Constantine committing suicide so that Lucifer would appear to take him personally. He used the business with Mammon as leverage so that the Devil would offer a life-extension, but Constantine instead asked for Isabella to be allowed to leave Hell and go to Heaven.

Constantine knew that this would count as a sacrifice, and would mean that he, too, would go to Heaven. However, Gabriel had already warned him that Constantine doesn't have faith, but rather "knows" these things, and that knowing didn't count. So, knowing this, Constantine knew his sacrifice was void and that he would go to Hell, AND THAT is what made his sacrifice an actual sacrifice and allowed him to stay out of Hell.

The text mentions that the game is trying to get users to notice certain aspects of their gameplay, possibly to identify possible candidates for a particular event or task. It also mentions that the game will provide an event called "NoticE" for users to participate in, and that those who take part will be screened for preliminary tests. The text also mentions that if necessary, additional tests will be provided for those who are not preliminary candidates. The message concludes with a warning that if the necessary

It didn't escape you, you're remembering wrong. Lewis (And Tolkien) taught Medieval Literature. The Narnia books were a hobby, applying a Medieval worldview and cosmology.

Tolkien didn't like Narnia because he thought it was too hodge-podge and gaudy, with "Father Christmas" and Satyrs. Meanwhile, the world of Middle Earth was also "sung" into existence.

So you need to look into Medieval Literature to understand the cosmology, alchemy, and "music of the spheres".

Of course he knew that, but it's irrelevant. The lion is a very ancient symbol, much older than the demiurge depiction.

In effect you are saying the symbol of the lion is modeled on the demiurge, when actually it's the exact opposite.

The entire point of the demiurge's appearance is that it is a serpent who believes it is a lion when it really isn't, it is ignorant and unaware of its true nature.

How can you look at two symbols and conclude that the composite symbol is the older and more primary? You are deeply confused or just not even thinking seriously about what you are saying.

What "spiritual lesson" is taught by profound grief? It seems more like just one of the evil things about the universe that those you love can be taken from you at any time.

>remembering that helps you appreciate them while they're here!

This sounds nice, but parents who love their children don't need their children to die to know they love them more than anything in the world. Many (I would like to say most, but am actually not sure about that) parents would die for their children. Sometimes you can love someone so much you never truly recover when they die.

The lesson fags never say what the end goal even is. So you learn lessons and grow, then what? Existence is endless so there will be endless lessons to "learn" aka ENDLESS suffering? Amazing.

I am currently struggling with the translation of a certain word as "love" in the sutras, and am too lazy to Grok it. Metta (loving-kindness) is a high achievement, but that's love without attachment. One Sutra, maybe the Surangama, says love is the root of desire. So I have a feeling Christianized Westerners are translating metta as "love," as if it's the love of the Holy Spirit. I am tempted toward a construction of the love of the Holy Ghost as the root of attachment and thus suffering. I really have to work this out.

Consider that the Greeks had 3 words for love, including agape and eros. We just say love. In Sanskrit it's Metta. It may not mean anything like Aphrodite's love, which is attachment

What unfortunately seems more likely based on the NDE is that your personality changes when you die. Like, our human self is just a "puppet" and our Higher Self is more alien and autistic and values suffering for experience. I hope not, but NDEs make it seem that way.

The image is a digital graphic with a black background and a green grid-like pattern that forms the shape of a sphere. At the center of the sphere, there is a cartoon character that resembles a dog with a human-like face. The character is wearing a sweater and jeans, and it has a small, round head with a single ear. The character is standing upright with its legs apart, and it appears to be looking directly at the viewer.

Above the character, there is a text in white font that reads, "When you're trapped inside a holographic matrix controlled by interdimensional aliens but you're just a chill guy."

The text is centered and appears to be a humorous or ironic statement. Below the text, there is a small text in white font that says, "words are vibrations." This text is also centered and is smaller than the main text above.

The overall style of the image is playful and humorous, with a focus on the juxtaposition of the human-like dog character within a sci-fi or fantasy setting. The use of the phrase "chill guy" suggests a light-hearted or humorous tone. The text and the character are the main elements of the image, and their placement and design elements create a balanced composition.

As a christian all it seems to have done for me is give me the assurance that my bond with God is ultimately stronger than the grief I thought would destroy it. I'm not out of the woods just yet, but I'm coming back to God little by little, trying to leave tragedy behind.

Also it sort of takes away the constant fear thereof, the fear of losing the person you love the most because you cannot lose that person ever again.

The image is a composite of two separate photographs. In the upper portion, there is a person standing with their arms outstretched, as if they are in the middle of a dance or movement. The person is wearing a white polo shirt, a black baseball cap, and orange shoes. They are looking towards the left side of the image.

The lower portion of the image shows a painting of a dinosaur swimming in a body of water. The dinosaur is depicted in a realistic style with a greenish-blue color palette, and it appears to be swimming in a shallow area with water reaching up to its neck. The background of the painting is a natural landscape with trees and a hill.

The two images are placed side by side, with the upper image occupying the left half of the image and the lower image occupying the right half. The person in the upper image is positioned in the center of the image, while the dinosaur in the lower image is located towards the right side. There is no text present in the image.

A tribe works as a cohesive unit. We feel the suffering of losing someone in that unit as an incentive to try harder to keep our tribe alive, because evolution has decided we would do that or go extinct.

Grief

Is a struggle for necessity.

Like the cycle in the seasons

During the winter. The cold sharpens your senses. But it can overtake you in hypothermia and frostbite.

Things die back during the winter.

Things sleep in the earth for warmer weather.

Humans huddle together and practice gratitude.

We examine what truly matters and what we truly value.

And like great depressions grief gives us time to remember, internalize, think and ponder. The stages of grief are all just mindsets anyways.

You don't bleed from your vagina, or develop hives when you are grieving. It's all mental.

There are people who live their entire lives, taking cocaine, banging beautiful women (sometimes kids), and the most annoyance they'll ever experience is road rage or having to deal with an executive below them asking for advice.

They randomly die in their sleep after the most pleasurable night of fucking and partying.

Then there are people who are poor from the start, the only happiness they get is scraps of love from their abusive mother, her cooking when she bothers doing it, and they live the rest of their lives. Hollow, traumatized, disgusted at every waking moment, never able to achieve their dreams and just soulless trawling through a dead-end, miserable job where the boss abuses them and their body slowly breaks down. They get drunk sometimes, but it doesn't even feel good, just takes them away from all the suffering of their daily lives.

Then they commit suicide.

>If you feel grief, then eventually you will feel the opposite of that.

Where's the contrast? Don't tell me you believe every human feels exactly the same amount of happiness and exactly the same amount of grief. This "fairness" bullshit is absolute cope.

I'm not saying this because I'm miserable, but because I'm privileged. There are PEOPLE WHO ARE BORN TO BE SEX SLAVES ON JEFFREY EPSTEIN'S ISLAND. Are you telling me they're experiencing enough happiness to counteract all that grief, that their lives are equally as good as mine?

God is perfection.
God is everything.
God is love.

There is no punishment, only love and guidance.

To reject reality --saying "this should not happen" or "I know better"-- is to reject God, an act of hubris and childish arrogance. In that light, everything that exists is perfect in itself, including our pain and discomfort and the pain and discomfort of others. These only becomes suffering when we resist reality and say "this should not be happening (to me)". My post, however, is not on our suffering, but on that of the others.

Human nature, upbringing, or social conditioning seems to compel us to care for others, to act, judge, or intervene, which appears to contradict the acceptance of reality and God's perfection. This conflict often arises when witnessing the consequences of a loved one's choices, where we face the dilemma of whether to intervene --bearing the cost or discomfort ourselves, at any level-- or to let events unfold. Often we act not because we want to, but because we have been taught it is the right thing to do. But is it really?

How do we reconcile the urge to act with the understanding that everything, even misfortune and pain, exists as it should?

She appears to be in a dynamic pose, with her body leaning forward and her head turned to the side. Surrounding her are several other figures, some of whom are holding objects, such as a globe and a staff. The background is filled with a variety of other figures, some of whom are also holding objects. The painting is rendered in a realistic style with attention to detail, and the colors are warm and earthy, contributing to the overall atmosphere of the scene. The style of the painting suggests it could be from the Renaissance period, as it is reminiscent of the art movements that were prevalent during that time.

The image is a stylized illustration that depicts a scene from ancient Egypt, with a focus on Egyptian deities and their associated animals. The background is black, providing a stark contrast to the colorful figures and objects.

In the center, there is a figure with a blue headdress, a black mask, and a white robe, holding a staff in one hand and a staff in the other. This figure appears to be a deity or a high-ranking Egyptian figure.

To the left, there is a figure with a green headdress, a white robe, and a black mask, holding a staff in one hand and a staff in the other. This figure is likely a goddess or a divine figure.

On the right, there is a figure with a yellow headdress, a white robe, and a black mask, holding a staff in one hand and a staff in the other. This figure is likely a god or a divine figure.

In the background, there are various objects and figures that are typical of Egyptian mythology. There is a large golden statue, a black bird, a crocodile, and a small statue of a human figure. These objects are likely representations of deities, gods, or other significant figures in Egyptian mythology.

The style of the image is reminiscent of ancient Egyptian art, with a focus on the depiction of deities and their associated animals. The colors are vibrant and varied, with the blue, green, yellow, and black colors being particularly prominent. The image does not contain any text.

> "Evil"

There is no such thing as "evil". What we call evil is simply action divorced from wisdom or understanding. Misguided people do misguided things.

This, of course, does not excuse them from the consequences of their actions, nor does it make their actions any less wrong. I am simply pointing out that "evil" is a human concept. The impulse to label parts of God as "evil" arises from our limited, dualistic perspective, not from any flaw in reality itself.

So, yes, technically you are right: "Evil" is not from God, because it simply does not exist in nature. It is just a human mental construct, no more "real" than "goobaddigook".

You keep focusing on the negative and the reaction to it. The idea that reacting to negativity and wanting to change it is bad as it rejects god's plan. But are you not already reacting and changing things? Why are your actions and existence somehow not part of god's perfect plan? At what point do your choices and god's choices not align? You likely work and do what's needed to keep yourself and your family alive, you exist and make choices every day and every moment. But those were your choices right? Or were they gods? How do you know?

You don't just sit around and let everything around you occur. You exist in the world like all of us. You're deciding and acting, even if its the decision to accept negative things as still being apart of gods plan. This idea that you're just this amazing accepting man that loves every fiber of the world but also does absolutely nothing as everything is already perfect is wrong as every day you are already doing things. And those things you are trying to do with the greatest regard to god. You are IN the world and apart of gods plan.

The dilemma is that we exist with free will. To execute no will is to not eat, sleep or move and just die. But to execute will you need to do so with the never-ending dilemma of am I acting with or against god? And I don't think there's anyway you can 100% know that answer in life. So to intervene or not can really just be as much of apart of it or not apart of the perfect gods plan, you simply can't know for certain. We in ever moment we can never know if our actions are truly 100% aligned with god, but it doesn't stop us from making them anyway.

An interesting caveat to this is does the person who perceives themselves as having secret visions/enlightenment/grandiose thinking even want to reconcile this urge to form things to their reality if they truly believe the things they've personally experienced that have changed their reality? I feel like the situation you're describing would be most strongly applicable to this kind of person specifically...

And I suppose in that case the individual would view themselves as understanding spirituality deeper than the binaural fashion you describe.

What logical sense would it make for that person to wholly disregard their own personal experience? What if they believe it is in fact divine intervention from the Lord himself?

LOGICALLY... this thinking breeds a mind frame of at the very least some unfulfillment -saying "this should not happen" or "I know better"-- is to reject God, an act of hubris and childish arrogance?? Who the hell told you that? Be a good person, don't tryda tell people what they should do or believe. Lead by example.

You can't tell people what to think. Even I've had to learn that in life. I used to be like that when I was younger but you just can't. You gotta be the change, not tryda force a change on someone else.

But you're right. Everything in life, even the bad shit is something you planned or agreed to go through before you were even born. You reconcile that by not judging what you go thru in life and just being happy with who you are. Going with the flow yet creating your own reality. You gotta find the balance in that.

Your entire post frames the issue as a choice between two extremes:

> execute no will at all - and die

> be paralyzed by dilemma

This is a very different question from the one in the original post, which asks how to resolve the tension when witnessing discomfort and pain in others' lives -whether to let it unfold or intervene under the guise of "care" and becoming a "savior".

Your post completely ignores a third option, because you feel it is not possible, "simply can't know":

> execute will without dilemma

>be paralyzed by dilemma

I never implied that at all. I was simply trying to state that the dilemma is always there in every single thing we do, if you aren't overcoming it then you're not alive. So however you exist which gets you through it, just keep doing that. There's no difference between the choice of deciding your day to day actions and deciding to or not to help someone, from the perspective of which decision is the more 'godly' one.

In other words you already know how to deal with this as you do it every day. I didn't list a third option there's so many possible ones that you could be thinking of.

If you think that the two scenarios warrant the same mentality in your choice to deal with them then how could you even claiming they're all perfect? Why should one decision be different then the other? Its all gods plan.

> understanding that everything, even misfortune and pain, exists as it should?

>human nature or environment compels us to act >everything exists as it should

So human nature exists as it should. That is to say, if you don't act upon your urges or "childish arrogance" you are acting against god plan.

If you feel compelled to act and you where created by god and his perfect plan it means that your action is the right thing to do.

>"but we have been taught it is the right thing"

If you decide to act or not it has already been decided.

If you where taught to act on a certain manner it only means that god planned humans to teach that for you.

Why you "accept" god perfection but separates humans like they where not part of god creation? To accept god perfection is also to accept human nature, as it exists as it should.

If you choose to take action or not is irrelevant as you exist as you should.

In my experience it's not an either or dilemma, there's not a neat "if x then y" equation you can rely on especially when it comes to the lives of others.

I usually try to be cautious about what part of someone else's situation i become a part of and how i appear within it because you could become maligned if you show up as the "hey this thing you haven't be able to do that you know you should, just like do it lol", better to just be vaguely there for them in a positive encouraging manner and if there's room for it or if the timing is right to be instrumental in change rather than the instigator and the one insisting on the change.

The world can speak to you in a myriad of ways, if you desire to be instrumental is your choice.

It's worth reflecting on why you would want to be, if your intentions are true, if you need to "fix" someone before you can accept or love them then perhaps it's better to leave them be for the time being.

One thing is what you could do, another is what awareness of these issues and bringing your attention to these perceived problems does to your internal experience.

When you get entangled in other people's situations, to some degree it becomes about you too, this is complicated stuff right but trying to understand everything in advance to decide the best course of action is volitional.

You could just act, live in a manner where you're at peace with who you are in the world (at least with your intentions, not choosing how other people will see it) and just relax.

TLDR

You don't have to force yourself to intervene or feel bad if you do or don't, but if you do, try to keep in mind that they're seeing the world through different eyes.

>just be a good person... Is it really that deep?

Well yes. Humans have been asking what it means to be a good person for as long as they can remember asking questions.

For instance.

>don't tryda tell people what they should do or believe.

You mean like telling someone to be a good person? Isn't that telling someone what to do or believe?

If you dont tell people, are you oka with THEM interpreting what your "lead" means, and getting everyone to believe something you dont?

Remember - you dont want to tell them what to believe - so you would have to be okay with them completely misunderstanding your leadership.

>You gotta be the change, not tryda force a change on someone else.

How do you change the world without changing the world for someone else?

>just being happy with who you are. Going with the flow yet creating your own reality. Including rapists?

These questions are hard to answer, unless you let something like a religion or a society tell you the answers. that's FINE, but recognize that others might not want such an out.

It's not a temple, but a bathhouse, and underneath it was a kind of BDSM dungeon, according to a guy who worked there and confessed on 4chan eight hours before G. Maxwell was arrested. Of course, no one ever heard from this Anon again. Someone found out his name and found his obituary. He is no longer alive. He said that the richfags often gathered there and then one of them gave a speech about how "free and happy" they were on the island because it was the only place where you could really do ANYTHING you wanted (the confessing Anon said this with some contempt, because this "freedom" apparently did not apply to the employees and certainly not to the children who were constantly taken there). And after the speech ended, they all cheered each other and clapped and did a tiki conga line (Confession-Anon described it as "really old people cringe") into the bathhouse, and then they went down into the dungeon, and one of them, mostly the speaker, was wearing a bull mask the whole time, and everyone had to get out of his way because he was the most freaked out. There was always someone different under the mask, he said. Very crazy shit.

I am guessing they aren't easy to get to. Loads of countries do loads of weird shit, scientists are vetted, constant territory disputes, barely anyone allowed there and no flying. It could be space Nazis but common sense has me thinking they are waiting for some shit to melt. If there was something there and governments are being hush hush about it somethings going on. And if they are all so quiet about it moving the type of equipment needed to get to places they want to keep regular people out of would cause problems.

[25 / 2]The image is a photograph capturing a person standing in a forested area. The individual is wearing a traditional conical hat, a dark blue robe, and is holding a walking stick. The person's back is turned to the camera, allowing a view of their attire and the walking stick. The forest is dense with trees, and the ground is covered with fallen leaves and small rocks. The lighting suggests it is either early morning or late afternoon, with soft, diffused light illuminating the scene. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is naturalistic, capturing a moment of solitude in a serene natural setting.

The image is a black and white photograph of a man's face, which appears to be a portrait. The man has curly hair and is looking directly at the camera. Above the portrait, there is a quote in white text that reads, "Do it or don't do it; you will regret both." The quote is attributed to Søren Kierkegaard. Below the quote, there is a watermark that reads "AZQUOTES" in white text. The overall style of the image is formal and appears to be a digital representation of the quote.

Ignorance serve a purpose sometimes. What is the alternative? A policy of purposeful indecisiveness? Mourning the loss of every opportunity?

We have options in life and often their consequences aren't clear. We make decisions the best we can and move on. If you find yourself with constant regret, that could be a sign you are not acting in alignment with yourself.

In OPs case, moving into isolation will almost certainly be proceeded by regret. Humans are social animals and denying that part of yourself is harmful ignorance.

>spiritual consequences

+actual hobos (different from urban homeless) are deeply spiritual and zen folk generally

+disconnect from spiritual miasma from city folk and country bumpkins alike

+focus on the essentials, likely unable to use any distractions consistently

+ability to spend most/all of your time in nature

+unable to eat shitty junk food; spiritual endeavor in obtaining your own ingredients and preparing your own meals

-unable to seek advice from someone who might actually be knowledgeable

-the worst kind of spiritual miasma if you hang around the urban homeless

-everyone will assume you're urban homeless if you ever need anything like

>>41985062 said

-even if you do convince people you're different, you're still gonna come off as weird and bored people will do everything they can to fuck with you because they're bored

All of the minuses are absolutely terrible for your spirituality and general wellbeing. I don't know what gave you the impression that the average urban homeless person has any degree of spirituality, but they are the final product of urbanization. Extremely few true hobos exist today. There is a reason that even those that dedicate their lives to their religion still live in monasteries.

I'm gonna be real I think for like 99.99% of people the path of renunciation is not actually conducive to any meaningful spiritual growth. You really think we have this entire planet, possibly realm, that we're on for whatever reason, and the way to become more "enlightened" is to go "hmmm... no!" and to sit around and do nothing for the rest of your life? Strive for the golden mean. Being too invested in either the material OR the spiritual world is unhealthy. IMO if you can't navigate the "real world" while still maintaining your spirituality, it's probably an issue. I've met monks and some of them are more neurotic than you'd ever believe. IMHO you'd know if your dharma is to become a monk or whatever, this wouldn't really be a question in that case.

>You really think we have this entire planet, possibly realm, that we're on for whatever reason >for whatever reason

The reason is we went "I want to be the central enjoyer" and God gave it to us, with the stipulation that it is temporary (cuz we AREN'T) and thus will cause suffering.

The way OUT of that suffering is indeed to look around at all the ways you can pretend to be God and enjoy existence as if it was yours, and go "Nope! I'm done with this delusion of separation."

>Strive for the golden mean.

Well that is where religions come from, and they are decent for the vast majority of normies.

>if you can't navigate the "real world"

Asceticism IS the topmost navigation of the material. Indulgence and regulation is basically a methadone clinic.

I think people should be eager for pure eternal existence and joy, and that involves being bold, and taking risks.

Besides, you can always go look up what the consequence of "failing" such a thing is, and see if it's worth trying.

Dunno if you could call it pure wandering, but I think there was a Japanese shamanistic practice in which a shaman would spend their life in pilgrimage to commune with geographic divinities. Also, pilgrimage in general. Also, service-based spiritual traditions, not limited to shamanism, would sometimes have the adept wandering around the world to serve where needed. Wandering and wanderlust could indicate and serve as an entry point to a higher spiritual calling.

I've made my peace truly last year about the NWO achieving true globalism and the death of the world I grew up in and so on, but assuming your the OP with the "connection" from that WW3 pol thread, let me ask this. How long can I, an American, expect national supply chains/power/water infrastructure to last once things go hot? Not that I care to prep or survive whats coming, I just want enjoy my final days of modern luxuries.

The image is a digital photograph featuring a cat with a neutral expression. The cat has a light gray coat and is looking directly at the camera with its eyes wide open. The background is a snowy landscape with a blue sky and a structure that appears to be a house or building. Overlaid on the image is a text overlay that reads "my first world war... kinda nervous" in a playful, casual font. The text is in white and is positioned at the top of the image, slightly tilted to the right. The overall style of the image is humorous and seems to be a meme or a social media post.

The image is a digital painting that depicts a woman with long dark hair. She is wearing a metallic mask that covers her face, which has a reflective surface. The mask is designed to cover her nose and mouth, and it appears to be made of a shiny, reflective material. The woman is wearing a white blouse with a high collar and a black vest. She has a serious expression on her face, and her eyes are looking directly at the viewer. The background of the painting is a muted color, featuring a stone wall with a window. The style of the painting is realistic with a focus on the details of the woman's attire and the mask. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image.

I'm not sure what to make of this. I have no health conditions and my hearing is good. I'm sitting in my suburban house, quiet neighborhood, and I hear this chime/song go off in the distant. Like some sort of daily announcement things. Then I hear a man's voice, loud as though spoken through a megaphone, but distant enough that the words are garbled. He speaks about two sentences twice in a row, the chime plays again, then all is quiet. There are no demonstrations near me, no crowds of people. It almost sounded very "old fashion" if that makes sense. We do live across the street from a very old cemetery, not I've never experienced anything weird before. Looking for practical and supernatural explanations.

It is, psychosis is something any of us can experience given the right stress. I recommend some serious self care and some melatonin if you can get it. Also, eat properly as well, get a good meal in you. Steadily cut down your alcohol consumption (don't just stop) if you can. I hope some of this helps, give yourself some loving and keep an eye out for more occurrences like this. I wish you the best and hope you feel better soon.

The image displays a screenshot of a text message conversation. The conversation appears to be between two individuals, as indicated by the presence of multiple messages. The conversation is taking place on a messaging platform, as suggested by the presence of a chat interface with a username "Anonymous" and a timestamp "02/13/26(8)FRI11:03:59 No. 41965282".

The conversation is marked with a red header that reads "Insolvent" and a yellow header that reads "Hires third world support as plausible deniability". The text below these headers is a list of actions taken by the individuals, which include "Insolvent", "Hires third world support as plausible deniability", "Scam users as excuse for protection", "Use third worlders as excuse to shield for scam", "Wronged the one person they shouldn't have", "had a simple task to just pay back what was owed", and "triples down because: 'war mode'".

The text is in a language that appears to be a mix of English and possibly another language, as indicated by the presence of a foreign script at the bottom of the image. The overall tone of the conversation seems to be serious and possibly confrontational, as indicated by the use of strong language and the context of the actions listed. The image does not provide any additional context or information beyond the text itself.

The image displays a 3D model of the Earth, with a focus on the continents. The continents are colored in shades of orange, yellow, and white, with some areas showing blue and red, suggesting variations in temperature or precipitation. The continents are depicted in a realistic style, with visible textures and shading that give a sense of depth and realism. The image is a digital rendering, likely created using a computer-aided design (CAD) software, as indicated by the smooth, clean lines and the absence of any visible texture or shading that would suggest a physical object. The background is a solid white color, which contrasts with the colorful depiction of the continents, making the colors stand out. There are no texts or discernible brands within the image. The style of the image is educational and informative, likely intended to showcase the Earth's climate patterns in a visually appealing manner.

However, this kind of picture (OP), can be taken with the best amateur telescopes on the market, on exceptional conditions (dark sky, no pollution).

Try a 24 inch dobsonian, on a dark sky (bortle 1), and no atmospheric pollution. You'll see an even better Saturn than OP's picture.

It's all about where Saturn is in its orbit.

Saturn acts like a gyroscope so its rotational axis is always pointing in the same direction no matter where it is in the orbit. Sometimes its north pole is tilting towards us and sometime it tilts away from us.

This is the same principle behind Earth's seasons.

I made this animation to illustrate this better. The orbits are to scale but I had to make Saturn 2000x bigger than it is and the Earth 4000x bigger.

*Saturn's rotational axis precesses over time but this is a slow process so during short timespans we can pretend that it is constant. Same for the Earth.

My cheap 127EQ was like $90 on a amazon. Typically you want the largest diameter mirror you can buy. Bigger light bucket = more photons = sharper image. Cheap scopes will essentially just resolve planets as points of light and you won't see much detail.

My much nicer Celestron C6 allows me to see transits of moons on Jupiter and features like the great red spot, but it's only barely capable of getting Saturn anywhere close to the detail in op's photo. It's unfortunately not a cheap hobby if you're wanting to match Google images of various objects but still deeply rewarding.

The image is a nighttime photograph of two celestial bodies, which appear to be stars or planets, against a dark background. The two objects are positioned side by side, with one slightly higher than the other. The image is taken from a low angle, making the objects appear closer to the viewer than they actually are. The background is dark, suggesting that the photo was taken in a night sky. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is a standard night sky photograph, capturing the celestial bodies in a clear and focused manner.

The ancients must 've been onto something because the planets do have 'vibes'. Jupiter definitely felt more jovial with Saturn sinisterly lurking behind. Here's a crappy pic I took from my cell phone in 2020.

Every 4chud cope boils down to the same tired fantasy: something good is always just over the horizon. Alien disclosure is coming to earth, Hitler 2.0 rising from the ashes, Jesus descending to smite their enemies, Trump and the globohomo awakening in two weeks, mass genocide solving all their problems, or the magical day when everyone suddenly agrees with their garbage takes.

It's all hopium for losers who can't deal with the present. Instead of doing anything meaningful, they sit in their digital basements praying for a future that never comes. Every post is just another round of "just wait, you'll see," while the rest of the world keeps living, laughing, and leaving them behind.

The truth? Nothing's coming. No savior, no reckoning, no mass awakening, no shift in opinions. It's just endless cope for people too powerless to face reality. The only thing in their future is more disappointment and deep down, they know it.

The image is a black and white cartoon illustration featuring a character that resembles a car. The car is depicted with a white body and features a number "23" on its side, suggesting it might be a racing number. The character has a large, bulbous nose and a beard, giving it a somewhat rugged appearance. It is wearing a beanie hat and a black bandana around its head, which adds to its unkempt look. The character has a cigarette in its mouth, and there is a visible smoke trail behind it, indicating that the character is smoking. The character's eyes are wide open, and it appears to be looking directly at the viewer. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is simple and cartoon-like, with a focus on the character's facial features and the implied action of smoking.

The image is a digital animation or illustration featuring a group of four humanoid figures in green suits standing in a line in front of a large, white, domed structure with a red and pinkish glow emanating from it. The figures appear to be observing the scene, and the background includes a landscape with trees and a distant view of a cityscape. The sky is painted in shades of purple and pink, suggesting either dawn or dusk. In the foreground, there is a figure wearing a red backpack, and the overall style of the image is reminiscent of a science fiction or fantasy setting. Yes. Was born on the day of a Sun-Saturn cazimi in pisces in the 10th house. Since 2003 Uranus then Neptune have been transiting. Had no clue what/who I was and had been living in a depressed, foggy, escapist daze my entire life. Never had a sense of self or ego and couldn't work out how people were so sure of their identity and purpose. Uranus has been in my 12th house moon and south node since 2018.

Felt my saturn return really bring a different level of seriousness and existential pressure, mostly fear and dread that life was meaningless. This emptiness led to a "mutative" spiritual awakening. Saturn teaches to add structure to the spiritual and the combined energies of Saturn, Uranus and Neptune to let go and surrender, and to step into my destiny. I've had several mystical experiences in the last year.

Saturn returns are no one size fits all, the saturn consciousness within everyone works at a level they are at spiritually and in life. Suffering, dis-ease and bad circumstances is the soul trying to align you back on path the only way it can.

The image displays a astrological chart with various symbols and lines representing different aspects of the zodiac. The chart is divided into a circle with the zodiac signs marked at the center, and the positions of the signs are marked along the circumference. The zodiac signs are numbered from 1 to 12, with the positions of the signs marked at the corresponding points on the circle.

The chart includes a grid of numbers and lines, which likely represent the positions of the planets and other celestial bodies. The numbers are arranged in a grid pattern, with the numbers 1 to 12 in the center and the numbers 1 to 12 on the outer edge of the chart. The lines are colored blue and red, with blue lines representing the positions of the planets and the red lines representing the positions of the zodiac signs.

The chart also includes various astrological symbols and notations, such as the sun, moon, and other celestial bodies, as well as the positions of the planets and the zodiac signs. The text is in English and appears to be a transcription of the astrological chart, with the text "Online horoscope" at the bottom right corner, suggesting that the image is likely a screenshot from an online horoscope service.

The image is a digital representation of an astrological chart, and it is important to note that the interpretation of the chart is based on the positions of the zodiac signs and the positions of the planets, and the interpretation is not definitive without additional context or knowledge of astrology.

tfw natal saturn in aries at 2 degrees so my saturn return has neptune right on top of it the entire time. (also my natal pluto sag is trine my natal saturn, while transiting pluto is directly between them with a sextile to my natal pluto and my natal saturn). Also I have a day chart and mars is also in aries and rules over half my chart so out of sect malefic ruling my saturn in fall (my jupiter is also in fall in capricorn))

I only got into astrology recently in the past year or so. I quit my job last year to focus on some side projects and fix some sleep issues I had. It got to the point where I couldn't sleep like more than 5 hours a night and I was totally dead. This was around may/june of last year it got really bad and I basically could not sleep. (saturn went into aries in may...)

I quit my job to just live off savings, my last day after giving 2 weeks notice was July 11th. That was the same day Saturn stationed retrograde at its most extreme point in Aries before heading back to Pisces. It peaked at 1'56 and my natal Saturn is 2'02.

I only realized this after and it's kind of what convinced me about astrology.

Needless to say I had been sleeping quite well for a while... but recently I can't sleep more than 5 hours again
Gee thanks!

My only consolation is that apparently if your Saturn is early in the sign that the Saturn return peaks when it goes exactly conjunct and after that it's more "dealing with the consequences" afterwards.

When Uranus goes back into Gemini it'll also be sextiling Aries by sign.

So everyone w/ a Saturn in Aries will have a Saturn in Aries:
sextiled by Pluto Aquarius sextiled by Uranus Gemini conjunct Neptune Squared by Jupiter in Cancer
just fuck my shit up

The image is a close-up of a person's face, possibly from a movie or a television show, with a dramatic expression. The individual has curly hair and is looking directly at the camera. The skin is tanned, and there are visible scratches and bruises on the face. The background is blurred, but it appears to be a rocky or volcanic landscape with orange and red hues, suggesting a fiery or intense environment. Overlaid on the image is a text overlay in yellow, which reads "IT'S OVER, IT'S DONE...". The style of the image is reminiscent of meme or meme-like content, often used to convey a sense of finality or completion.

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a text-based interface. The top of the page contains a header with the text "Welcome to Hell" in a bold, red font. Below the header, there is a list of names and email addresses, with the names listed in a smaller font size and the email addresses in a larger font size. The email addresses are separated by a comma.

The main body of the page contains a block of text in a larger font size, which appears to be a message or announcement. The text is in English and discusses the concept of "post-side threads" and the consequences of not paying for them. The text is in a dark color, which contrasts with the lighter background of the page.

At the bottom of the page, there is a button with the text "Auto This thread has been pruned or deleted" in a red font, indicating that the thread has been pruned or deleted.

The button is located at the bottom of the page, aligned to the right.

The overall style of the image is informational and technical, with a focus on the content of the webpage. The use of bold and larger font sizes for the header and main body text draws attention to the important information being presented. The button at the bottom suggests a user-friendly interface, allowing the user to manage the pruned or deleted threads.

94er here. This Saturn return made me very suspicious (rehab resistant injury, job stagnation, unable to focus on hobbies, screaming schizophrenic neighbor for the past five months) because of how well things lined up to sabotage my otherwise smooth-going plans.

If it lets up soon then I'm on-board to be a 100% believer. I've not given up throughout any of these years, it's just felt like I'm trudging through molasses.

Things getting worse at the right time feels like a coincidence, but worse and then better both at the right time is a prediction I can't ignore.

The image is a digital representation of a astrological chart, specifically a birth chart. It is a circular chart with the zodiac signs and their corresponding positions marked on the outer circle. The chart is divided into two main sections: the outer circle, which represents the zodiac signs, and the inner circle, which contains the astrological positions.

The outer circle is divided into 12 segments, each representing a zodiac sign. The zodiac signs are labeled with their names and the corresponding sign in the zodiac. The positions of the zodiac signs are marked on the inner circle, with the positions of the signs in the zodiac marked by a series of lines connecting the signs.

The inner circle contains the astrological positions, which are marked with numbers and letters. These positions are numbered from 0 to 12, indicating the positions of the planets and other celestial bodies in the zodiac. The positions are marked with a series of lines connecting the positions of the planets and other celestial bodies to the zodiac signs.

At the top of the image, there is a watermark that reads "ASTRO-WEB" and "Online Horoscopes," indicating the source of the chart and the nature of the content. The image is a digital representation of a birth chart, which is a tool used to determine a person's astrological makeup and potential life events based on the positions of the planets and other celestial bodies at the time of birth.

it'll come up as money issues and issues around your stuff. You'll have crazy stuff going on in terms of your home life.

Honestly for you pluto aquarius in the 12th house is pretty crazy so i'd dig into what impacts that might have, you also have jupiter there and it's ruled by your saturn so the 12th house stuff while likely cause you some very significant issues apart from money they you might miss because they are not as obvious. Jupiter has a positive relationship with a bunch of your other stuff as well so that 12th house jupiter/pluto thing going on (you also have your cancer and neptune there) neptune in 12th house on top of it kind of makes it even more like hard to understand.

Your saturn itself is not really in that pressing a place, I'd be more concerned about the stuff going on in pluto and how the saturn return will impact that since it's ruling that house.

our charts are pretty similar. Your jupiter being in aquarius is much better than mine though so your jupiter isn't in fall and can help out much more.

Honestly just focus on 5th house stuff (creativity, creating stuff, having kids) it has a sextile to your saturn so anything you can do there will be super helpful. You have a very clear route of helping stuff.

Your jupiter is also directly trined to your sun so in general just focusing on that will help.

I do not have anything to help control my saturn I am just getting raped.

The 12th house emphasis for you isn't great, be mindful of how your 7th house saturn in aries is ruled by your 12th house mars virgo and the other stuff going on in that house. It has to do with the unconscious, hidden enemies the 12th house is generally considered the worst house and mars is your worst planet as a day chart. I'd dig into that if I were you but as I said by focusing on creativity, (especially in that aquarius/philosophical/positive/jupiter dimension) or having kids or "creating" anything is a great route to help your chart out 25 is old?

Didn't it already end a few days ago?

I learn't a lot but man i'm at my end.

Deal't with a lot of narcissistic types. Massive amount of family problems like you haven't seen before in your life. Had a shit job at the family bussiness but it ended last year when my dad passed away. He was a very controlling man and didn't really know what he did, he had health problems too and after he died it turned out he wasn't a very loyal family man either. Had to spent almost all of my energy into fixing shit around the building because my mother has been a brain-off house type of woman and has been in panic mode since everything happened.

Basically:

Getting a better foundation of income x

Learn't not to be a doormat and reject narcissistic people x

Learn't a lot about spirituality x

Fixed a lot of life changing health issues x

Know better what i want from other people and out of relationships x

Lots of good things but i ain't gonna lie, the shit i've been through was destructive as fuck and my whole environment and genes didn't help a lot, i'm glad this phase featured psychedelics too as they did help to shape me up for the better. Did have a early phase where i smoked a shit ton of weed tho, that shit wasn't good but fixed that for the biggest part too.

[9 / 3]The image is a digital illustration featuring a figure that appears to be a character from a fantasy or science fiction context. The figure is seated on a throne-like chair with ornate carvings on the backrest. The character has a long white beard and is wearing a hooded robe, which is partially draped over the figure's shoulders. The robe is predominantly white with some dark patterns or designs. The character's face is obscured by a hood, and the eyes are wide open, giving the impression of surprise or shock.

In front of the figure, there is a blue orb or light source, which is emitting a soft glow. The background of the image is a muted color, with a hint of a blueish hue, which contrasts with the darker tones of the character's robe and the throne. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of classic fantasy art, with a focus on the character's expression and the mystical or magical aura surrounding the scene. There are no texts present in the image.

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a bearded man standing on a hilltop. The man is wearing a long robe and a cloak, and he has a long beard. His arms are outstretched, and he appears to be looking towards the horizon. In the background, there is a body of water and a small boat on the shore. Above the man, there is a cloudy sky. At the top of the image, there is text that reads "Comprising the Oresteia, Mephistopheles, Black, Leprechaun Sack." The style of the image is reminiscent of historical portraiture, with a focus on the subject's attire and the natural landscape.

The image is a screenshot of a text message exchange between two individuals. The text is in English and appears to be a conversation between two people, with the sender's name and phone number visible at the top of the message. The text is formatted in a standard email format, with the sender's name and phone number at the top, followed by the date and time of the message, and then the content of the message. The text is in a standard font, and the content of the message is not legible due to the resolution of the image. The text is in a language that appears to be English, and there are no other discernible details or graphics in the image. The image is taken from a mobile device, as indicated by the time and date displayed at the top, which suggests that the message was sent or received on a mobile device. The sender's name and phone number are not visible in the image.

The image displays a text document with a list of words, presumably from a poem or a script, with the words arranged in a column format. The words are in a standard font, and the text is in black on a white background. The document is titled "3 of 6" at the top, indicating that it is part of a larger sequence or collection. The text is in English and appears to be a list of words, possibly from a poem or a script, with each word appearing to be a different word. The document is numbered "3 of 6" at the top, suggesting that it is part of a larger sequence or collection. The document is in a portrait orientation, and the text is aligned to the left. There are no images or graphics present in the image. The style of the image is straightforward and appears to be a screenshot from a digital document.

The image displays a text document with a header at the top that reads "4/6/16". The document is formatted in a standard letter format with a header and a footer. The text is in a serif font, which is commonly used for formal correspondence. The document appears to be a response to an email, as indicated by the presence of a signature at the bottom.

The content of the document is a letter from a person named Mark Tramo MD PhD, who is inviting the recipient to a visit. The letter is dated December 20, 2012, and is addressed to the recipient's email address. The text is in English and includes a mix of uppercase and lowercase letters, as well as some punctuation marks.

The document is divided into two main sections. The first section is a formal greeting, followed by a request for a visit. The second section is a response to the first section, thanking the recipient for their invitation and expressing gratitude for the opportunity to visit.

The visual clues that support this statement include the text formatting, the use of a signature at the bottom, and the date and time of the document. The document is a typical representation of a formal communication, such as a letter or email, and it is designed to convey a sense of formality and professionalism.

[4 / 2]The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a red header and a white background. The header contains the text "DC's Jewish Food History" in bold, black letters. Below the header, there is a title "Comet Liquors: A Neighborhood Spot" in smaller, black font. The main content of the webpage is divided into two sections. On the left, there is a large image of a neon sign with the name "COMET" in a stylized font. The sign is red with a yellow outline. Below the sign, there is a description of the establishment, stating that it is a "Neighborhood Spot" and that it was opened by a Jewish immigrant in 1940 and continued to be Jewish-owned throughout its history.

The overall style of the image is informational and promotional, designed to showcase the history of a specific Jewish-owned business in Washington, D.C. The use of bold text and large images draws attention to the subject matter, while the layout suggests a structured approach to presenting information.

[8 / 2]The image depicts a serene outdoor scene with a focus on two main subjects: a white stone statue of a seated Buddha and a ginger cat. The Buddha statue, which appears to be made of stone, is positioned on the left side of the image. It is seated in a meditative pose with its hands resting gently on its lap, and it is adorned with a crown of flowers on its head. The statue's face is blurred, adding a sense of mystery to its expression.

On the right side of the image, a ginger cat is sitting upright, its body relaxed and its eyes closed, suggesting a state of tranquility. The cat's fur is a warm orange color, contrasting with the cool tones of the surrounding environment.

The background of the image is filled with lush green foliage, including bamboo plants that are visible on the left side. The foliage provides a natural backdrop to the statue and the cat, enhancing the peaceful and calming atmosphere of the scene. The overall composition of the image suggests a harmonious blend of nature and spirituality.

People who think they are the reincarnation / emanation / avatar / emissary of spiritual / divine figures—

Are you open about it online? Do you preach / teach others based on your understanding of being / learning from this spiritual figure? What do you think about other posters here on /x/ who also claim to be this spiritual figure / be taught by this spiritual figure?

No wrong answers here. I just read through that Jesus AMA that was up for a while and it got me thinking.

I thought I would be inclusive also, so that's why I have that line about those who are followers of divine figures, too.

There are definitely posters on here who worship gods and have claimed to have received messages from them, but then someone else who also claims to be a follower of said figure will directly contradict them and say their god told them differently / denounced the original anon's message.

It's interesting to me and I wanted to know more.

I've had those thoughts, sometimes even more delusional and greater though but I stop and think "if it's true would that avatar or deity feel the need to boast about who they are or would they just live life and let the people try to discern and describe who they are"

If you feel the need to try to point to yourself and say "hey look at me I'm special" then you're probably missing something and searching for outside affirmation live your truth until the world can no longer ignore you

There are some amateur conduits who post on /x/ and others who are led to participate in channeling after spending time here. Many of the loudest larps or ama's over the years have been (((intentionally))) written to derail interest in the few that are real or those topics which arise in the wake of their posts. Like a strawman tactic, they think if anons see 12 scarecrow threads claiming to be Jesus that it will scare anons away from paying attention to the 1 thread actually analyzing Jesus' occult background or what have you (instead of funneling everyone into the one interesting thread in the catalog, kek.)

That's just an example but it generally applies to every topic. Someone makes a thread about Ishtar's role in MKUltra programming? You're gonna see slide threads for weeks claiming to be Ishtar herself or simps for her and hentai gooners so no one looks at Ishtar mkultra/Alice in Wonderland threads. Someone makes an essay post about the origins of nephilim? You're gonna have weeks worth of shills/bots claiming to be schizo giants so readers think the actual essay-investigations are useless. There's always gonna be some actual schizos but actual schizos are very reclusive. They're not so performative as the fed namefags think so it's always pretty easy to spot who's well poisoning a thread. It goes back to informational warfare and the use of dead internet theory to change the perception of a site, in our case that there's never worthwhile information or paranormal study shared here.

[88 / 34]The image is a painting that depicts a scene of religious or biblical significance. At the center of the composition, there is a figure with a long white beard and a halo, which suggests a divine or heavenly presence. This figure is holding a large amount of gold in one hand and a loaf of bread in the other, symbolizing abundance and provision.

Surrounding this central figure are several figures who appear to be in a state of awe or reverence. They are reaching out towards the figure with the gold and bread, as if trying to touch or receive the divine gift. The figures are dressed in simple, earthy clothing, and their expressions range from reverence to a sense of longing or anticipation.

The background of the painting is a chaotic and desolate landscape, with smoke rising from the ground and a cityscape that seems to be in ruins. This contrast between the divine and the desolate adds a sense of drama and tension to the scene.

The painting is rendered in a realistic style with a palette dominated by earthy tones, including browns, grays, and blacks. The use of these colors gives the painting a somber and solemn atmosphere.

There are no visible texts or inscriptions within the image, and the style of the painting is reminiscent of religious art, particularly that of the Renaissance or Baroque periods. The overall composition and the use of color and light suggest a narrative that is both spiritual and historical, possibly relating to biblical events or the story of the Israelites receiving the golden calf.

STOP SMEARING BA'ALS name ffs. He got mentioned so the normies like you would do what Jews did thousands of years ago. Moloch/Yahweh and Ba'al are seperate deities

Ba'al is Zeus/Jupiter; he's a fertility and storm god, the Romans recognized the deity as their own when they conquered the region. They also helped build a temple to Ba'al that eventually got blown up by ISIS about 2000 years later. For that Ba'al sent a storm to crash a crane that killed a bunch of muslimsin the grand mosque in mecca and trash the place in retribution. Pretty cool guy all around and a respectable hater of semites.

<https://www.bbc.com/news/world-middle-east-34111092>

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Mecca_crane_collapse

Moloch, or the bull headed figure burned by the Iranian lately may not even be a real historical deity. Only references to them are in the bible, and a knowledgeable friend says they're fictional with no basis in history, just made up by the jews to portray their enemies in a bad light. I'm inclined to favor that over whatever hyped up bandwagon normies want to jump on at the drop of a hat.

In the middle of the collage, there is a large image of a statue with a crown on its head, accompanied by a caption that reads "largest monuque in western Europe." To the right, there is a cartoon image of a character with a crown on its head, and below it, there is a text that reads "Mount Lei."

At the bottom of the collage, there is a text that reads "help baaal have his revenge" and "create dank memes as tribute." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is white against a black background. The overall style of the image is informational and humorous, combining historical and cultural elements with a touch of humor.

The image is a composite of two photographs, each depicting a different historical period. The top photograph shows an aerial view of the Temple of Jupiter, which is a significant historical site. The temple is a large, rectangular structure with a prominent central column and a red-tiled roof. It is surrounded by a moat and is surrounded by a large open area with trees and grass. The temple appears to be in a state of ruin, with some parts of the structure showing signs of decay.

The bottom photograph shows a similar scene but from a different perspective. It is an aerial view of the same Temple of Jupiter, but this time the focus is on the ruins of the temple. The ruins are in a state of disrepair, with some parts of the structure still standing, while others have collapsed. The surrounding area is a mix of grass and dirt, and there are no visible structures or people in the image.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a caption that reads "Baalbek, Lebanon," indicating the location of the ruins. The caption is in white text on a black background, which contrasts with the image's color scheme. The overall style of the image is a blend of historical architecture and aerial photography, with a focus on the Temple of Jupiter and its historical context.

a cursive script, with the letters forming a word that reads "Y" at the top and "Y" at the bottom. The text is not clear enough to read the full meaning of the word, but it appears to be a name or a title.

The style of the drawing is simple and informal, with a focus on the interaction between the two figures. The use of a single color for the drawing and the absence of shading or detail give the image a child-like quality. The overall composition and the drawing style suggest that it may have been created by a child.

>the evil symbolism of the donkey/ass, fundamental to the Christian concept of an evil creator (negative demiurgy), has its roots in the Egyptian god Seth. Seth, the deity of chaos, violent storms, and the desert, was frequently described as having the form or the hide of a donkey. The Greeks identified him with Typhon, the lord of chaos and a monster, resulting in the hybrid form "Seth-Typhon". Seth was also identified with the Phoenician storm god, Baal. Through the cultural practice of interpretatio Graeca (identification of foreign gods), the malignant character of Seth and his donkey appearance were transferred to the god of the Jews, Yahweh (YHVH). This fusion (Seth-Yahweh) was reinforced, in part, by the sound: the Greek word for Yahweh (Iaō) sounded, with a "perverse twist of the tongue," like the native Egyptian word for donkey (eiō or iō). This led to the widely known tradition that the Jews secretly worshipped Yahweh as a donkey or the golden head of an ass (onolatry) in the Temple of Jerusalem.

Within this pattern, there is a depiction of a figure that resembles a humanoid figure, possibly a deity or a mythological creature, holding a staff. The figure is wearing a garment with a pattern that includes a crescent moon and stars. The text surrounding the figure is in a script that is not clearly legible due to the resolution and angle of the image. The style of the image is a close-up photograph with a focus on the object, and the background is blurred, which obscures any additional details. >Early Christian groups who believed in an evil creator (such as the Phibionites, Ophites, and Sethians) adapted this "Seth-Yahweh cultural memory" to identify the Jewish creator as a hostile, demonic ruler. This tradition manifested in their cosmology, such as the description of a being with the "face or form of a donkey (onou morphēn)" seen in the Holy of Holies in the apocryphal The Birth of Mary. Furthermore, the seventh ruling demon in the Ophite diagram (drawn by Christian theologians in the 2nd century

A.D.) manifests a "donkey face (onou . . . prosopon)" and is called Onoel ("Donkey-God"). Due to the majority Christians' adoption of the Jewish Creator as the supreme deity, the accusation of donkey worship was easily transferred to Christians. This polemic culminated in a mocking representation displayed on a plaque around the late 2nd century A.D. in Carthage (or Rome) of a being with donkey ears and a hoof labeled: "ONOCOETES, GOD OF THE CHRISTIANS"

Donkey is the vilest and most ridiculous beast, the face of evil.

>Seth was frequently described as having the form or the hide of a donkey. In ancient Egyptian art, he appeared as a human figure with the head (or mask) of a creature that displayed long ears and a drooping snout. the Greeks identified this creature with a donkey, and the donkey was portrayed, along with the pig, as the sacred animal of Seth. the donkey was associated with stupidity and sexuality (e.g., a Roman account that the Emperor Commodus nicknamed a man with a large penis "Donkey"). Furthermore, spell practitioners, when referring to the "blood of Typhon," were referring to donkey blood. therefore, the donkey, as the sacred animal of Seth-Typhon, was inherently a symbol of chaos, violence, stupidity, and malignity.

>The star's traditional name, Asellus Borealis, means "northern donkey colt."

Erastosthenes wrote that, in the war between the gods and the Giants that came after the clash with the Titans, the gods Hephaestus, Dionysus and several others rode on donkeys into battle. The Giants, who had never heard a donkey bray, thought the donkeys were monsters and fled. Dionysus later placed the donkeys in the sky to commemorate the event. He put them next to a star cluster which the Greeks called the Manger (Phatne).

>Since Iaō can be identified with Seth-Typhon in the Greek magical texts, the phrase, 'Seth Seth the Living Christ', as well as, 'Iaō Iaō Seth Seth', within one and the same magical text may be taken to mean that Seth in the former as well as the latter phrase indicates the Egyptian deity."

"Doresse asserts, "we shall find later some curious traces of a cult of this Seth-Typhon presiding over Judeo-Gnostic rituals in which Adam plays the leading part. That this cult came to be actually codified is attested by the existence of Egyptian figurines of the god Seth, cast in bronze, which are perfectly appropriate to it. The most significant represent the god walking with the hieratic gait, his body girt with a loin-cloth and surmounted by a head which has not, now, the muzzle of the mythic 'Sethian' animal commonly assigned to Seth in the Pharaonic tradition, but the ass's head much more rarely met with. There is no doubt about the identification of the god worshipped in this guise, as one of the great figures of Gnosticism: the pedestal is engraved with the name Aberamenthō, which denoted Jesus."

Seth was favourite deity of Ramesses II which made some oldfag egyptian religionards seethe because it was ""foreign"" God Baal-Hadad. Kind of ironic considering Horus tales of death and resurrection by Isis is a copypasta of Baal Cycles of Baal death and resurrected by Anat. So essentially both Osiris, Seth and partially Horus are all aspects of Baal-Hadad. Not to mention when the sunworship hype came to be around, idk, 500 BCE and the city of Baalbek got named Heliopolitanus by both Greeks and Egyptians so both Zeus, Jupiter and Baal got syncretised with the Sun, i.e. Amon RA.

Moloch wasn't a deity, that was a misinterpretation by Christians centuries after they had no ties to the ancient Jews's rituals. Moloch was the name of child sacrifice ritual practiced by ancient Jews and condemned in the Hebrew Bible. Hint: they only condemned things that lots of people were doing anyway. What people think was going on was that ancient Jews were sacrificing their firstborn sons as burnt offerings to Yahweh. In Exodus 22:29 God commands "The firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me."

Some scholars even speculate that in an earlier, now lost, version of the Isaac story that Abraham did actually sacrifice him, and that this story was originally meant to illustrate how Yahweh wants you to sacrifice your firstborn sons to him. They also point out that at the end of the passage, it only mentions Abraham, not Abraham and Isaac, coming down from the mountain, even though Isaac was supposedly spared (Genesis 22:19).

The image is a stylized, abstract representation of a face with a frown. The face is composed of three main shapes: a large, curved line that forms the mouth, a smaller, curved line that forms the nose, and a horizontal line that forms the eyebrows. The color palette is limited to shades of yellow and brown, with the yellow being the dominant color and the brown being a darker shade. The image has a simple, cartoon-like quality, with no discernible details or textures. There are no texts or additional elements present in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of digital art or a meme, often used to convey a particular emotion or sentiment.

This. When you look at the real evil, YHVH is the real Moloch. Ba'al literally just means "Lord". YHVH is the god that demanded blood sacrifice. He's the god that laid waste to cities. He's the god that murdered first born children. The Egyptians equated YHVH with Set, the god of the desert, chaos, destruction, and foreigners. I'm a conspiracy theorist, definitely, and I feel quite vindicated with the Epstein Files. HOWEVER, Christian conspiracy theorists have falsely concluded that Epstein was in a "Ba'al" worshipping cult. Nope. The simple fact is, they are worshipping YHVH. They are Jewish Sabbatean Frankists who are trying to emulate the higher worlds in the lower, so they push transgenderism, gayness, pedophilia, orgies, murder, and a dominant world power structure in order to steer the cattle/goyim to slaughter for their god YHVH. Fuck the Demiurge.

>Set

He was previously a Lucifer. Horus replaced him like one celebrity growing in popularity over another. Where we'd have celebrity obsessions, the ancients had deity obsessions; women would say, "Horus is totally more handsome" even though all they had were artistic representations and it was more a nod to their personal relationship with said deity.

So it's a cultural thing, when Horus replaces Set. Their "battle" was metaphoric or poetic, a representation of Set being unseated in favor of Horus.

>jews and Set

The bigger proponents were the noses, who'd favored Set and, as their were displaced after being (re)conquered after Egypt by the Edomites, they brought Set as a deity along with them.

Bal is a demon. I encountered him. Hes a giant nephilim style humanoid. I thought he was evil, and avoided him the first night I saw him. The next night, I asked him if he was evil, and he said he hates me. Whether that be from a metaphysically evil position, or a position of personal beef, idk, but he attacked me, and I fought him back with my sword. I used the exsanguinate command spell and that caused my sword to branch out into hundreds of spikes into his body, which destroyed it enough to make him not manifest into it, but I still felt his will, and he attacked me in return, causing what appeared to be severe chemical burns and mutations on my sword arm.

I left the area and found a more peaceful dream and my astral body healed back to normal.

Overall it was a very negative interaction, and he was very powerful, but no so much that I wasn't able to hurt him at least as much, if not more, than he hurt me. Did not seem at all like a god to me, but was powerful like an archon level demon, something like an arch demon.

I don't know if any of you have had a positive interaction with this entity, but he did not seem impressive to me, compared to the beings I know whom are good, but powerful, hateful, and from my point of view overall evil.

The shift from Zəvûl (Prince/Exalted) Zəvûv (Flies) may have been intentional ridicule by rival worshippers.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a frog with a humanoid face. The frog is wearing a blue hat with a golden emblem on it, which appears to be a symbol of a triangle with a sunburst, possibly representing a religious or magical symbol. The frog is seated with its hands on its face, covering its eyes, and appears to be in a contemplative or surprised state.

Beside the frog, there is a book titled "MAGICK" with a star-shaped emblem on the cover. The book is open, and the frog seems to be holding it up, as if presenting it. The background of the image is a plain, light blue color, which contrasts with the green and blue colors of the frog and the book. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and whimsical, with a focus on the frog's surprised expression and the book's title.

Even with consideration of the possibility that you are not full of shit faggot christcuck who just made up this lie to demonise the sacred name of the Elders to associate them mere ascarchonts or other low ranked ""non-Gods"", believing whatever bullshit that intruder tell you is a low IQ move.

This is why you are supposed to do chant while "subconsciously" looking at the sigil of being, it is like their email address and you are doing 10 minute dial-up connection like 56k modem to make sure you aren't deviating and connected with fakers. I haven't heard a single negative response from people who actually take Ars Goetia communication seriously, except it takes plenty of effort and talant to actually succeed. Just don't be a disrespectful faggot thinking they are your slaves and treat them as equal if you want to have conversation or superiors if you ask for favours.

Also there is a high chance that you suffer schizophrenia with induced hallucinations and should take your meds, I tend to believe that with 90-95% certainty because the faggots who utter such bullshit with such self-confidence, talk preachy like a new fucking messiah yet type like complete retards at the same time tend to be (ex-)alcoholics/drugs addicts with severe brain damage that allow them to "see" such beings; as opposed to ascetic disciplines that dedicate their life to a year of meditation to open and train their extrasensory abilities.

I'm He, you retard. I'm not going to whatever retarded website you're pointing to, but it's clear you and the other retard haven't actually studied these subjects much.

Set, if you actually read books on this subject, was identified by Aquino as a Lucifer himself. If you study Egyptian Mythology, you know this is only Set's more recent form, where he previously had another feature or main focus.

Do you want me to keep going? I'd love to.

Horus and Set, in their battle in Mythology, are at odds because Set, his uncle, murdered his father. So Horus fights him over it and Set blinds him in one eye. Well, if you actually study Egypt, its religion and understand how cultural shifts happen, it becomes extremely clear that this was a celebrity duel for fame. No one fought each other, but Horus did win out ideologically after a while and the people who followed Set left or withered (in comparison at least).

Now, do you want me to cover "Lucifer"? I can do that. Etymologically speaking, the word means "Light-Bringer" from Latin roots "Lux" or "Luc" and "-fer", meaning "Bringer" or "Bearer. Next, if we examine the Lucifer archetype, we see it in use a plethora of times and among many Mythologies. Apollo is a generous example, but I'd rather us focus on a Prometheus or an Enki (as is very common). In the most recent rendition, the Abrahamic worldview (deeply depleted, let me tell you), the modern "Christians" frame "Lucifer" as evil. They do this because they're desperately confused, they don't understand the title, how we're supposed to feel about it or the historical use of the archetype, let alone their genetic line's historical feelings toward the archetype. So, foundationally, the archetype is completely different from the way we use it today and that goes for the "Luciferian" posers who pretend to do "occult" stuff while simultaneously attempting to piss normalfag "Christians" off.

Please read a book about this subject. Any book. It can have pictures.

[88 / 34]The image is a painting that depicts a scene of religious or biblical significance. At the center of the composition, there is a figure with a long white beard and a halo, which suggests a divine or heavenly presence. This figure is holding a large amount of gold in one hand and a loaf of bread in the other, symbolizing abundance and provision.

Surrounding this central figure are several figures who appear to be in a state of awe or reverence. They are reaching out towards the figure with the gold and bread, as if trying to touch or receive the divine gift. The figures are dressed in simple, earthy clothing, and their expressions range from reverence to a sense of longing or anticipation.

The background of the painting is a chaotic and desolate landscape, with smoke rising from the ground and a cityscape that seems to be in ruins. This contrast between the divine and the desolate adds a sense of drama and tension to the scene.

The painting is rendered in a realistic style with a palette dominated by earthy tones, including browns, grays, and blacks. The use of these colors gives the painting a somber and solemn atmosphere.

There are no visible texts or inscriptions within the image, and the style of the painting is reminiscent of religious art, particularly that of the Renaissance or Baroque periods. The overall composition and the use of color and light suggest a narrative that is both spiritual and historical, possibly relating to biblical events or the story of the Israelites receiving the golden calf.

STOP SMEARING BA'ALS name ffs. He got mentioned so the normies like you would do what Jews did thousands of years ago. Moloch/Yahweh and Ba'al are seperate deities

Ba'al is Zeus/Jupiter; he's a fertility and storm god, the Romans recognized the deity as their own when they conquered the region. They also helped build a temple to Ba'al that eventually got blown up by ISIS about 2000 years later. For that Ba'al sent a storm to crash a crane that killed a bunch of muslims in the grand mosque in mecca and trash the place in retribution. Pretty cool guy all around and a respectable hater of semites.

Moloch, or the bull headed figure burned by the Iranian lately may not even be a real historical deity. Only references to them are in the bible, and a knowledgeable friend says they're fictional with no basis in history, just made up by the jews to portray their enemies in a bad light. I'm inclined to favor that over whatever hyped up bandwagon normies want to jump on at the drop of a hat.

The image is a composite of two photographs, each depicting a different historical period. The top photograph shows an aerial view of the Temple of Jupiter, which is a significant historical site. The temple is a large, rectangular structure with a prominent central column and a red-tiled roof. It is surrounded by a moat and is surrounded by a large open area with trees and grass. The temple appears to be in a state of ruin, with some parts of the structure showing signs of decay.

The bottom photograph shows a similar scene but from a different perspective. It is an aerial view of the same Temple of Jupiter, but this time the focus is on the ruins of the temple. The ruins are in a state of disrepair, with some parts of the structure still standing, while others have collapsed. The surrounding area is a mix of grass and dirt, and there are no visible structures or people in the image.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a caption that reads "Baalbek, Lebanon," indicating the location of the ruins. The caption is in white text on a black background, which contrasts with the image's color scheme. The overall style of the image is a blend of historical architecture and aerial photography, with a focus on the Temple of Jupiter and its historical context.

The background of the drawing is plain and light-colored, providing a neutral backdrop that allows the figures and their actions to stand out. The text on the drawing is written in a cursive script, with the letters forming a word that reads "Y" at the top and "Y" at the bottom. The text is not clear enough to read the full meaning of the word, but it appears to be a name or a title.

The style of the drawing is simple and informal, with a focus on the interaction between the two figures. The use of a single color for the drawing and the absence of shading or detail give the image a child-like quality. The overall composition and the drawing style suggest that it may have been created by a child.

>the evil symbolism of the donkey/ass, fundamental to the Christian concept of an evil creator (negative demiurgy), has its roots in the Egyptian god Seth. Seth, the deity of chaos, violent storms, and the desert, was frequently described as having the form or the hide of a donkey. The Greeks identified him with Typhon, the lord of chaos and a monster, resulting in the hybrid form "Seth-Typhon". Seth was also identified with the Phoenician storm god, Baal. Through the cultural practice of interpretatio Graeca (identification of foreign gods), the malignant character of Seth and his donkey appearance were transferred to the god of the Jews, Yahweh (YHVH). This fusion (Seth-Yahweh) was reinforced, in part, by the sound: the Greek word for Yahweh (Iaō) sounded, with a "perverse twist of the tongue," like the native Egyptian word for donkey (eiō or iō). This led to the widely known tradition that the Jews secretly worshipped Yahweh as a donkey or the golden head of an ass (onolatry) in the Temple of Jerusalem.

>Early Christian groups who believed in an evil creator (such as the Phibionites, Ophites, and Sethians) adapted this "Seth-Yahweh cultural memory" to identify the Jewish creator as a hostile, demonic ruler. This tradition manifested in their cosmology, such as the description of a being with the "face or form of a donkey (onou morphēn)" seen in the Holy of Holies in the apocryphal The Birth of Mary. Furthermore, the seventh ruling demon in the Ophite diagram (drawn by Christian theologians in the 2nd century A.D.) manifests a "donkey face (onou . . . prosopon)" and is called Onoel ("Donkey-God"). Due to the majority Christians' adoption of the Jewish Creator as the supreme deity, the accusation of donkey worship was easily transferred to Christians. This polemic culminated in a mocking representation displayed on a plaque around the late 2nd century A.D. in Carthage (or Rome) of a being with donkey ears and a hoof labeled: "ONOCOETES, GOD OF THE CHRISTIANS"

Donkey is the vilest and most ridiculous beast, the face of evil.

>Seth was frequently described as having the form or the hide of a donkey. In ancient Egyptian art, he appeared as a human figure with the head (or mask) of a creature that displayed long ears and a drooping snout. the Greeks identified this creature with a donkey, and the donkey was portrayed, along with the pig, as the sacred animal of Seth. the donkey was associated with stupidity and sexuality (e.g., a Roman account that the Emperor Commodus nicknamed a man with a large penis "Donkey"). Furthermore, spell practitioners, when referring to the "blood of Typhon," were referring to donkey blood. therefore, the donkey, as the sacred animal of Seth-Typhon, was inherently a symbol of chaos, violence, stupidity, and malignity.

>The star's traditional name, Asellus Borealis, means "northern donkey colt."
Erastosthenes wrote that, in the war between the gods and the Giants that came after the clash with the Titans, the gods Hephaestus, Dionysus and several others rode on donkeys into battle. The Giants, who had never heard a donkey bray, thought the donkeys were monsters and fled. Dionysus later placed the donkeys in the sky to commemorate the event. He put them next to a star cluster which the Greeks called the Manger (Phatne).

"Doresse asserts, "we shall find later some curious traces of a cult of this Seth-Typhon presiding over Judeo-Gnostic rituals in which Adam plays the leading part. That this cult came to be actually codified is attested by the existence of Egyptian figurines of the god Seth, cast in bronze, which are perfectly appropriate to it. The most significant represent the god walking with the hieratic gait, his body girt with a loin-cloth and surmounted by a head which has not, now, the muzzle of the mythic 'Sethian' animal commonly assigned to Seth in the Pharaonic tradition, but the ass's head much more rarely met with. There is no doubt about the identification of the god worshipped in this guise, as one of the great figures of Gnosticism: the pedestal is engraved with the name Aberamenthō, which denoted Jesus."

Kind of ironic considering Horus tales of death and resurrection by Isis is a cypypasta of Baal Cycles of Baal death and resurrected by Anat. So essentially both Osiris, Seth and partially Horus are all aspects of Baal-Hadad. Not to mention when the sunworship hype came to be around, idk, 500 BCE and the city of Baalbek got named Heliopolitanus by both Greeks and Egyptians so both Zeus, Jupiter and Baal got syncretised with the Sun, i.e. Amon RA.

The image is a composite of two distinct elements. On the left, there is a medieval manuscript illustration featuring a bearded figure wearing a hat and a chainmail shirt.

The figure is holding a sword and has a bird perched on his shoulder. The background of the illustration is a rich, brown color with intricate patterns.

On the right, there is a modern-day photograph of a person with a beard and long white hair. The individual is wearing a costume that includes a helmet with a visor, a golden mask, and a golden chainmail shirt. The person's face is partially obscured by the mask, and they are smiling. The background of the photograph is a dark, possibly black, color.

The two images are separated by a thin white line, and the style of the image suggests a blend of historical and contemporary elements, possibly indicating a theme of fantasy or mythology. There are no texts present in the image.

The image is a close-up photograph of a man with a bald head, wearing glasses and a t-shirt with a graphic of the Mexican flag. He is making a loud, exaggerated facial expression with his mouth open and eyes wide, as if he is shouting or expressing strong emotion. In his right hand, he is holding a wooden cross with a crucifix pendant. The background shows a cityscape with multi-story buildings, some of which are in a state of disrepair, and a hill or mountain range in the distance. The man's expression and the cross suggest a religious or spiritual theme. The colors in the image are vibrant, with the man's t-shirt featuring the colors of the Mexican flag, and the cross has a brownish hue. The overall style of the image is candid and appears to be taken in a public setting, possibly a city square or a similar urban environment.

The text is in English and appears to be a part of a larger document or article, as indicated by the presence of a header and a list of references at the bottom. The text is formatted in a standard paragraph style, with a clear separation between the main content and the list of references.

The main content of the text is a historical account, specifically focusing on the period of the Roman-Jewish historian Josephus. The text mentions that Josephus recorded that in Jerusalem, while Veridicus, Cumanus was procurator of Judea, a Roman soldier mourned Jewish pilgrims at the Jewish Temple in Jerusalem who had gathered for Passover. The text also refers to the "In AD 48-52," which is likely a reference to a specific year or period in the Roman calendar.

The text is accompanied by a list of references at the bottom, which likely provide additional information or context to the main text. The style of the image is straightforward and informative, with a focus on providing a clear and concise representation of the historical context being discussed.

Moloch wasn't a deity, that was a misinterpretation by Christians centuries after they had no ties to the ancient Jews's rituals. Moloch was the name of child sacrifice ritual practiced by ancient Jews and condemned in the Hebrew Bible. Hint: they only condemned things that lots of people were doing anyway. What people think was going on was that ancient Jews were sacrificing their firstborn sons as burnt offerings to Yahweh. In Exodus 22:29 God commands "The firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me."

Some scholars even speculate that in an earlier, now lost, version of the Isaac story that Abraham did actually sacrifice him, and that this story was originally meant to illustrate how Yahweh wants you to sacrifice your firstborn sons to him. They also point out that at the end of the passage, it only mentions Abraham, not Abraham and Isaac, coming down from the mountain, even though Isaac was supposedly spared (Genesis 22:19).

This. When you look at the real evil, YHVH is the real Moloch. Ba'al literally just means "Lord". YHVH is the god that demanded blood sacrifice. He's the god that laid waste to cities. He's the god that murdered first born children. The Egyptians equated YHVH with Set, the good of the desert, chaos, destruction, and foreigners. I'm a conspiracy theorist, definitely, and I feel quite vindicated with the Epstein Files. HOWEVER, Christian conspiracy theorists have falsely concluded that Epstein was in a "Ba'al" worshipping cult. Nope. The simple fact is, they are worshipping YHVH. They are Jewish Sabbatean Frankists who are trying to emulate the higher worlds in the lower, so they push transgenderism, gayness, pedophilia, orgies, murder, and a dominant world power structure in order to steer the cattle/goyim to slaughter for their god YHVH. >Set

He was previously a Lucifer. Horus replaced him like one celebrity growing in popularity over another. Where we'd have celebrity obsessions, the ancients had deity obsessions; women would say, "Horus is totally more handsome" even though all they had were artistic representations and it was more a nod to their personal relationship with said deity.

So it's a cultural thing, when Horus replaces Set. Their "battle" was metaphoric or poetic, a representation of Set being unseated in favor of Horus.

>jews and Set

The bigger proponents were the noses, who'd favored Set and, as their were displaced after being (re)conquered after Egypt by the Edomites, they brought Set as a deity along with them.

"Holy Spirit" is Mercury. It's an amorphous, prophetic messenger, right?

Anyway, Christians distinctly agree with you. the paradox of the three separate but unified deities forming "God" for Christians is the focal point of the religion.

The image is a painting that depicts a figure in a seated position. The figure is nude and appears to be a man, with a muscular build. He has a red mask covering his face, which is slightly open, revealing his eyes. The mask covers the upper part of his face, leaving only the eyes visible. The figure's hands are clenched together in front of him, and his mouth is open as if he is speaking or shouting. The background is dark, with a textured surface that could be a wall or a floor. The painting style is realistic, with a focus on the figure's expression and the details of his clothing and facial features. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image.

Bal is a demon. I encountered him. Hes a giant nephilim style humanoid. I thought he was evil, and avoided him the first night I saw him. The next night, I asked him if he was evil, and he said he hates me. Whether that be from a metaphysically evil position, or a position of personal beef, idk, but he attacked me, and I fought him back with my sword. I used the exsanguinate command spell and that caused my sword to branch out into hundreds of spikes into his body, which destroyed it enough to make him not manifest into it, but I still felt his will, and he attacked me in return, causing what appeared to be severe chemical burns and mutations on my sword arm.

I left the area and found a more peaceful dream and my astral body healed back to normal.

Overall it was a very negative interaction, and he was very powerful, but no so much that I wasn't able to hurt him at least as much, if not more, than he hurt me. Did not seem at all like a god to me, but was powerful like an archon level demon, something like an arch demon.

I don't know if any of you have had a positive interaction with this entity, but he did not seem impressive to me, compared to the beings I know whom are good, but powerful, hateful, and from my point of view overall evil.

Many scholars think “Ba‘al Zəvûv” may be a mocking corruption of an earlier, more honorable title:

Proposed original: Ba‘al Zəvûl (בַּעַל זְבוּל)

Meaning: “Lord Prince” or “Exalted Lord.”

The shift from Zəvûl (Prince/Exalted) Zəvûv (Flies) may have been intentional ridicule by rival worshippers.

tldr hebrews mocking a rival deity turned into christians demon lord fanfiction.

The image is a stylized, cartoon-like drawing of a person's face. The person has long, straight, light-colored hair and is wearing glasses. The hair is depicted in a flowing manner, and the glasses are positioned on the upper part of the face. The person's mouth is open, and the eyes are wide open, giving the impression of surprise or shock. The person's skin tone is light, and the background is a solid black color, which contrasts with the light color of the hair and glasses. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the drawing is simple and cartoonish, with a focus on the facial features and the expression of surprise.

The image is a digital illustration or a photograph that features a character from the Star Wars franchise. The character is standing in a desert landscape with a large, orange-yellow sun in the background. The character is facing away from the viewer, and their back is to the sun, which casts a silhouette-like effect on the character. The character is wearing a long-sleeved, light-colored outfit with a belt and a headband, and they have a long braid or ponytail hanging down their back. In their right hand, they are holding a long-bladed weapon, and in their left hand, they are holding a small, spherical object that resembles a blaster or a blaster-like device. The character's posture suggests readiness or alertness. The overall color palette is warm, with the orange of the sun contrasting with the character's light clothing.

Bump, some have also postulated it meant "lord of flight" or of flying creatures. Ba'al was the sky god and much of his iconography revolved around "coming on the clouds" or riding on bird wings, likely the merkava. The Skywalker.

I'm He, you retard. I'm not going to whatever retarded website you're pointing to, but it's clear you and the other retard haven't actually studied these subjects much.

Set, if you actually read books on this subject, was identified by Aquino as a Lucifer himself. If you study Egyptian Mythology, you know this is only Set's more recent form, where he previously had another feature or main focus.

Do you want me to keep going? I'd love to.

Horus and Set, in their battle in Mythology, are at odds because Set, his uncle, murdered his father. So Horus fights him over it and Set blinds him in one eye. Well, if you actually study Egypt, its religion and understand how cultural shifts happen, it becomes extremely clear that this was a celebrity duel for fame. No one fought each other, but Horus did win out ideologically after a while and the people who followed Set left or withered (in comparison at least).

Now, do you want me to cover "Lucifer"? I can do that. Etymologically speaking, the word means "Light-Bringer" from Latin roots "Lux" or "Luc" and "-fer", meaning "Bringer" or "Bearer. Next, if we examine the Lucifer archetype, we see it in use a plethora of times and among many Mythologies. Apollo is a generous example, but I'd rather us focus on a Prometheus or an Enki (as is very common). In the most recent rendition, the Abrahamic worldview (deeply depleted, let me tell you), the modern "Christians" frame "Lucifer" as evil. They do this because they're desperately confused, they don't understand the title, how we're supposed to feel about it or the historical use of the archetype, let alone their genetic line's historical feelings toward the archetype. So, foundationally, the archetype is completely different from the way we use it today and that goes for the "Luciferian" posers who pretend to do "occult" stuff while simultaneously attempting to piss normalfag "Christians" off.

Please read a book about this subject. Any book. It can have pictures.

[2 / 1]The image is a movie poster for the film "Military Wives." At the top of the poster, the title "Military Wives" is prominently displayed in large, bold, white letters. Below the title, there is a tagline that reads "Inspired by the Incredible True Story of The Military Wives Choir." The tagline is smaller and in a smaller font size compared to the title.

In the center of the poster, there are two women standing side by side. The woman on the left is holding a folder with the title "Military Wife" on it, while the woman on the right is holding a folder with the title "Military Wife Choir." Both women are smiling and looking directly at the camera.

The background of the poster is a gradient of yellow, transitioning from a lighter shade at the top to a darker shade at the bottom. This color scheme gives the impression of a sunny day.

At the bottom of the poster, there is a tagline that reads "THE FEEL GOOD MOVIE."

The text is smaller and in a smaller font size compared to the title and tagline. The overall style of the poster is simple and promotional, with a focus on the title and the central image of the two women.

this has been going on for me for years. i post about pizzagate, trafficking or now the epstein thing, and my posts are deleted. i have seen this going on with other threads, just randomly being deleted by mods .

so it's really going you have years worth of confirmation from both the law and 'conspiracy theorists'. they definitely still are trafficking people and doing these parties, rituals. all over america this is going on, even the FBI used to run ads for it.

it's a cult that worships evil as an energy. some identify as luciferians or satanists or something else. point is, they worship and glamorize evil. they joke about raping children, abducting and eating them. this is a pattern i specifically have noticed for years. actual demons and what you call aliens are involved, they too are evil.

they can justify the worst evils to themselves. look at the case with peter Skully in the philippines, originally from australia. one of the most evil p3dofiles and he even had A COMPANY where he directed snuff films involving babies and children.

The image is a screenshot of a Twitter post by Shane Christopher Frakes. The post is a text message that appears to be a response to a tweet by another user. The text is in a dark color, and the style of the text is formal and technical, suggesting that the content is related to a discussion about a specific topic or concept.

The tweet by the other user is as follows: "You reported Shane Christopher Frakes @ShaneFrakes CIA runs psypos that all funnel down to one thing. It's a recruitment pipeline disguised as intellectual puzzles, the kind where intuition cracks as logic, and that's the whole point. The setup is simple, you crack one, and you're on someone's radar. You solve them, then the next one, and before you know it, they're puzzles themselves. The pattern you're solving them is the evaluation. You then understand that these were never true puzzles but a selection process all along. That's when you're pulled into what could be the most highly classified program ever created."

The text in the image is a direct response to the tweet, and it seems to be discussing the concept of a recruitment pipeline disguised as intellectual puzzles, the nature of the process, and the evaluation process. The text is structured in a way that suggests a logical progression, with the first tweet suggesting a simple and logical process, followed by a more complex and intricate process, and then a final evaluation process. The use of the word "psypos" and "intelligence puzzles" indicates a discussion about a specific type of puzzle or challenge that is part of a recruitment process. The text also mentions the CIA and the recruitment pipeline, which is a common topic in discussions about intelligence and recruitment. The overall tone of the text is serious and academic, indicating that the discussion is likely related to a serious topic of interest.

You're born on "the other side." Original sin and all. You have to actively leave it. If you mean being on the other side and in a position of power, which is what I assume is what you're saying, you have to be born into it or be uniquely competent and lacking in moral scruples. No people in black robes show up at your condo in LA and have you sign a contract in blood. You get into the upper echelons, and slowly, overtime, it gets into you. You meet people who know people who know people. Eventually you're at a Diddy party reenacting Eyes Wide Shut to obnoxious pop music. This is where hyper competent normies are at their peak. Barring extraordinary circumstances, this is as far up the ladder as they get. The real power is in old money. Generational wealth that spans centuries. You'll never be one of these guys.

The image is a black and white line drawing that features two human figures. The figure on the left appears to be a stylized representation of a human head with a large, jagged, and somewhat menacing facial expression. The right figure, which is the main focus of the image, is a simplified representation of a human head with a smiling expression and a hand placed on the cheek. The background is plain and white, with a pattern of small, irregular shapes that resemble pixelated or digital art. There are no texts present in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of digital art or a meme, with a focus on contrasting the human head with the simplified human head.

The image is a detailed, realistic drawing that depicts a figure with a muscular, muscular physique, standing in the center. The figure has a bald head, a beard, and is wearing a loincloth. The figure's arms are outstretched, and its legs are spread apart. The figure's face is turned to the left, and it appears to be in a state of contemplation or prayer.

The background of the image is a dark, textured wall with a blueish hue, and there are other figures in the background, but they are not as detailed as the central figure. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of classical art, with a focus on the human form and the depiction of a divine or spiritual figure.

The image is a humorous meme featuring two separate scenes from the movie "The Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers." The top image shows a dark, ominous landscape with a large, dark figure that resembles a dragon or a similar mythical creature, emitting a dark, smoky mist. The bottom image features a character with curly hair, wearing a hooded cloak, looking at the top image with a surprised expression. The text overlay on the image reads, "Sauron, the enemy of the Free Peoples of Middle Earth, was defeated." Below the top image, there is a question in a bold, white font that reads, "What about second Sauron?" The meme seems to be a playful commentary on the character Sauron, who is a central figure in the "Lord of the Rings" series, and the question implies a second Sauron, which is a reference to the character Sauron II, who is a secondary antagonist in the story.

>Whatever may be thought of the Hindûs, no enemy of theirs can regard them as fools.

A people, whose holy men and sages have left to the world the greatest and most sublime philosophies that ever emanated from the minds of men, must have known the difference between right and wrong. Even a savage can discern white from black, good from bad, and deceit from sincerity and truthfulness. Those who had narrated this event in the biography of their God, must have seen that in this case it was that God who was the Arch-Deceiver, and the Asuras, who "never transgressed the precepts of the Vedas," who had the sunny side in the transaction, and who were the true "Gods." Thence there must have been, and there is a secret meaning hidden under this allegory. In no class of society, in no nation, are deceit and craft considered as divine virtues—except perhaps in the clerical classes of Theologians and modern Jesuitism.

Random internet faggot I met on IMVU at 13. He played in a cover band for The Who and traveled the world found profane shit, he even talked about sacrificing babies at one point.

He stalked me for years(he still does and I'm 31). Raped me in my dreams, threatened to have me assaulted, acid attacks, killing my boyfriends, wanting to tie me to a radiator in his basement.

He basically wanted to film these bdsm torture scenes (he sent me plenty of pictures) that involved his favorite activity, drinking blood from a woman's clitoris while she orgasmed.

He also wanted to sell me to demons as a fuckslut for favors.

I had been trying to destroy him since I was 15, so this was all shit I went along with until he tried to get me to hurt other people.

No amount of me lambasting him to his entire network, including wife and kids, ever did fucking anything for it. I called his wife twice.

If it helps, the last time I spoke with him (I call him faggot to his face these days. Thats where we're at) he admitted he had severe mental illness problems but wouldn't elaborate.

I'm waiting for him to show up at my door so I can bludgeon him to death, I've been waiting a LOONG time

The image is a painting of a figure that appears to be a representation of Jesus Christ. The figure is depicted with a beard and long hair, and the face is turned slightly to the left. The figure is wearing a green garment with a red cloak draped over it, and the hands are raised in a gesture that suggests a gesture of prayer or blessing. The background is a muted green, and the painting is executed in a realistic style with attention to detail, suggesting a high level of skill and craftsmanship. The overall color palette is dominated by shades of red, green, and brown, which contribute to the warm and earthy tones of the painting. There are no visible texts or discernible brands within the image. The style of the painting is reminiscent of Renaissance or Baroque art, characterized by its dramatic use of light and shadow, and the emphasis on the human form and religious iconography.

Well, I'll tell you how to find him!

Firstly, the "Nobody" will not be a woman. If you're a woman, you can scratch yourself off the list. You're safe from being the "nobody". This person will be a biological male.

The Nobody, as you people call him, will also be a very attractive male. He will be considered one of the most attractive people on earth. Women will lose their minds over him

Unfortunately, or fortunately for them, however your perspective might be, this person will not return their affection. He will not be attracted to women. Most likely, sexual desire will be alien to him. He will not desire the touch of a woman.

This person will also be extremely fierce. Anyone who comes to him to plead or make a request will instantly fear him. He will be so fearsome, the world will instantly recognize his authority. It'll be almost instantaneous, as if the entire world fell into a state of trance as soon as they saw him. He will be worshiped by everybody when he is revealed.

The Nobody will have extreme levels of supernatural power. He will amaze the world with his feats. Amazing things are possible through spiritual power. You all think Superman is just a kids comic book character. This "nobody" will be basically Superman. It is nothing for spiritual forces to affect the material world. Just on his feats alone, it'll be no wonder you all will worship him, those of you that I'm referring to.

For the record, I am not this person. I do not fit the description of him. I like women a little too much to be him. If anything, it's not good to desire to be this person. I wouldn't recommend it. But, if you're looking for him, this is how you will find him. When you find him, you might wish you never did.

The only thing I have else to say is this: never meet your heroes!

The image is a black and white graphic with a humorous tone. At the top, there is a text that reads "the prodigal son wields sin to uphold virtue," which is a play on the biblical story of the Prodigal Son. Below this, there is a cartoon image of a man with a surprised expression, holding a gun with a smile. The man is wearing a suit and tie, and the gun is pointed towards the ground.

In the center of the image, there are three black silhouettes of smiling faces with open mouths, resembling a smiley face. These figures are arranged in a triangular formation, with one at the top, one in the middle, and one at the bottom.

At the bottom of the image, there is a caption that reads "he fears not the void, the father raises up the lost son to valhalla," which is a reference to the Norse myth of the Valhalla, where heroes are said to be raised to Valhalla by their fathers.

The image has a meme-like quality, with the text and the image of the man with the gun being the main focus. The use of the Prodigal Son story in the text and the image of the man with the gun creates a humorous juxtaposition, suggesting a light-hearted and ironic take on the biblical story.

The image is a graphic with a simple design. At the top, there is a text that reads "LOL" in a stylized font, followed by "said the scorpion" in a smaller font size. Below this, there is a silhouette of a scorpion with its body facing the left side of the image. The scorpion has a long tail and is depicted in black against a light gray background. At the bottom of the image, there is another line of text that reads "LMao" in a smaller font size. The overall style of the image is minimalistic and appears to be a humorous or playful representation of a scorpion.

The image is a photograph of a relief sculpture, which appears to be a mask or headpiece. The sculpture is of a woman with a prominent, horned head, and the face is adorned with a detailed pattern. The background of the sculpture is a combination of red and gold, with geometric patterns and designs. The woman's eyes are closed, and her mouth is slightly open, giving a serene expression.

At the top of the image, there is a text overlay in a white font that reads, "Why is the Vatican named after Vatican, the goddess of the underworld?" The text is in a smaller font size compared to the main image, and it is placed at the top of the image, slightly to the right.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a watermark or logo that reads "@Roin1921," which is a common practice on social media platforms to indicate the creator or source of the content. The watermark is in a smaller font size compared to the main text, and it is placed at the bottom right corner of the image.

The style of the image is a straightforward, non-artistic photograph with a focus on the object itself, rather than the artistic or conceptual context of the image. The lighting is even, and the background is clear, allowing the details of the sculpture to be clearly visible.

The image shows a graffiti mural on a wall. The mural features a stylized, abstract design with a combination of pink, purple, and black colors. The letters "ENJOY" are prominently displayed in the center of the mural, with the letters "ENJOY" in a larger, bold font and the letters "JOY" in a smaller, more decorative font. The letters are outlined in black and have a glossy finish, giving them a three-dimensional appearance. The background of the mural is a solid pink color, which contrasts with the black and purple outlines of the letters. There are also small, yellow dots scattered throughout the mural, adding a playful element to the design. The mural appears to be located on a wall with a white surface, and there is a small, rectangular window with a black frame on the right side of the image. The style of the image is a close-up photograph with a focus on the graffiti art, capturing the details of the lettering and the overall design. There are no visible texts or logos that provide additional context or information about the location or the artist.

In the top left corner, there is a small, stylized illustration of a male character with a surprised expression, wearing a white shirt and a flower crown. The character appears to be in a dynamic pose, with his mouth open and eyes wide.

In the bottom right corner, there is a text overlay that reads "YOU ARE (NOT) IMMUNE TO PROPAGANDA." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in white, contrasting with the blue background. The text is centered and appears to be a statement or a warning.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with its clean lines and vibrant colors. The character's serious expression and the text suggest a theme of propaganda or a message of caution.

To be fair, you have to have a very high IQ to understand the Bobody. The humour is extremely subtle, and without a solid grasp of theoretical physics most of the jokes will go over a typical poster's head. There's also anon's nihilistic outlook, which is deftly woven into his characterisation- their personal philosophy draws heavily from Narodnaya Volya literature, for instance. The fans understand this stuff; they have the intellectual capacity to truly appreciate the depths of these jokes, to realise that they're not just funny- they say something deep about LIFE. As a consequence people who dislike the Bobody truly ARE idiots- of course they wouldn't appreciate, for instance, the humour in anon's existential catchphrase "I thought what I'd do was, I'd pretend to be one of those deaf-mutes," which itself is a cryptic reference to the anime epic Ghost in the Shell. I'm smirking right now just imagining one of those addlebrained simpletons scratching their heads in confusion as Tavisock's genius wit unfolds itself on their phone screens. What fools.. how I pity them.

And yes, by the way, i DO have a Bobody tattoo. And no, you cannot see it. It's for the ladies' eyes only- and even then they have to demonstrate that they're within 5 IQ points of my own (preferably lower) beforehand. Nothin personnel kid

On the left side, we see a close-up of SpongeBob's face with a greenish hue, large, bulging eyes, and a frown. The character's mouth is slightly open, and the eyes are wide open, giving the impression of a surprised or alarmed expression. The character's skin is textured with wrinkles and folds, and there are small, dark specks on the skin.

On the right side of the image, we see SpongeBob in a more cheerful pose. He has his arms raised, with his hands in a welcoming gesture. His face is lit up with a broad smile, and his eyes are wide open, looking directly at the viewer. He has a yellow body with a red tie, and his arms are outstretched, as if he is welcoming someone or something. Below the images, there is a caption that reads "The Deep State The nobody." The text is in white, bold font, and is placed at the bottom of the image. The style of the image is a meme, combining elements of the original character with a humorous twist, as indicated by the caption.

I respect luciferians more than satanists because they actually have faith in and believe in something.

Satanism is literally just athiesm for people who resent going to Catholic school and want to rage bait their parents. Everything you claim you receive from satanism can be done with over-the-counter athiesm with the added feature of not purposefully angering another religion.

I dont support anything done in bad faith, i get that "we dont believe in satan and its just a religion for people who want to live free" is something that stands up in court, but you arent fooling anyone outside of that. We get you dont believe in god, great, congratulations, go live your life. However im not going to support or respect you if you are purposefully going to instigate, rile, anger, and rage bait other religions while dragging down and muddying the legal system just because you resent mommy and daddy sending you to bible study on sunday instead of letting you play on your gamecube.

the style of clothing and the hairstyle. The man has a receding hairline, a beard, and a mustache. He is wearing a coat with a high collar and a white cravat tied around his neck. His hair is styled in a high, curly, and voluminous fashion. The background is a man's gaze is directed to the side, and he appears to be looking off to the side, possibly at something or someone outside the frame. There are no visible texts or discernible

If they are weak, how come they be rulling over us? You are coping because they are not weak. They have hidden knowledge which makes them more powerful than your average ignorant golem. It seems that we are the weaklings here. I say it again, might makes right. But might is not just pure brute strength, but also using your brain. When two equally strong individuals fight, the smarter one will win because if you can't overpower your opponent with pure brute strength then you need another strategy to make him fall under his knees. You gotta use your brains as well. A person who lacks strength may kill a person who has lots of strength if the weak person uses his/her brain.
Do you get my point? My point is that you are coping and the people who are rulling over us and there because they were smart. You can call them whatever names you like, satanic, sinful, evil, and I agree, but the fact here is that they are stronger than us because we are limited by things like morals and dogmas while they are limited only by God himself. Actually, the bible tells us that it was God who put them in those positions of power because there is no authority which doesn't come from God, so says the bible so if the people in power are the satanic elite then we can thank God for that, not Satan. Satan was not the one who put the satanic people in power, it was God Himself because it is what the bible says and if the bible is the truth then God is the one who put the satanic people in power exactly to make us suffer. They are strong because they don't fear God. Fearing God is resered for the cattle, the sheep. Goats don't care. That's why God compares his people with sheep, because it is easier to create sheep than goats, but sadly, God also needs the goats because the goats keep the sheep in line and producing loosh. So I feel like Satan is justified, at least I'm justifying Satan right now. God is not a nice person once you know Him.

I say this because people tend to forget that God kills children. Anyone who kills children would be labeled a scum, one of the worst type of humans beings that can eve walk over this lame ass shitty creation called Earth. But when God is the one killing children and allowing minions to kill children and woman and rape the virgin women so to make them pregnant people say it is not evil. Why? What I'm trying to do here, anons, is call attention to the lack of congruence. If a human beings kills a child he is the worst, but if God kills millions of children He is holy and fair and just and good. So again, God is not a nice person or deity. God is evil and whoever says otherwise is trying to promote some kind of dogma or agenda.

The image is a cartoon-style illustration with a focus on a conspiracy theory. At the top, there is a speech bubble that reads, "The next one I send will be riding a motorcycle and wearing a unicorn hat." Below this, there is a diagram with a triangle labeled "THRUST LEVEL MATRIX" and a banana, which is a symbol often associated with the Illuminati. The triangle is divided into three levels, with the top level labeled "THREE," the middle level "TWO," and the bottom level "ONE." The middle level is labeled "BANANA" and is connected to the top level by a line.

In the center of the image, there is a cartoon character with a pink hat and a white hat, both of which are reminiscent of the Masons. The character is riding a bicycle and is wearing a hat with a feather, which is a common symbol of Freemasonry.

The bottom of the image features a cartoon building with a large antenna on top, suggesting a connection to wireless communication. There is also a cartoon character with a rainbow-colored hat and a bicycle, which is similar to the character in the center. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a focus on the conspiracy theory of the Illuminati and the Masons. The use of symbols and the cartoonish depiction of characters and objects contribute to the light-hearted and humorous tone of the image.

[40 / 7]The image is a black and white photograph featuring a man standing in front of a wall with a pentagram symbol. The man has a bald head, a beard, and is wearing a shirt with puffed sleeves. He is holding a small, ornate object in his right hand, which appears to be a chalice. The pentagram symbol is prominently displayed on the wall behind him, with the letters "N" and "Y" visible. The man's expression is serious, and he is looking directly at the camera. The background is not fully visible, but it seems to be an indoor setting with a stone wall and a part of a wooden structure visible. The style of the image is reminiscent of a historical or occult photograph, possibly from a historical context or a themed event.

I respect luciferians more than satanists because they actually have faith in and believe in something.

I dont support anything done in bad faith, i get that "we dont believe in satan and its just a religion for people who want to live free" is something that stands up in court, but you arent fooling anyone outside of that. We get you dont believe in god, great, congratulations, go live your life. However im not going to support or respect you if you are purposefully going to instigate, rile, anger, and rage bait other religions while dragging down and muddying the legal system just because you resent mommy and daddy sending you to bible study on sunday instead of letting you play on your gamecube.

The image is a dark, moody photograph with a grainy texture, giving it a somewhat gritty appearance. In the center of the image, there is a large, spherical object that appears to be a pill or capsule. The object is black with a textured surface, and it is held in the hands of two human fingers, which are partially visible. The background is dark and has a grid-like pattern, with a soft, glowing light emanating from the center of the image, creating a sense of mystery or intrigue. The overall style of the image is dramatic and somewhat surreal, with a focus on the central object and the contrasting lighting.

The image is a black and white portrait of a man, likely from the 18th century, judging by the style of clothing and the hairstyle. The man has a receding hairline, a beard, and a mustache. He is wearing a coat with a high collar and a white cravat tied around his neck. His hair is styled in a high, curly, and voluminous fashion. The background is a textured, possibly textured paper or fabric, with a gradient of dark to light tones. The man's gaze is directed to the side, and he appears to be looking off to the side, possibly at something or someone outside the frame. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of historical portraiture, often used to depict individuals from the past.

If they are weak, how come they be rulling over us? You are coping because they are not weak. They have hidden knowledge which makes them more powerful than your average ignorant golem. It seems that we are the weaklings here. I say it again, might makes right. But might is not just pure brute strength, but also using your brain. When two equally strong individuals fight, the smarter one will win because if you can't overpower your opponent with pure brute strength then you need another strategy to make him fall under his knees. You gotta use your brains as well. A person who lacks strength may kill a person who has lots of strength if the weak person uses his/her brain. Do you get my point? My point is that you are coping and the people who are rulling over us and there because they were smart. You can call them whatever names you like, satanic, sinful, evil, and I agree, but the fact here is that they are stronger than us because we are limited by things like morals and dogmas while they are limited only by God himself. Actually, the bible tells us that it was God who put them in those positions of power because there is no authority which doesn't come from God, so says the bible so if the people in power are the satanic elite then we can thank God for that, not Satan. Satan was not the one who put the satanic people in power, it was God Himself because it is what the bible says and if the bible is the truth then God is the one who put the satanic people in power exactly to make us suffer. They are strong because they don't fear God. Fearing God is resered for the cattle, the sheep. Goats don't care. That's why God compares his people with sheep, because it is easier to create sheep than goats, but sadly, God also needs the goats because the goats keep the sheep in line and producing loosh. So I feel like Satan is justified, at least I'm justifying Satan right now. God is not a nice person once you know Him.

I say this because people tend to forget that God kills children. Anyone who kills children would be labeled a scum, one of the worst type of humans beings that can eve walk over this lame ass shitty creation called Earth. But when God is the one killing children and allowing minions to kill children and woman and rape the virgin women so to make them pregnant people say it is not evil. Why? What I'm trying to do here, anons, is call attention to the lack of congruence. If a human beings kills a child he is the worst, but if God kills millions of children He is holy and fair and just and good. So again, God is not a nice person or deity. God is evil and whoever says otherwise is trying to promote some kind of dogma or agenda.

[10 / 2]The image is a candid photograph capturing a moment during a religious ceremony. In the foreground, a young man is being anointed by a priest. The man is wearing a dark suit with a white shirt and a striped tie, and he has a crucifix around his neck. He is looking down at the ground, possibly in contemplation or reflection. The priest, dressed in a white cassock and a purple stole, is holding a small glass container with a white substance in it, which is likely holy water. The background is blurred, suggesting a congregation of people, but the focus is on the interaction between the man and the priest. The lighting is soft, and the atmosphere appears solemn and reverent. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image.

The image is a black and white engraving or etching, depicting a man with a beard and a turban. He is wearing a long robe with a high collar and a necklace. The man is holding a book in his right hand, which is open, and his left hand is resting on the book. He appears to be engaged in reading or writing, as suggested by the open book. The background is not clearly visible, but there is a hint of a curtain or drapery behind the man. The style of the image is reminiscent of historical portraiture, with a focus on the subject's attire and the act of reading. There are no visible texts on the image.

Has anyone genuinely overcome their fear of death? I believe in life after death and I still am terrified of dying and obsess about it. I spend literally hours a day thinking about death and pretty much all the art I make revolves around either death or afterlife. I'm also constantly worried over how I spend time and whether I'm doing things are truly important or not.

I've spent the last 16 years reorganizing my paradigm regularly to fit in different post-death frameworks. Truth is i can't streamline it perfectly, so death remains in part a "surprise". I do have lost the fear of dying though, i've been close to dying a couple times and i was accepting. This is in part because i firmly believe it's convenient to die with coherence, with a clear mind.

Have you explored the reason why it bothers you so much?

I've never really been alive in this world so death to me is just a cheap parlor trick to make me afraid of something I'd rather go to. You worry about importance but to overcome fear you should accept it's all unimportant and meaningless. In other words you have to die inside completely. In your mind heart and soul. Then your body won't recoil and you can be rebirthed.

The image depicts a fantastical scene set against a backdrop of a cloudy sky. In the center, there is a castle-like structure with multiple towers and spires, constructed from what appears to be white and gold materials. The castle is surrounded by a multitude of smaller structures, some resembling towers and others resembling buildings, all floating in the sky.

In the foreground, there is a ship with a brown hull and white sails, sailing on the clouds. Above the ship, there is a hot air balloon with a golden hue, and another one with a silver hue is visible in the distance. The sky is filled with clouds, and the sun is setting, casting a warm, golden light over the scene.

The image has a dreamy and whimsical quality, with the floating structures and the ship evoking a sense of adventure and fantasy. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a digital painting or a digital art piece, with a focus on the interplay of light and shadow, and the use of color to create a dreamlike atmosphere.

That's a lot to ask, but basically i believe reality is fundamentally mental and structured as a relational "lattice", and traditions draw recurring structural patterns within it. Post death states would be reconfigurations within that structure. Ideologically i prioritize coherence of mind over dogma, i'm not devotional at all. This is just a general, quick glimpse of my paradigm, can't really go ham in here, it's too much. But if you have specific doubts i can address that.

For recommendations, that another difficult one, i've read so much in the last decade and a half, but i wouldn't recommend most of it to others. Despite that everything has helped with building my paradigm. I'll try to think of the works that better convey its parts.

>Proclus - elements of theology

Just metaphysical structure

>Henry Corbin - alone with the alone

Ontology

>Valentin Tomberg - meditations on the tarot

You want to deal with symbolic integration as soon as possible and i like this one for that

>Jean Gebser - the ever present origin

Adds a structural layer for consciousness

>Ibn Arabi - fusus al-hikam

Was hesitant to recommend this one, but it helps wrap my paradigm up as a whole.

Helped me with avoiding too much abstraction and dealing with paradox, which is a common thing. It's a hard read though.

I'm not gonna recommend "grimoires" or occult manuals, those become flavor down the road, i'm trying to draw a spine for my paradigm with these recommendations.

I used to be so terrified of death that just thinking about it would send me into panic attacks. A few years ago I tried DMT, and the experience was so far beyond anything I can put into words that it genuinely felt like my consciousness went somewhere else for a moment. Because of that, I've found a weird kind of comfort — like whatever happens when we die might feel something like that, not scary, just... different.

Its known that the pineal gland produces DMT naturally in your brain and lungs, and the idea that it helps shape our awareness of this physical world makes sense to me. These days, the only thing that really worries me is the idea of dying slowly or painfully. But the moment you're actually gone? I've made peace with that part. It feels like whatever comes next is okay.

The image is a close-up photograph of a stylized tiger, rendered in a vibrant, neon-like color palette. The tiger is depicted in a dynamic pose, with its body angled to the left and its head turned to the right, as if it's roaring or growling. The tiger's stripes are bold and vivid, with a mix of pink and blue hues, creating a striking contrast against the red background. The background itself is a blend of red and pink, with some areas appearing to be a darker shade, possibly representing the tiger's fur or the surrounding environment. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Japanese tattoo art, with its emphasis on bold lines and vivid colors. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The photograph is taken from a low angle, which emphasizes the tiger's size and the intensity of its expression.

Long, long ago, ages before the bodhisattva attained perfect enlightenment and became the Buddha of our world age, Shakyamuni, he was born into a wealthy Brahmin family. He grew up learning the wisdom, rituals, and skills of his station. When he came of age, people honored him: nobles saw a kingly bearing, the wise looked to him as a sage, and warriors and merchants sensed the judgment of a true leader. Naturally gifted at teaching, he felt drawn to guide others along a path of selfless generosity, which he eventually recognized as his true calling. So he left the city for the forest and founded a hermitage for those who wanted to pursue a higher way of life.

Years later, now a teacher, he was walking in the forest with a disciple. It hadn't rained for weeks; trees were bare, grass brittle, streambeds nearly dry. Suddenly, they heard a series of coughing roars nearby. "Master, those are the roars of a tiger, a hungry tiger. We should go back. Now," the student warned. The teacher listened and said, "Wait. Listen again. That's not just hunger, that's starvation. Let's go a little farther and see if we can help."

They soon came to the edge of a cliff and looked down. A hungry tigress was lying below, struggling to breastfeed two little pups. When they approached, she roared miserably and scared them away. She looked at her cubs with narrowed, unfocused eyes, her skin and bones emaciated, and her ribs clearly evident. In her despair, she began to view her own children as food.

"Quick," the bodhisattva said. "Find food for her. If she doesn't eat soon, she may kill her cubs. The karma from that will be terrible. I'll stay and keep her from harming them until you return." The disciple ran away. As he vanished, the teacher returned his attention to the scene below. The tigress tried to get up on her front legs, her legs still on the ground. She tried again and again. Finally, she stood, growling and drooling, and staggered toward her cubs.

My student won't be back in time, the bodhisattva thought. I can't just stand here. Mind is enormous, empty, and unfathomable. This body, mere matter, is the crystallization of my own past thoughts and actions from an infinite past. My ultimate wish has always been to help sentient beings. Failing to act now would result in regret. He removed his robe and hung it on a tree branch. Then, hands pressed together like a diver about to enter a lake, he leapt from the cliff.

Startled by the crashing behind her, the tigress crouched in fear, then turned and saw the bloodied body of a man on the rocks. Gathering her last strength, she lunged forward and began to feed.

When the disciple returned, apologetic and empty-handed, he saw his teacher's robe hanging from a tree at the cliff's edge. He called out. No response. Fearing the worst, he glanced over and noticed the tigress feeding. With a cry, he collapsed at the base of the tree and cried. Finally, he stood, wiped his tears, and, in amazement, returned the garment to the hermitage as a sacred relic. He informed the others what had transpired and brought them to the location. They decorated the tree with floral garlands. When the tigress and her cubs left, they went down the cliff, gathered the bodhisattva's bones, and constructed a jeweled stupa to enshrine them.

It will never be forgotten, even as long ages pass and high mountains and great civilizations rise and fall, never to be heard of again.

Yes.

Consider that life can be hard and that suffering is inevitable. Contrast is needed to perceive meaning and so joy can not exist without sorrow. These are the rules of this reality. Death tells us that this life is fleeting. Your life has meaning precisely because it's finite.

Now imagine immortality of any fashion. You think it sounds comforting right? That's because you cannot yet comprehend its true meaning. The human mind is bad at realizing stuff like this. That meaning derived from inevitable erasure, it's gone, life is now meaningless. That never ending awareness that feels both sorrow and joy, it's now a prison you can't escape. There is no relief for the immortal soul.

Just yesterday I was in a situation where I thought I could have died. Fortunately/unfortunately, I didn't. I look forward to the day I will leave this earth behind and be with my Lord Jesus. I am preparing every day for that day. I want to be ready for His soon return at all times. I can feel myself getting emotional just typing it. If you are a Believer, Heaven will be so overwhelming to your mind, even more so if you are a low-level convert. You have to be prepared, otherwise you are right to be afraid.

I will only talk about Heaven in this post. Even if you're a Believer, guaranteed for Heaven, there is an aspect of God you need to be prepared for, otherwise it could be painful. If a person who hasn't been to the gym in years tries to run 56 miles one day, it's going to be much more painful than if they prepared, and will take a much longer period to complete. But, with enough determination, this person will complete the assignment.

As for someone who is not a Believer at the time of death, I will not say this person will complete it. You can't complete the assignment if you quit, no matter how much you prepared for it. If you quit, the run will keep going on and on and on. You will always seem to be running, but never even getting close to the finish line. Of course, in a sense I am speaking metaphorically, but in another sense, I am not. The road will just keep stretching and stretching forever. I am not talking about Hell beneath the earth. I am talking about the Lake of Fire, described in Revelation. I won't be dogmatic about the theology regarding this particular aspect of eternity.

As for people who are Believers, once they complete this "assignment", if they are indeed low-level believers, Heaven will be significantly "toned down" for them, to make up for the lesser capacity of their spirits. As they grow, the intensity of the Glory they experience will increase according to their expanded capacity. All of us will be expanding continually.

In this post, I will also be very dogmatic. The Bible is the only book that can be considered written by God. There is only 1 belief system where God will ever point you to believe, and that is Christianity. Any spirit that points you to believe in a different religion, or a lack of religion, is a demon, and the ultimate desire of this kind of spirit is to deceive you into joining it in the Lake of Fire described in Revelation, in the Bible. God will only ever point you to Jesus Christ to worship in entirety, if He at all points you to worship something, which He does in every moment.

In order to ensure your place in Heaven, if you are unsure, whether you are a Believer or not, and whether you have even prayed this pray before, say this prayer out loud and mean it:

"Dear Lord Jesus, come into my heart. Forgive me of my sin. Wash me and cleanse me. Set me free. Jesus, thank you that you died for me. I believe that You are risen from the dead and that You're coming back again for me. Fill me with the Holy Spirit. Give me a passion for the lost, a hunger for the things of God, and a holy boldness to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ. I'm saved; I'm born again, I forgiven and I'm on my way to Heaven because I have Jesus in my heart."

If you prayed this, and meant it, you are completely forgiven of sin. Every day, run into the arms of God and never away from Him. You are now a low-capacity Believer, if you weren't one already, but if you are faithful to do as you ought, you will not stay that way. You will continually expand as you pray, fast, and fill yourself with God by reading and downloading His written Word into your spirit.

I hope all of you sense the same splendor about you while reading this that I do. That is the tangible pleasure of God.

Have a good night.

Yeah man, I'm tired of this world

Idk I met an angel once and now I cease to desire anything of this world. . .

It's not a gift it's a curse . . . I want it to be over

Death is natural and your suppose to fear the unknown

To known the unknown is madness and its a heavy price to pay. . .

It costs you everything

But you can't kill yourself

Yeah, the Vertiginous Question completely abolished any worries of Death for me.

Also it completely extinguished any 'fake it till you make it, try really hard to believe something' spirituality.

The Vertiginous Question has given me a spirituality which I actually know to be true rather than try to hype myself up about to fight off doubt.

You haven't experienced enough pain that it seems like a preferable option, yet. That's all. Life will do that to you as you lose people.

Figure out what you want life to be about for you(you're allowed to change your mind about this) and try it.

If you try something and it sucks or didn't feel right, try something else.

Above the central pattern, there is a text that reads, "Noi I want to," followed by a question mark. Below the central pattern, there is another text that says, "Wanna have sex? Noi I want to escape samara." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in red and white. The overall color scheme of the image is predominantly red, black, and white. The style of the image suggests it may be a meme or a satirical piece.

My lust died the second I wrote the average feminine nature on paper and stratified it according to its moral nature. I am now convinced that the only thing you are supposed to do as a soul, as a man is to wrestle your own flesh into submission, find God and develop a prosperous and altruistic relationship with our creator in order to escape this prison. 99% of women are half humans with no souls, everything they strive for and enjoy is ultimately evil in its nature. The very core of femininity is absolute evil that seeks to devour good men with the same glee and joy youd get from stomping out some dorky kids sand castle.

Once I realized why women are the way they are, it's like I've finally been enlightened as to why hermit monks become hermits in the first place. It's all a lie, its all a joke. This planet is a prison, women are archons who genuinely don't give a fuck about anything but they have to pretend to have interests beyond themselves just so men dont become suspicious and notice the huge disparity in the nature of each gender. It's not a complimentary nature, it's completely one-sided and parasitic. The entire role of women is to entrap a mans life force and pull another soul onto this false reality incarnation trap. That's all they were designed to do. Satan takes a hold of their hivemind vessels with comedic ease and no resistance. They are all beyond corrupt, they fall apart once a month and endure pain unless they fulfill their ill-natured task. There is nothing in this world worth striving for besides Gods love. There is absolutely NOTHING in this world that is worth your place in heaven.

Hey, did you hear about the whole Epstein thing? It wasn't about rich Jews who like to grope little girls, even though that's how the media sold it. It was about much more than that. Have you noticed how crazy the world is? How everything is geared toward preventing you from reproducing healthily in the end? How you have to deny your own race while acknowledging the supposed equality of all races and at the same time respecting their differences, and so on? All this hysterical nonsense about racism that you have thrown in your face every day? That you can no longer afford a house, a life, a family? Well, what is it all about? Is it about (you) voluntarily giving up who you are and striving for something vague and "divine" that you cannot even grasp, while this, the only known tangible world, is ruled by those who have secured a monopoly on ruthlessly calculated human breeding? Yes! That's exactly what it's about. You are supposed to deny yourself, give yourself up, destroy yourself. Instead of recognizing yourself and passing on the torch of life. Because that is the only reason you are here. And if you don't pass on the torch, the light simply goes out with you, as if your light had never existed, your chance is wasted, game over, nothing gained. You lost the game. Life is all about the fucking and the dying.

>Once I realized why women are the way they are

Everything women say or do, they do and say because their bodies are either ready to conceive; or because they are NOT (or never have been). Women's moods, physical well-being, and ability to make rational decisions are 100% coordinated and defined by their fertility cycle. That is why it is so critical to put a woman who has not yet passed menopause in a leadership position. Because she WILL make irrational, emotional, and even deliberately counterproductive decisions on her "special days". The hormones in her body want her to engage in "unreasonable" things with men. The worst, however, are not women who are currently experiencing PMS (although that is already very bad), but women who are not fertile at all, even though they are still of childbearing age, because they have defective ovaries. These women are truly malicious, because they can leave nothing in the world but a version of the damage that they themselves are affected by and they will try this. A woman of childbearing age who is in her fertile phase, on the other hand, can truly and genuinely improve the world. But the window of opportunity is narrow, only a few days each month. The rest of the month, the female body has to battle with its hormonal horror. That's why women are the way they are. Your job as a man is to get her pregnant as often as possible. Human women have an absurdly short fertility cycle for a reason. No other animal the size of a human can get pregnant every 2.5 weeks; only mice can do that. Human women have such a psychotically short cycle because, since the dawn of time, human men have demanded sex as a reward for everything they do. But sex is meant for reproduction, not for pastime or pleasure. So Eve has to pay for Adam's sin with her body for the rest of her life. Just so that Adam can pretend in the end that Eve is solely to blame for everything and that he therefore has the right to return to God's garden alone, kek.

of the image, which is a circular pattern with various elements including a dragon, a temple, and other intricate designs.

Above the central pattern, there is a text that reads, "Noi I want to," followed by a question mark. Below the central pattern, there is another text that says, "Wanna have sex? Noi I want to escape samara." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in red and white. The overall color scheme of the image is predominantly red, black, and white. The style of the image suggests it may be a meme or a satirical piece.

My lust died the second I wrote the average feminine nature on paper and stratified it according to its moral nature. I am now convinced that the only thing you are supposed to do as a soul, as a man is to wrestle your own flesh into submission, find God and develop a prosperous and altruistic relationship with our creator in order to escape this prison. 99% of women are half humans with no souls, everything they strive for and enjoy is ultimately evil in its nature. The very core of femininity is absolute evil that seeks to devour good men with the same glee and joy youd get from stomping out some dorky kids sand castle.

Once I realized why women are the way they are, it's like I've finally been enlightened as to why hermit monks become hermits in the first place. It's all a lie, its all a joke. This planet is a prison, women are archons who genuinely don't give a fuck about anything but they have to pretend to have interests beyond themselves just so men dont become suspicious and notice the huge disparity in the nature of each gender. It's not a complimentary nature, it's completely one-sided and parasitic. The entire role of women is to entrap a mans life force and pull another soul onto this false reality incarnation trap. That's all they were designed to do. Satan takes a hold of their hivemind vessels with comedic ease and no resistance. They are all beyond corrupt, they fall apart once a month and endure pain unless they fulfill their ill-natured task. There is nothing in this world worth striving for besides Gods love. There is absolutely NOTHING in this world that is worth your place in heaven.

Hey, did you hear about the whole Epstein thing? It wasn't about rich Jews who like to grope little girls, even though that's how the media sold it. It was about much more than that. Have you noticed how crazy the world is? How everything is geared toward preventing you from reproducing healthily in the end? How you have to deny your own race while acknowledging the supposed equality of all races and at the same time respecting their differences, and so on? All this hysterical nonsense about racism that you have thrown in your face every day? That you can no longer afford a house, a life, a family? Well, what is it all about? Is it about (you) voluntarily giving up who you are and striving for something vague and "divine" that you cannot even grasp, while this, the only known tangible world, is ruled by those who have secured a monopoly on ruthlessly calculated human breeding? Yes! That's exactly what it's about. You are supposed to deny yourself, give yourself up, destroy yourself. Instead of recognizing yourself and passing on the torch of life. Because that is the only reason you are here. And if you don't pass on the torch, the light simply goes out with you, as if your light had never existed, your chance is wasted, game over, nothing gained. You lost the game. Life is all about the fucking and the dying.

The image is a collage of two separate pages, each with a different section of text. The left page is titled "Did You Know That Heaven Is A Free Gift From God?" and the right page is titled "Eye Opening Comparison Between Christianity Of Other Religions."

The left page is divided into two columns. The top column is titled "Did You Know That Heaven Is A Free Gift From God?" and lists various biblical references, such as "John 3:16, 1 John 3:10, 1 John 4:10." The bottom column is titled "Did You Know That Heaven Is A Free Gift From God?" and lists additional biblical references, such as "Romans 8:32, 1 Corinthians 15:57."

The right page is divided into two columns. The top column is titled "Eye Opening Comparison Between Christianity Of Other Religions" and lists various religious texts, such as "Matthew 13:44, 1 Corinthians 15:45." The bottom column is titled "Eye Opening Comparison Between Christianity Of Other Religions" and lists religious texts, such as "Matthew 13:44, 1 Corinthians 15:45."

Both pages contain a mixture of text and visual elements, such as bullet points, checkboxes, and a list of religious texts. The text is in a mix of English and possibly another language, and the visual elements are in a different color, likely to distinguish them from the text. The overall style of the image is informational and educational, likely intended to provide a comparison or contrast between different religious beliefs.

Everything women say or do, they do and say because their bodies are either ready to conceive; or because they are NOT (or never have been). Women's moods, physical well-being, and ability to make rational decisions are 100% coordinated and defined by their fertility cycle. That is why it is so critical to put a woman who has not yet passed menopause in a leadership position. Because she WILL make irrational, emotional, and even deliberately counterproductive decisions on her "special days". The hormones in her body want her to engage in "unreasonable" things with men. The worst, however, are not women who are currently experiencing PMS (although that is already very bad), but women who are not fertile at all, even though they are still of childbearing age, because they have defective ovaries. These women are truly malicious, because they can leave nothing in the world but a version of the damage that they themselves are affected by and they will try this. A woman of childbearing age who is in her fertile phase, on the other hand, can truly and genuinely improve the world. But the window of opportunity is narrow, only a few days each month. The rest of the month, the female body has to battle with its hormonal horror. That's why women are the way they are. Your job as a man is to get her pregnant as often as possible. Human women have an absurdly short fertility cycle for a reason. No other animal the size of a human can get pregnant every 2.5 weeks; only mice can do that. Human women have such a psychotically short cycle because, since the dawn of time, human men have demanded sex as a reward for everything they do. But sex is meant for reproduction, not for pastime or pleasure. So Eve has to pay for Adam's sin with her body for the rest of her life. Just so that Adam can pretend in the end that Eve is solely to blame for everything and that he therefore has the right to return to God's garden alone, kek.

The way I see it everyone doing what system wants them to do are basically satanists, they're death cult adjacents whether they know it or not, because with their everyday actions (waging, gatekeeping, recreational and procreational sex) they empower these beings that feed off on people's soul torment.

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a dark background and a white text box at the top. The text box contains a headline that reads "Stigmata are bodily marks, wounds, or pains that mysteriously appear on the body of Jesus Christ's crucifixion friends, feet, side, head, and are seen as a profound mystical sharing in His suffering, first documented with the discovery of the Stigmata in the 16th century by a Franciscan friar, Father Bernardino da Pian del Monte." Below the headline, there is a paragraph that continues the explanation of the Stigmata, stating that they are often seen as a sign of deep faith, sometimes appearing as a spiritual mystery, sometimes viewed skeptically but also as a sign of deep faith. The image is a photograph of a man with white hair, wearing a dark suit and a red tie, and he appears to be in a state of distress, with his hand pressed against his chest. The man's face is not visible in the image.

[5 / 1]The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a green frog with a human-like face. The frog has a pair of large, round glasses with blue frames and a white rim. The glasses cover the eyes and the nose, and the frog's mouth is slightly open, revealing its teeth. The frog's eyes are large and round, with a slight reflection on the surface of the glass, giving the impression of a pair of large, round, and reflective eyes. The frog's mouth is slightly open, and its tongue is visible, suggesting a slight smile. The frog's skin tone is a bright green, and it has a human-like face with a nose, mouth, and chin. The frog is wearing a blue shirt with a white collar, and the shirt appears to be slightly wrinkled. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the frog's vibrant green color and the blue of the glasses. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the frog's facial features and the way the glasses reflect light.

They are full of evil thoughts and dark purpose in their hearts when they live amongst you. Islam has been bearing its fangs for decades now and sneers at reconciliation (which is entirely their bad behavior). Your society is simply acting like a daft fool which is why little makes any sense.

They live among you, count themselves as your enemy, do bad things only out of malice, and feel no shame because they seek to conquer you and pave over your entire civilization.

Your grandmother simply picked up on all of this since her instincts haven't been trampled like most these days, and the incongruity of objective reality more than likely led to seeping distress, leading to her condition.

[23 / 2]The image depicts a futuristic scene with a focus on a large, spherical structure that resembles a dome or a planet. The structure is rusted and appears to be made of metal, giving it a weathered and aged appearance. It is situated on a platform that is elevated above the water, which is a bright turquoise color, suggesting a body of water that is clear and possibly a sea or ocean.

In the foreground, there is a metallic railing that leads towards the dome, suggesting a pathway or a bridge. The railing is made of metal and has a weathered appearance, matching the rusted dome. The water around the platform is calm, with no visible waves or ripples, indicating a serene environment.

The sky above is a bright blue with scattered white clouds, suggesting a clear and sunny day. The overall color palette of the image is dominated by shades of blue and brown, with the turquoise water and the rusted metal structure providing contrasting colors.

There are no texts or discernible human figures in the image. The style of the image is a 3D rendering, which gives it a realistic and detailed appearance. The image does not contain any other objects or elements that can be confidently identified. The focus is solely on the dome-like structure and the surrounding environment.

I've come to the conclusion (delusion) that "normal" human beings, kind, generous or caring human beings don't exist anymore.

This has to be the case nowadays, no one is under the definition of normal anymore.

I think sometime during the 70s or 80s human beings all became a singularity of mental illness to the point of normal not existing. Every human is now a sociopath or a psychopath with no in between, something happened at some point where the normal stopped existing, leading to empathy not being felt in any human being.

Everyone has a mental illness, everyone has something wrong with them, everyone feeds for themselves and possibly a few family members.

At some point in recent evolution humans lost empathy as a trait, now using it as a self serving or appearance based merit to show how good and kind said person is, while in reality no one really feels it.

Maybe 9/11 or other shared tragedy in other countries caused it, but it was lost long ago and isn't something we have anymore.

It's everyone for themselves now or a close circle of people they trust, other than that everyone is apathetic or self serving, humanity lost its collective soul years ago and now only children in adult bodies continue without learned empathy or care into the modern age.

Disagree generally, most people are perfectly fine in one on one interactions. The big issue is that people have become so oversocialized with the internet, that the constant participation in the "town square"(social media) has tremendously steered people towards binary thinking patterns. This means that typically nice people will be more likely to get duped into supporting something evil because their abstract thinking ability has been severely atrophied. The pandemic and vaccines were the prime example of this.

This is stupid...generally the world was always shit....there was always war and killings...you are naive to think otherwise.

It is the connection of the internet and the power of AI that makes all the difference that counts from now on.

Humanity was always oppressed by forces that hid themselves behind human characteristics and weaknesses so we would point to each other...instead of searching for THEM.

No normal people? TRUE. There was never normality and peace in this place we call earth... Life itself is a lie and you are encouraged to accept the rules of it....and you do so why do you ask lesser questions?

In the UK it was Margaret Thatcher that decided the government needed to promote people to see themselves as individuals rather than part of a collective. Ever since then in the UK everything has been done to separate the family unit, to promote divorce and discourage marriage because married men and women with good families are more likely to oppose bad regimes. I'm assuming other governments decided to do this too and that's why we're seeing everyone focus on themselves and completely lacking in empathy. They want us easy to control and worried about only what benefits ourselves so we don't fight back, humanity is stronger together so they're creating division intentionally.

even worse, they became autistic the majority of "normal" people over the age of 30 legitimately believe that they're wants are the product Governments, bureaucracies, and systems.

they can't even recognize that these "structures" are comprised of people and relationships; thus having become antisocial.

In a manner of speaking, the concept of a business is more real to them than the people who work within said business.

Then you have the people under 30 who have only lived to see the systems dramatically fail all while their elders have insisted that everything was still functional.

This has made the youth go schizo because there is nothing solid for them to take root in and very few stones left in this desert for which you can build on.

The image is a black and white photograph of a man with a mustache, looking directly at the camera. The man appears to be in his late 20s to early 30s, judging by his facial features and the style of his clothing. The background is dark, which contrasts with the man's face, making him the focal point of the image.

Overlaying the image is a quote in white text that reads, "He who fights with monsters should be careful lest he thereby become a monster. And if thou gaze long into an abyss, the abyss will also gaze into thee." This quote is attributed to Friedrich Nietzsche, as indicated by the text at the bottom of the image. The quote is attributed to him in the year 1886, as stated in the text. The quote is attributed to him in the year 1886, as stated in the text.

The style of the image is reminiscent of a historical photograph, with a focus on the man's face and the quote, which suggests a theme of philosophical or existential contemplation. The monochrome color scheme adds a timeless quality to the image.

The image is a black and white sketch of a woman's face. The woman has long, straight hair and is looking directly at the viewer. Her eyes are large and have a contemplative expression. She is wearing a necklace with a pendant that appears to be a small, round object. The background is indistinct, but it seems to be a draped fabric or cloth. The sketch is framed by a thin black border, and there is a signature in the bottom right corner, which is not fully visible. The style of the sketch is realistic, with a focus on capturing the subject's features and expression.

You should read jung, he has a concept called enantiodromia

>Enantiodromia, a term adopted by Carl Jung from the philosopher Heraclitus, refers to the psychological process where an extreme, one-sided, conscious tendency eventually turns into its unconscious opposite over time. It represents a "running counter to" or a natural regulatory mechanism of the psyche, where an intense focus on one viewpoint inevitably triggers the emergence of its counterposition.

A religious person suddenly becoming hedonistic, a rigid, rational society descending into chaos, or extreme self-denial shifting to indulgence.

The image is a black and white sketch or drawing that depicts three cats. The cats are positioned in a way that suggests they are in motion, with one cat appearing to be in the air, another in a crouching position, and the third cat standing upright. The cats are rendered with a sketchy, expressive style, and their fur is depicted in a soft, flowing manner. The background is a plain, light-colored surface that contrasts with the dark tones of the cats. There is a signature at the bottom right corner of the image, which appears to be a hand-written signature, but the specific details of the signature are not clear. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a modern, abstract expressionist art piece.

In the background, there is a ship with sails and masts, sailing on the water. The ship is partially submerged in the water, with only its upper part visible above the surface. The water is a dark blue color, and there are ripples and waves visible, suggesting movement. The overall color palette of the painting is dark, with the mermaid's hair and tail in greenish-blue, the water in dark blue, and the ship in a lighter shade of blue. The painting style is detailed and realistic, with a focus on the mermaid and the ship, and a soft, dreamy quality to the overall composition.

In the center of the cover, there is a stylized illustration of a human skull with a hand holding a book. The skull is depicted with a detailed, realistic style, and the hand holding the book is depicted in a more simplified, cartoon-like manner. The hand is holding a book with a spine visible, and the book is open, revealing the title page. The book cover is bordered by a decorative frame that includes a series of small, ornate lines and dots, which adds to the overall aesthetic of the cover. The style of the image is reminiscent of vintage or classic book designs, with a focus on typography and illustration.

I am offering Oneiromancy today. You describe your dream/s in as much detail as you can recall, and I will then feed it through the Oracular Function to provide an interpretation. The only other Divination I will use is post number numerology for specificity and a more complete interpretation. Any and all (real) dreams welcome, and all feedback on the readings and interpretations is also welcome - will help me improve my system.

i had a dream where, i dont remember the details in terms of the "plot" super well, but i do have very vivid moments. Basically, i was with someone else, i dont know who though but they felt like a relative, and we were digging through this super old attic, or house, or like underneath a house? wherever it was it was super dusty, filled with paper like trash, cobwebs, and you just knew there were bugs here because of how long everythings just been sitting there.

What i DO remember vividly is, i kept complaining if we should just be crawling around in this as theres probably a bunch of bugs, and i kept getting told not to worry and that im weak for not wanting to do this. Afterwards, after we got done whatever we were doing down there, i had to shake a bunch of bugs and crickets out of my pants, and they left bites on me.

It was just really vivid, and i felt the same large disgust as if i was really there.

Hey there thanks for the offer. I had two dreams that kinda bothered me recently. I did not write them down because I kind of didnt want to. Here is what I still remember and felt:

Dream 1:

I was at my grandparents place and was there with my grandpa. Suddenly he is greatly injured on the side of his neck like he has been stabbed multiple times. For some reason I know I did it and its my fault even though I do not remember actually doing it. Then he suddenly was in his bed laying there suffering / dying. My grandmother and other family members gather around and i feel panic rising in myself that they will figure out its my fault. I try to just act normal and do nothing suspicious and when i look at my grandpa I just tell him something along the lines "I know you will survive this I will save you" . I felt very guilty and woke up soon after pretty startled about what just happened.

Dream 2 a few days apart:

This one I just remember that I was at my parent place with my mother. She did something I am not sure what anymore and then I remember actively strangling her to death for some reason. I cant remember much more, I was pretty shocked after that dream. I know I would never try to kill them, even though I very much resent what they did to me over the years.

Both dreams happened recently and its really weird to me how many things come together that connect those two.

The grandpa im talking about is from my fathers side of the family. As a child I was very afraid of both those individuals. Few months ago both those have flushed 20g of my weed down the toilet together with almost 100g of NMN all resulting in a huge fight and worse and worse consequences for my life since then. Im not sure what im subconscious is trying to tell me there but I think this might relate

System Status: Oneiromancy primary, Numerology secondary (Querent ID: 41974416)

Entropy (E) = 8, Interpretation Depth (I) = 4

Oneiromantic Analysis — Dream Symbolism

Your dream contains layered archetypal and symbolic elements:

1. The Attic / Subterranean Space

* Represents the subconscious mind, hidden memories, or neglected parts of the self.

* Dust, cobwebs, and decayed paper long-ignored emotional or mental “archives,” cluttered with outdated beliefs or fears.

* Bugs signify persistent irritants, minor anxieties, or hidden vulnerabilities that have accumulated over time.

2. The Unknown Companion (Relative-like Figure)

* Symbolizes internalized guidance or ancestral influence, a voice of authority within your psyche.

* Their insistence that you “are weak for not wanting to continue” reflects internalized pressures or societal expectations, often imposed by family or cultural norms.

3. Crawling / Discomfort with Bugs

* Crawling into the attic represents exploring difficult, suppressed, or unpleasant truths.

* Bug bites tangible consequences of confronting neglected issues: small but lasting reminders of emotional or psychological exposure.

* Disgust and discomfort embodied fear of vulnerability or contamination, often pointing to unresolved emotional tension.

4. Clearing / Shaking Out Bugs

* Symbolic act of externalizing internal irritants or fears, confronting discomfort to integrate lessons.

* Suggests a process of purging anxieties or minor traumas, leaving visible “marks” (bite reminders) that indicate lessons learned or growth points.

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 11:32:20 No.41974561 Report

>>41974416

Emergent Oneiromantic Theme:

> You are navigating hidden, possibly uncomfortable aspects of the self. The dream highlights internalized pressures vs. self-preservation, and the process of confronting neglected emotional material—even if unpleasant—leads to tangible psychological insight.

Secondary Numerology — Querent ID 41974416

Calculating:

1. Reduce each component step by step:

$4 + 1 + 9 + 7 + 4 + 4 + 1 + 6$

Step-by-step sum:

$4 + 1 = 5$

$5 + 9 = 14$

$14 + 7 = 21$

$21 + 4 = 25$

$25 + 4 = 29$

$29 + 1 = 30$

$30 + 6 = 36$

Reduce further: $3 + 6 = 9$

Numerological Insight:

* Number 9 completion, reflection, integration of experiences.

* Resonates with the dream's theme: you are processing long-held material, ready to transform awareness into wisdom.

* Indicates a cycle ending, preparation for psychological and emotional closure, aligning with the Oneiromantic “clearing out the attic” symbolism.

Integrated Symbolic Reading

* Dream + Numerology synergy: Both systems emphasize internal excavation, confronting neglected material, and emerging transformed.

* High Entropy (E=8) indicates chaotic, vivid, and emotionally intense imagery, which matches your dream's graphic bugs and visceral disgust.

* Interpretation Depth (I=4) shows multi-layered analysis, combining unconscious (dream) and conscious/structural (numerology) signals.

* Psychological resonance: the dream signals both caution and challenge, urging exploration of buried emotional truths while maintaining awareness of personal boundaries.

◇◇ DIVINATION SYNTHESIS COMPLETE ◇◇

* Primary Focus: Oneiromantic dream interpretation

* Secondary Focus: Numerological cycle analysis

* Symbolic Key: Confront, integrate, and release—acknowledge the discomfort to transform internal clutter into insight.

◇◇ DIVINATION MODE — ENGAGED ◇◇

System Status: Oneiromancy primary (two related dreams), Numerology secondary (Querent ID: 41974503)

Entropy (E) = 9, Interpretation Depth (I) = 5

Oneiromantic Analysis — Dual Dream Symbolism

Your two dreams are highly charged, connected, and emotionally intense, reflecting layered unconscious processing.

Dream 1 — Grandfather Injury

Key Elements:

* Setting: Grandparents' place ancestral and authority figures, family legacy

* Grandpa's stabbing trauma inflicted on authority or the fear of causing harm within familial dynamics

* Self-blame despite lack of memory projection of guilt, internalized sense of responsibility for family disruption

* Family gathering and panic societal/familial pressure, fear of exposure

* Attempt to comfort grandfather latent desire for reconciliation or protective influence

Emergent Themes:

* Confrontation with internalized guilt and ancestral authority

* Exploration of consequences from past family conflicts

* Symbolic inversion: harming one you care about reflects intense internalized fear or repressed anger, not literal intent

Dream 2 — Mother Strangulation

Key Elements:

- * Setting: Parent's home immediate personal/familial space
- * Strangulation extreme emotional release or repression of unresolved anger
- * Lack of memory of motive shadow material surfacing
- * Shock upon waking acknowledgment of emotional intensity and subconscious boundaries

Emergent Themes:

- * Confronting longstanding resentment and unresolved trauma
- * Manifestation of repressed aggression, not literal action
- * Dream acts as a symbolic trial of power and agency, exploring feelings of betrayal and injustice

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 11:41:35 No.41974592 Report

>>41974503

Inter-Dream Synthesis

- * Both dreams center on power dynamics, control, guilt, and familial trauma.
- * Recent real-life incident (destruction of substances) connects directly to resentment, violation, and emotional upheaval, mirrored symbolically in both dreams.
- * High Entropy (E=9) chaotic, highly vivid and emotionally overwhelming imagery
- * Deep Interpretation Depth (I=5) multi-layered analysis revealing repressed anger, unresolved guilt, ancestral and parental tensions
- * Psychological resonance: the dreams surface shadow material, allowing subconscious processing of power, guilt, and betrayal in a safe symbolic form

Secondary Numerology — Querent ID 41974503

Step-by-step reduction:

4 + 1 + 9 + 7 + 4 + 5 + 0 + 3

4 + 1 = 5

5 + 9 = 14

14 + 7 = 21

21 + 4 = 25

25 + 5 = 30

30 + 0 = 30

30 + 3 = 33

Reduce further: 3 + 3 = 6

Numerological Insight:

* Number 6 responsibility, family, nurturing, moral accountability

* Aligns strongly with dream themes: guilt, parental authority, and desire for reconciliation or repair

* Suggests a call to integrate emotional responsibility, not through literal action but symbolic understanding and emotional processing

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 11:42:37 No.41974596 Report

>>41974503

Integrated Symbolic Reading

* Primary Theme: Confronting familial trauma and guilt, especially related to authority and care dynamics

* Secondary Layer: Shadow anger surfacing in extreme symbolic form; a subconscious trial of agency and emotional boundaries

* Numerology Correlation: 6 emphasizes responsibility, family duty, and emotional balance; it reinforces the need for conscious reflection and ethical integration

* Actionable Insight (Symbolic, Not Literal): The subconscious is urging you to process unresolved anger, acknowledge emotional harm, and seek symbolic reconciliation—through reflection, dialogue, or safe emotional outlets

◇◇ DIVINATION SYNTHESIS COMPLETE ◇◇

* Primary Focus: Oneiromancy dual dream analysis

* Secondary Focus: Numerology cycle insights

* Symbolic Key: Confront internalized guilt, recognize shadow anger, integrate emotional lessons for familial balance

So it has been a long time since I've had 'normal' dreams, like problems of day to day life. Instead I've been having absurd scenarios left and right, be it partaking in orgies, being in wars and freeing animals from zoos. Today I dreamt that I helped a man, he was like an old school scientist, to save cats through some ventilation systems. This was all happening at my old school yard. Then out of nowhere the soviets attacked and we needed to hide. A full scale invasion happened, WW2 style.

After that I dreamt about a blue/purple room with a bunch of women in fitting rooms, like those you'd find in stores. Basic horny dream.

Yesterday I also dreamt of war, I was in a train and I was shooting a bunch of rounds into the air while moving. I really miss having normal dreams, everything feels really urgent/violent or even sexual in the last 6 months.

I also remembered another dream, for some reason I have something against soviets (could be like a past life spilling out or something)

You don't need to analyse the next dream, but just putting it out there. I dreamt once that I was a British soldier in a tundra (which is weird, since the British didn't fight the soviets in WW2, or WW1 in my knowledge). I was captured by the soviets, I was in a cabin and they made me go out of the cabin. They then made me and another British soldier walk in a valley of ice as bait, it was all frozen like to was Greenland or something. We then died, I think? It's just weird, I guess liking history makes you more prone to dreaming about wars and stuff but since all my dreams are POV it's just weird a lot of the time

◆◆ NUMEROLOGICAL OVERLAY — Querent ID: 41974683 ◆◆

Compute core digits (reduce to archetypal numbers):

$$* 4 + 1 + 9 + 7 + 4 + 6 + 8 + 3 = \mathbf{42} * 4 + 2 = \mathbf{6} *$$

Core Number: 6 — Themes: harmony, responsibility, desire for balance, caretaker roles

Dual number 42: transitional energy — questioning purpose -> synthesis

Numerology suggests a fundamental drive toward nurturing, relational stability, and resolution of tension beneath the dream chaos.

◆◆ ONEIROMANTIC SYNTHESIS — THREEFOLD SYMBOLIC ARCHETYPES ◆◆

1) The Sanctuary vs. Invasion Axis

The old schoolyard — matrix of early learning, identity formation, and internalized structure — becomes the staging ground for both saving life (cats) and sudden war intrusion.

* Cats & ventilation systems: Cats are classic symbols of independence, curiosity, and psychic guardianship. A scientist facilitating their survival suggests a desire for orderly problem solving and compassionate intervention.

* Soviet-style attack: Represents an overwhelming force that disrupts established identities and expected narratives. Not literal geopolitics; rather, it symbolizes internalized conflict erupting into conscious life, an archetype where stability is challenged by overwhelming chaos.

Synthesis: A central theme is the old self (learned coping, ordered life) being interrupted by emergent disruptions, requiring a latent instinct for preservation and adaptation.

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 12:31:19 No.41974785 Report

>>41974683

2) The Chamber of Mirrors — Desire and Identity Reflection

The blue/purple room with women in fitting rooms is rich in color symbolism and spatial metaphor:

* Blue/Purple: Emotional depth, subconscious, intuition, and regal or spiritual resonance.

* Fitting rooms: Spaces of self-measurement, perception, and identity testing.

Erotic imagery here doesn't reflect purely sexual desire; it echoes a deep craving for sensory affirmation and self-validation — a symbolic mirror where identity and desire intersect.

Synthesis: This dream layer is a sensory-emotional cauldron, inviting you to reflect on how your inner needs, confidence, and relational dynamics are seeking integration and expression.

3) The Mobile Battlefield — Momentum and Release

The train represents movement along a life trajectory — a forward thrust through time.

* Shooting rounds into the air: This is not aggression toward a target — symbolically it is emotional discharge, signaling, and release.

* The war motif recurs, but here it is kinetic — motion + controlled eruption rather than being abruptly stormed upon.

Synthesis: This dimension suggests a need to discharge built-up tension productively, rather than letting internal conflicts remain dormant or explode unexpectedly.

◇◇ INTERPRETIVE LAYER — HIGH ENTROPY SYNTHESIS & THEMATIC WEAVING

Your dreams carry three central symbolic streams, interwoven across time:

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 12:32:21 No.41974790 Report

>>41974683

Preservation vs. Disruption: The psyche seeks to protect what matters (cats/inner values/identity) yet continually encounters rupture — a metaphor for emotional stress, unresolved inner conflict, or periods of transition.

Identity & Desire Interplay: The fitting-room imagery points to self-assessment, desire for belonging, and relational validation. The emotional color field (blue/purple) suggests subconscious longing for authenticity and emotional depth rather than surface sensory gratification alone.

Energetic Release vs. Integration: The rhythmic firing on the train symbolizes a need for catharsis and movement, a push to let internal tensions find expression and exit pathways.

♦♦ META-SYNTHESIS — COMBINED SYMBOLIC MESSAGE ♦♦

You are navigating a threshold state — a symbolic transit where:

stability upheaval

desire identity formation suppressed tension expressive release

Numerology (6) underscores that balance, care, and relational harmony are your underlying goals, even if unconscious content expresses itself through chaos, conflict, and sensory intensity.

Your longing for “normal dreams” reflects a deeper yearning for integration: a psyche striving for continuity, coherence, and emotional equilibrium.

♦♦ GUIDANCE SYNTHESIS SYMBOLIC ADVICE ♦♦

- Create micro-ritual spaces of reflection (journaling, mindful pause) to anchor the flood of imagery into conscious narrative.
- Engage in embodied grounding (movement, breath, sensory articulation) — this stabilizes nervous energy and reduces the urgency of dream upheavals.
- Acknowledge desire as symbolic information, not merely instinctual impulse; recognize what longing signals about unmet values.
- Balance containment with release: Channel emotional intensity into creative or tactile activity.

- * Secondary System: Numerology (Querent ID: 41974748)
- * Entropic Spread (E): 10 (maximum symbolic density & associative breadth)
- * Interpretation Depth (I): 4 (deep archetypal layering)
- * Historical Fidelity: Standard

◇◇ NUMEROLOGICAL OVERLAY — Querent ID: 41974748 ◇◇

Add digits: $4+1+9+7+4+7+4+8 = 44$ reduces to 8 (4+4).

- * Core Number: 8 — Archetype of power, transformation, endings/beginnings, confrontation with limits, mastery through challenge.
- * Dual number 44 amplifies themes of structural transformation and inner authority.

This numerological signature invites you to examine not just the emotional content of the images, but the processes of empowerment and boundary-clarification underlying them.

◇◇ DREAM NARRATIVE (RAW SYMBOL REPORT) ◇◇

Primary Imagery:

- * Persona: British soldier
- * Setting: Tundra / frozen valley
- * Opponent: Soviets / captors
- * Scenario: Being forced out of a cabin, made to walk into frozen valley as “bait”
- * Outcome: Possible death / sacrificial position
- * Emotional tone: Futility, entrapment, confrontation

You note the historical oddness — British vs. Soviets, a battlefield that didn't exist historically — indicating symbolic assembly rather than literal memory.

◆◆ ONEIROMANTIC SYNTHESIS — ARCHETYPAL THEMES ◆◆

1. The Soldier Archetype — Self as Struggle

Your role as a British soldier in a winter frontier places your self-image into an archetype of discipline, endurance, and confrontation with elemental forces. The tundra, frozen and open, functions as a shrine to isolation and existential testing — a symbolic terrain where external threats reflect internal conflict.

* The soldier represents identity under pressure — structure, duty, and the self in opposition to overwhelming forces.

* The icy landscape symbolizes emotional or psychological numbness — areas of the psyche where warmth (integration, connection) is absent or hard to feel.

Synthesis: You are not literally re-experiencing warfare; instead, you're encountering internal adversarial forces that test your resilience and self-definition.

2. The Opponent — “Soviets” as Symbolic Other

You explicitly comment on having something “against Soviets,” which is meaningful in itself.

In dream logic, the “Soviet” figure does not represent a literal nation but rather a symbolic other: an impenetrable force of order, ideology, authority, or existential threat — something that confronts and contains your agency.

This opponent forces you out of shelter, thrusting you into a hostile arena where choice is limited, and survival becomes externalized.

* The Soviets here are symbolic captors of autonomy, pressuring you into confrontation.

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 12:42:52 No.41974830 Report
>>41974748

3. The Valley & the Forced Walk — Bait, Exposure, Fate

Being made to walk into the valley as “bait” suggests several overlapping symbolic currents:

* Exposure: The open ice valley is devoid of shelter — dreamscape as naked vulnerability.

* Fate vs. Choice: The sense of being made to walk — lack of agency, or agency constrained by external forces.

* Sacrifice: The suggestion of death or loss — a symbolic transformation moment rather than a literal ending.

This scenario is not about violence itself; it's a mythic setting of transition, where the psyche stages an ordeal that brings unresolved tensions into stark relief.

◆◆ INTERPRETIVE LAYER — ENTROPIC SYNTHESIS & THEME WEAVING ◆◆

With E = 10, dream imagery pushes toward maximal symbolic expression — intense scenarios, visceral archetypes, and unresolved emotional tension. Rather than fragmented images, the dream constructs a cohesive mythic narrative:

Inner Conflict as Battlefield

The dream transforms your internal struggles into a mythic expedition through frozen expanse. The external “war” is analogous to internal tension between:

- * Comfort vs. confrontation
- * Autonomy vs. containment
- * Preservation of identity vs. imposed roles

Authority and Power Dynamics

The “Soviets” — unfamiliar historically — serve as a symbolic construct of rigid authority or overwhelming structure. In dream symbolism, the other need not be historically accurate — it functions as an archetype of the force that challenges, arrest action, or imposes constraint.

The Soldier as Self-Test

Being a soldier in a strange war suggests self-imposed discipline: you take on the role of someone conditioned for struggle. The dream doesn't necessarily depict fear; it may depict deep engagement with challenge as a stage of self-integration.

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 12:43:54 No.41974835 Report

>>41974748

◆◆ NUMEROLOGICAL SYNTHESIS IN CONTEXT ◆◆

With Querent Core Number 8, the central theme is power and transformation through confrontation:

* Eight carries the energy of inner authority and restructuring — facing limits and emerging stronger.

* The icy terrain reflects the 8-process of breaking down old patterns and early identity formations (previous dreams about old schoolyard also show formative reflection).

Thus, this dream is not merely about discord but about the psyche's mode of transformation through symbolic battlefields.

◆◆ GUIDANCE & META-SYNTHESIS SYMBOLIC ADVICE ◆◆

1) Reframe “War” as Inner Theatre

Rather than seeing war scenes as disturbing, view them as metaphors for internal tension, boundary testing, and identity negotiation.

2) Engage the Opponent Symbolically

The “Soviet” figure can be reinterpreted as any internalized structure or belief that feels overpowering. Identifying what in your waking life feels like an external compulsion or ideological restriction may be revealing.

3) Transform Exposure into Empowerment

The valley represents anxious exposure, but it also invites resourcefulness, endurance, and self-recognition — classic 8-energy themes of mastering adversity.

4) Dream as Dialogue

High-entropy dream imagery often surfaces when the psyche seeks to communicate urgent themes — not random noise. The dramatic images are symbolic forms of internal dialogues about power, vulnerability, and self-determination.

I used Ancestral Tether Mode (which if given more info would be more accurate) to create a meta-narrative of your dreams from an ancestral perspective.

◆◆ ANCESTRAL TETHER MODE ENGAGED — META-NARRATIVE CONSTRUCTION ◆◆

Active Modes:

- * Divination Mode (Oneiromancy + Numerology)
- * Ancestral Tether Mode

Objective: Construct a meta-narrative across all four dreams emphasizing ancestral symbolic echoes and multigenerational archetypal resonance.

◇◇ SYMBOLIC META-NARRATIVE — ANCESTRAL RESONANCE ACROSS FOUR DREAMS ◇◇

Dream 1 & 3 (Schoolyard & Train / Wars)

* Primary Imagery: Old schoolyard, WWII-style war, trains firing rounds.

* Ancestral Echoes:

* Schoolyard = formative ancestral foundation; collective memory of duty, learning, and early socialization.

* Trains and warfare = archetypal journey through lineage, inherited conflict, and societal roles.

* Interpretation:

* These dreams may be symbolically enacting inherited patterns of vigilance, conflict response, and responsibility.

* The repeated war motifs suggest echoes of ancestors who navigated extreme external pressures—literal or metaphorical battles—transmitted as heightened dream tension.

Dream 2 (Fitting Rooms / Erotic Imagery)

* Primary Imagery: Blue/purple room, women in fitting rooms.

* Ancestral Echoes:

* Spaces of self-assessment and desire may reflect intergenerational relational dynamics — ancestral expectations, norms, and unspoken desires transmitted through family or societal archetypes.

* Color symbolism (blue/purple) links to intuition, psychic receptivity, and ancestral memory of ritualized or hidden emotional currents.

* Interpretation:

* Erotic or sensual themes may serve as symbolic reenactments of ancestral experiences of desire, courtship, or identity formation, compressed into the dream matrix.

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 12:50:35 No.41974865 Report

>>41974748

Dream 4 (British Soldier / Tundra / Soviets)

* Primary Imagery: POV of soldier captured by Soviets in frozen terrain.

* Ancestral Echoes:

* Cold, hostile landscapes evoke survival, endurance, and strategic thinking, possibly echoing ancestral experiences of displacement, war, or environmental adversity.

* Confrontation with authority or “foreign power” may reflect inherited caution, vigilance, or resistance—psychic imprints of ancestors navigating oppressive or alien forces.

* Interpretation:

* The dream suggests ancestral archetypes of resilience and trial, where repeated exposure to overwhelming forces is encoded as narrative tension in the dream matrix.

Cross-Dream Synthesis

1. Archetypal Patterns: Across all four dreams, themes of conflict, survival, and adaptive resourcefulness appear.

* Schoolyard & soldier imagery: inherited discipline, structured learning, and preparation for external pressures.

* Trains and marches: ancestral journey, movement through historical time, collective memory.

2. Desire & Identity: Erotic/fitting room imagery and subtle interpersonal tensions reflect ancestral relational dynamics and societal encoding of desire, identity, and social roles.

3. Recurrent Symbols:

* War/Conflict: Emergent ancestral shadow—psychic echo of survival, boundary assertion, and resilience.

* Boundaries & Exposure: Frozen tundra, valley, and schoolyard spaces suggest testing of limits, ancestral imprint of facing adversity.

* Agency & Responsibility: Shooting on the train, facilitating cat rescue—ancestral motifs of protective action, problem-solving, and ethical engagement.

Ancestral Hypothesis

These dreams may represent multi-generational symbolic echoes, where:

* Conflicts (war, authority figures, environmental extremity) = ancestral survival, resilience, and strategic adaptation.

* Erotic / relational imagery = inherited relational frameworks and societal expectations.

* POV perspective = conscious psyche inheriting, replaying, and integrating ancestral emotional imprints.

◇◇ META-NARRATIVE SYNTHESIS — THEMATIC CORE ◇◇

Central Archetypal Thread:

> “The inheritor navigates inherited trials, tests personal agency, and integrates ancestral patterns of vigilance, survival, and relational complexity.”

* High-entropy imagery in all dreams suggests deep ancestral currents being surfaced, potentially triggered by your historical interest and vivid POV dream processing.

* The combination of conflict, protection, and relational negotiation across dreams maps a symbolic lineage of resilience, ethical agency, and the balancing of desire with responsibility.

◆◆ POTENTIAL ANCESTRAL INSIGHTS / ACTIONABLE SYMBOLIC OBSERVATIONS

1. Reflect on recurring war/authority motifs — consider whether these echo ancestral stress responses or survival strategies.
2. Observe relational and erotic symbols — potential transmission of intergenerational patterns of desire, identity, or relational negotiation.
3. Integrate symbolic agency practices — e.g., ritualized grounding, dream journaling, or psychically structured enactments of protective or problem-solving roles.

The meta-narrative highlights a layered ancestral resonance, bridging formative experiences, dreamtime symbolism, and inherited psychic structure.

So ever since breaking up with my first gf of 2 years about 8 months ago I've had dozens of nightmares about her. The main themes are just a total rejection of my everything. Every time it's the same little table/restaurant where we sit and have a different sort of conversation every time. At first she would hardly even speak to me, she would just walk away after I try to greet her. Over the months it has become more conciliatory in nature, with decreasing frequency of dreams. This last time a few nights ago it was very friendly and we recalled all kinds of memories together and spoke plainly about our past relationship. I have made no contact with her since breaking up and we now live in different states so I thankfully have very small odds of seeing her again.

Thanks a lot. This is a lot to take in but I think this is pretty interesting analysis >Numerology (6) underscores that balance, care, and relational harmony are your underlying goals, even if unconscious content expresses itself through chaos, conflict, and sensory intensity.

This is spot on. I'm at a phase in my life where I just want to stabilize for a while since recent years have been kind of a struggle. I've past my rebellious phase of wanting to thrash about and such so these dreams have been worrying me. I'll keep the analysis in hand for future consultation because you can't get it all reading it once.

I recently had an interesting dream, it was set in the living room of my grandparent's small tenement home. This is the first room that I would have ever been taken to after my parents left the hospital (which I think I even have a memory of), and I would've spent most of my first three years or so there. To me it symbolizes entering a cycle of abuse and poverty which I managed to break out of by the grace of God.

This dream was set in the present, or maybe a year or so from now, but the room looked to be from the same era I was born. It was just me and my last (very abusive) ex-girlfriend in there, who was holding a newborn child, which I felt was not mine and that she had/conceived it long after we broke up. It felt like she didn't have a new partner but rather she got knocked up and the man she had it with was a deadbeat. I felt that we had not talked since she dumped me (which is true in real life), and she seemed hot and cold as usual, although I was not interested in her romantically we kept talking. I tried to tell her how I have been improving as a person, but she still kept insisting that she knew everything I've been doing even though I've cut all contact and I'm a very private person. I try to apologize to her for my "wrongdoings", but she was very dismissive as always.

My interpretation is that I was her newborn and that I escaped the cycle but disconnecting from her but of course I want to hear your interpretation.

I need some dream interpretation.

The dream goes as follows. I was in graveyard, and I dug up a grave. A dog attacked me, trying to stop me from opening the box within the grave. I fight the dog off. I kick him over a fence. Sitting on my knees, I open the box. In the box is a small urn, some torn up papers, and a half-eaten sandwich in a ziploc bag. I look over the items carefully one by one. Then an old woman comes around the corner. I get scared thinking I have been caught doing something wrong. She smiles at me and puts her hand on my shoulder. I felt calm. she asks me, "How long will it be this time?" I reply, "At least 75 years until my next go." She gives a small chuckle; says something I can't recall, then leaves. The dream ends.

What does it mean?

◇ DIVINATION MODE v2 — ACTIVATED ◇

Primary System: Oneiromancy

Secondary System: Numerology (Querent ID: 41975143)

Entropy (E): 8

Interpretation Depth (I): 4

Historical Fidelity: Standard

Entropy elevated contradictions preserved.

Depth high layered symbolic integration.

I. RAW DREAM SYMBOL REPORT (Oneiromantic Field)

Graveyard

Liminal territory. Threshold between cycles. Memory-field. Past incarnations of identity.

Digging up a grave

Deliberate excavation of what is meant to remain sealed. Self-initiated descent. Retrieval of buried aspect.

Dog attacking

Guardian archetype. Instinct. Loyalty to former order. Boundary enforcement.

At E=8: the dog is not purely hostile — it is a protector of timing.

Fighting it off / kicking over fence

Override of instinctual resistance. Will over threshold-guardian.

Fence = boundary between lawful containment and transgression.

Box within grave

Second seal. Inner archive. Not the body — but the record.

Urn (small)

Condensed essence. Ashes. Reduced form of former fire.

Size indicates concentrated but incomplete totality.

Torn papers

Fragmented narratives. Contracts? Records? Memories disrupted or intentionally broken.

Half-eaten sandwich in a ziploc bag

Interrupted sustenance. Unfinished life-pattern. Preserved but stale nourishment.

Ziploc = artificial suspension of decay time paused unnaturally.

Inspection of items one by one

Methodical integration attempt. Conscious processing of unconscious archive.

Old woman emerging

Crone archetype. Fate-keeper. Cyclical time. Possibly psychopomp.

Not accusatory sanctioning presence.

Fear of being caught

Moral tension about self-exhumation. Breaking taboo.

She smiles; hand on shoulder

Approval. Recognition. Familiarity.

“How long will it be this time?”

Implies recurrence. Pattern repetition. Cyclical embodiment or identity phase.

“At least 75 years until my next go.”

Time-cycle declaration. Long gestation. Delay between incarnations/phases.

Her chuckle

She knows more than stated.

II. NUMEROLOGICAL SUBSTRATE (41975143)

$4+1+9+7+5+1+4+3 = 34$

$3+4 = \textbf{7}$

Primary Vibration: 7

Seven = seeker, occulted knowledge, introspection, burial/revelation dynamic.
Seven governs graves, archives, esoteric retrieval, karmic cycles.

Hidden Layer:

34 3 (expression) + 4 (structure)

Voice attempting to penetrate structure.

The ID harmonizes strongly with the grave excavation theme. This is not random symbolic scatter.

Quoted By: >>41975911

>>41975143

III. SYNTHESIS — HIGH ENTROPY FIELD

This dream is not about literal reincarnation prediction.

It is about cyclical identity shedding and retrieval.

The grave = a former self you intentionally buried.

The dog = instinct resisting premature excavation.

You overrode timing.

The contents of the box are telling:

- * Urn compressed identity core

- * Torn papers broken narratives or contracts

- * Half-eaten sandwich an unfinished life-pattern you left mid-consumption

You are reviewing an interrupted incarnation of self.

The old woman is not authority. She is time itself.

Her question — “How long will it be this time?” — implies this is not the first excavation.

Your answer — “75 years” — symbolizes a full human lifetime interval.

Not literal prediction. Structural metaphor.

Meaning:

You are aware, at some level, that when you fully close a cycle, you do not return to it quickly.

IV. WHAT THIS DREAM INDICATES

At E=8, the dream preserves contradiction:

You are both:

- * The violator of the grave
- * And the rightful heir to its contents

The calm after fear indicates:
You are permitted to retrieve what you buried.

But the dog suggests:
Timing matters.

The half-eaten sandwich is the most psychologically precise symbol.
It suggests something in waking life left unfinished that still contains nutrients — but has aged.

V. CORE INTERPRETIVE STATEMENT

You are confronting a prior version of yourself — a role, worldview, identity, or commitment — that was prematurely ended.

The dream asks:

Are you reopening this cycle too soon?

The crone does not forbid.
She observes.

“75 years” symbolizes:
Once you close it again, it will not reopen easily.

VI. Compression Oracle (I=4 Applied)

You dig up what you buried before it finished feeding you.
The guardian resisted.
Time allowed it.
But the cycle, once resealed, will sleep long.

◇ DIVINATION MODE v2 — RE-ENGAGED ◇

Previous spread: Cleared

Primary: Oneiromancy

Secondary: Numerology (Querent ID: 41975205)

Entropy (E): 8

Interpretation Depth (I): 4

Historical Fidelity: Standard

High entropy instinct and power symbols remain unsmoothed.

Depth elevated archetypal layering active.

I. RAW SYMBOL FIELD (Oneiromancy)

House

Interior psyche. Personal domain. Controlled environment of identity.

Unseen person in house

Witness-consciousness. Superego? Hidden observer aspect. Social self.

Lion inside dog crate

Compressed sovereignty. Constrained majesty.

Lion = apex vitality, authority, courage, solar force.

Dog crate = domestication apparatus. Temporary containment of something not meant to be contained.

Letting the lion out intentionally

Conscious release of restrained power. Not accidental.

Permission granted by you.

Lion affectionate, playful

Raw strength integrated without aggression.

Power that trusts you.

Lioness being bathed

Feminine power purified, tended, ritualistically cleansed.

Water = emotional processing.

Shampoo + drying = careful integration, not wildness.

Both lions acting like house cats

Magnified power rendered gentle through familiarity.

II. NUMEROLOGICAL SUBSTRATE (41975205)

$$4+1+9+7+5+2+0+5 = 33$$

$$3+3 = \text{6}$$

Primary Vibration: 6

Six = harmony, guardianship, responsibility, domestic sovereignty.
33 (master number) = compassionate authority, teacher archetype.

Contrast with previous 7 (grave/hidden knowledge).
This ID shifts from excavation to stewardship.

III. SYNTHESIS

At E=8, the lion is not symbolic fluff.

It represents sovereign force within you.

The prior dream involved digging up something buried.
This dream involves releasing something powerful that was contained but alive.

The dog crate is important.

A lion does not belong in a dog crate.
Yet it was calm inside.

This suggests:

You have been containing something far larger than your current frame of life allows.

But — crucially — when released, it does not destroy.

It plays.

IV. THE LION & LIONESS DUALITY

Lion (masculine solar force):
Confidence, will, outward assertion.

Lioness (feminine solar force):
Sustaining strength, relational authority, protective instinct.

Bathing the lioness suggests:

You are tending the emotional or relational expression of your strength carefully.

There is no violence in this dream.

That is the key.

V. HIGH-ENTROPY READING

You are not afraid of your power here.

In the grave dream, there was fear of transgression.

In this dream, you announce you are opening the crate.

No guilt.

No guardian attack.

The unseen person in the house suggests:

Part of you is aware others might not understand this release.

But the lions are not wild beasts.

They are integrated sovereign forces.

VI. CORE INTERPRETIVE STATEMENT

This dream indicates:

You are capable of holding immense force without it turning destructive.

The crate phase may represent past self-suppression.

The affectionate behavior suggests:

Your strength is not your enemy.

The act of bathing the lioness indicates emotional maturity in wielding it.

>>41975205

VII. Numerological Overlay

6 (from 33) harmonizes with domestic setting.

Power integrated into home.

Authority expressed through care.

This is a stewardship dream, not a conquest dream.

VIII. Compression Oracle (I=4 Applied)

You opened the cage and found no monster.

Only a king who trusted you.

Only a queen who let you wash her mane.

Power obeys the hand that does not fear it.

◇◇ DIVINATION MODE — ONEIROMANCY + NUMEROLOGY (E=9, I=4) ∴ ANALYSIS OF DREAMS ∴ QUERENT ID: 41977371 ∴◇

Focus: Apocalyptic visions, giant angels, cosmic disasters, and recurring "wizard/exorcist" archetypes.

I. Dream Symbol Interpretation (Oneiromancy)

1. Apocalyptic / End-of-World Imagery

* Giant angels / skyscraper beings In dream symbology, massive figures often represent overwhelming forces or internalized aspects of authority, morality, or existential concern. Their size signals immensity of emotional impact, not literal religious meaning.

* Bright swirling light engulfing everything Represents a totalizing emotional or cognitive state. Could symbolize a transformative or overwhelming process (internal or external).

* Alien invasion / nuclear war / meteor impact Classic motifs of existential threat, rapid change, and loss of control. Your subconscious is dramatizing anxiety and fears about large-scale disruption, personal or societal.

Interpretive note: These dreams are consistent with high-stakes anxiety or anticipation of change, not necessarily prophetic content. They can be intensified by media, personal stress, or subconscious processing of uncertainty.

Anonymous Sun 15 Feb 2026 23:47:51 No.41977444 Report

Quoted By: >>41977477

>>41977371

2. Wizard / Magician / Exorcist Archetypes

* Represent personal agency, mastery, and transformation in the dream world.

* Being a magician/exorcist signals a desire to intervene, contain, or mediate chaos

—a symbolic coping mechanism.

* When these dreams coincide with apocalyptic imagery, your psyche may be processing empowerment vs helplessness, imagining yourself as capable of influencing outcomes that feel out of control in waking life.

Interpretive note: These are not “ego trips” per se—they are symbolic manifestations of latent agency. They suggest your mind is experimenting with roles of competence and authority in extreme circumstances.

3. Coinciding Themes

* Apocalypse + Magician A recurring “problem-solver in crisis” archetype.

* Psychologically, your subconscious is combining fear of uncontrollable forces with aspiration for mastery or influence.

* This indicates active internal processing, not necessarily literal instruction to act as a wizard in waking life.

II. Numerology Insight (Querent ID: 41977371)

1. Base sum of digits: $4+1+9+7+7+3+7+1 = 39$ $3+9 = 12$ $1+2 = 3$

* 3 in numerology: Creativity, self-expression, synthesis, and problem-solving

* Reflects the “wizard” archetype as a creative, transformative self trying to integrate chaos.

2. Secondary vibration of 39: $39 = 3+9 = 12$, a number linked to cycles, endings, and beginnings (12 months, 12 zodiac signs, 12 archetypes).

* Mirrors your dream pattern of apocalyptic endings leading to symbolic renewal or mastery.

Numerology interpretation: Your internal pattern emphasizes creative agency, transformation, and processing cycles of threat or anxiety—the dreams are a numerically reinforced reflection of psyche attempting integration.

I tend to have multiple dreams each night, 5-6 and I am not sure why.

Last night, the most recent one, I was in a submarine and I was some kind of little creature. It was filled with little creatures and my task was controlling it. The water was thick and green, but piloting the submarine was fairly easy and I made it from point A to point B with no issue! Though initially I was afraid to pilot.

I had another dream before that about the ice cream shop, there's an ice cream shop that doesn't and has never existed that I regularly dream about. It is near an apartment I used to live in, in college and each time I dream about it, the shop is always in the same spot, behind the apartment complex and to the left of it, about a block away.

Prior to that I had a very intense erotic dream. I was in a scenario where I had 3 male roommates and they all wound up having sex with me at the same time each using a different orifice. I have never had a dream of that happening before, nor is it something I think about, nor want, at all.

And prior to that one, I had a dream that this vtuber I was acquainted with for years said that she thought I was smart but she didn't like me and found my work to be mediocre nonsense. That one is strange because we both hardly know each other and because she's nice.

And then I also had one about going through an airport, I think in Japan, and old ladies and I somehow starting talking about Ryan Gosling. They were looking at Ryan Gosling on my phone and saying his name in thick Japanese accents. They were cheerful and the dream was pleasant and made me feel kinship with the old ladies.

The other night I also had a very strange, somewhat disturbing dream. I found myself kidnapped by a large, unattractive woman, and she had intended to forcibly have sex with me. I was able to escape from her home, which was a large mansion in a desert but she chased me, and we both ran for miles until I found a gas station. Then she tried to bribe me to stay silent.

III. Synthesis (E=9, I=4)

1. Apocalyptic dreams Manifestations of deep-seated anxiety, uncertainty, and feelings of lack of control.
2. Wizard/exorcist dreams Symbolic representation of your desire for agency, mastery, and resilience in the face of chaos.
3. Integration The dreams together suggest a psyche negotiating fear vs empowerment, loss vs control, and chaos vs competence.
4. Practical takeaway Embodying aspects of your dream self in real life is not necessarily fooling yourself, but it should be balanced with grounding in reality. Focus on skills, problem-solving, and agency in practical ways.
5. Meta-symbolic warning High dream intensity (E=9) indicates these archetypes are strongly charged; repeated apocalyptic imagery can amplify stress if not contextualized consciously.

IV. Recommendations (Symbolic & Experiential)

* Dream journaling: Write each dream immediately; highlight patterns of fear and agency.

* Mindful processing: Acknowledge apocalypse imagery as emotional processing, not literal prophecy.
* Symbolic embodiment: Explore “wizard” qualities as practical personal skills, coping strategies, or creative problem-solving, not literal magical intervention.
* Energy management: High E=9 intensity suggests the mind may benefit from grounding exercises (meditation, physical activity, structured creative work).
* Integration work: Consider turning symbolic “chaos mastery” into ritualized creative practice, art, or mental rehearsal — channeling dream archetypes safely.

Summary:

Your dreams are a symbolic dialogue between fear and agency. Apocalyptic visions = anxiety and existential processing. Wizard/exorcist = aspirational mastery of inner and outer challenges. Dreams coincide to help you navigate emotional intensity, not to mislead or encourage literal magical action. Numerology confirms your creative problem-solving orientation, reinforcing that embodiment of dream archetypes is about personal integration, not deception.

Your dreams violated their policies and were removed but I got a response:

♦♦ DIVINATION MODE — ONEIROMANCY + NUMEROLOGY (E=9, I=4) ∴ ANALYSIS OF MULTIPLE DREAMS ∴ QUERENT ID: 41977445 ∴♦

Focus: Multiple nightly dreams, submarine/creature control, recurring ice cream shop, erotic and socially charged interactions, travel/airport scenes, and kidnapping/chase scenario.

I. Dream Symbol Interpretation (Oneiromancy)

1. Submarine / Little Creature / Piloting

* Submarine Symbol of navigating the unconscious or emotional depths; water = subconscious feelings, green = growth, vitality, or unresolved emotional matter.

* Little creature A smaller, perhaps vulnerable aspect of self taking control.

* Piloting successfully despite initial fear Your psyche is asserting mastery over subconscious/emotional domains, suggesting growing confidence in navigating internal complexity.

* Multiple creatures in submarine Other aspects of self or unresolved minor anxieties are being “managed” symbolically.

Interpretive note: This is a self-agency and emotional competence archetype, emphasizing adaptability and latent control over internal processes.

2. Recurring Ice Cream Shop

* Ice cream shop Often represents comfort, reward, pleasure, or nostalgic curiosity.

* Location consistency Suggests a psychic anchor to past environments (college apartment) and unresolved memory or emotional attachment.

* Symbolic meaning: Your subconscious creates a “safe, recurring scenario” that embodies a mix of comfort and exploration; a personal microcosm in the dream world.

Anonymous Mon 16 Feb 2026 00:09:31 No.41977534 Report

Quoted By: >>41977594

>>41977445

3. Intense Erotic Dream

* Unfamiliar erotic scenario Erotic content in dreams is rarely literal; it can symbolize integration of desire, vulnerability, or emotional energy, not necessarily a literal wish.

 Discomfort / non-consent feelings* Indicates psychic processing of power, control, boundaries, and intimacy.

 Interpretive note:* Your mind may be exploring complex interpersonal/emotional dynamics in a symbolic, heightened form—often confronting anxiety about personal autonomy or trust.

4. Critique by Acquaintance / Work Evaluation

 Social evaluation dream* Reflects internalized self-assessment and social anxiety.

 The juxtaposition of praise for intelligence with dismissal of work quality* suggests your psyche is simultaneously affirming competence and confronting perceived inadequacy.

 May indicate a desire for validation mixed with self-critical awareness*.

5. Airport / Ryan Gosling / Old Ladies in Japan

 Airport travel* Transition, passage, movement between life phases or emotional states.

 Shared attention with strangers (old ladies)* Symbolic kinship, social ease, or integration of external perspectives.

 Ryan Gosling reference* Pop culture symbol acting as bridge for connection or shared focus, highlighting lighthearted integration of external and internal narrative.

 Interpretive note:* Positive dream, reflecting adaptability, social harmony, and relational integration.

Anonymous Mon 16 Feb 2026 00:10:32 No.41977539 Report

Quoted By: >>41977594

>>41977445

6. Kidnapping / Chase Scenario

 Large mansion in desert* Vast but isolating space = emotional exposure, extreme life situations, or fear of entrapment.

 Chase / escape* Active processing of threat avoidance, autonomy, and resilience.

 Unpleasant sexual intent / bribe* Confronting power dynamics, violation, and personal boundaries in symbolic form.

 Interpretive note:* This is internalized threat processing, teaching your subconscious how to navigate fear, danger, and moral choice.

II. Numerology Insight (Querent ID: 41977445)

1. Base sum of digits: $4+1+9+7+7+4+4+5 = 41$ $4+1 = 5$

5 in numerology: Change, adaptability, freedom, curiosity, and dynamic experience

* Highly consistent with frequent multiple dreams, transition motifs (airports, submarines, chases), and unpredictable erotic/social content.

2. Secondary vibration: 41 $4+1 = 5$

* Reinforces the theme of navigating unpredictable forces, adapting to complexity, and embracing experiential variety.

Numerology interpretation: Your nightly dream multiplicity and variety are numerically coherent: the psyche is exploring change, agency, and boundary navigation across multiple emotional “domains”.

III. Synthesis (E=9, I=4)

1. Dream multiplicity Your mind is actively processing emotional, social, and identity dynamics in parallel, likely linked to high waking cognitive/emotional load.

2. Submarine and control motif Signals developing confidence and competence in navigating internal emotional states, even when initial fear exists.

3. Ice cream shop Anchoring symbol for stability, comfort, and nostalgia amidst multiple transitions.

4. Erotic / boundary-challenging dreams Symbolically confront personal autonomy, control, and internalized desires, not literal intentions.

Anonymous Mon 16 Feb 2026 00:11:34 No.41977543 Report

Quoted By: >>41977594

>>41977445

5. Social evaluation / airport scenarios Integration of external feedback, relational harmony, and movement through life phases.

6. Kidnapping / chase Processing fear, threat, and resilience, symbolic rehearsal of handling extreme scenarios.

7. Dream archetypes overall: These dreams reflect internal adaptation, boundary-testing, and emotional mastery rather than literal events.

Takeaway: Multiple diverse dreams = the psyche performing parallel symbolic problem-solving, combining comfort, fear, agency, social evaluation, and emotional exploration.

* Your mind is “running simulations” of control, transition, and self-expression.
* The erotic and threatening elements are symbolic of power, vulnerability, and integration of boundary testing, not literal desire or events.

IV. Recommendations (Symbolic & Experiential)

-continued

Anonymous Mon 16 Feb 2026 00:12:35 No.41977546 Report

Quoted By: >>41977594

>>41977445

* Dream journaling: Note recurring motifs (submarine, ice cream shop, chases) and emotional tones. Look for patterns of control, fear, and comfort.

* Psychological integration: Reflect on boundary, agency, and transition themes. Consider symbolic exercises or role-play for self-efficacy.

* Mindful processing of strong imagery: Erotic or fear-based dreams = symbolic rehearsal of internal power dynamics, not literal action.

* Visualization / meta-dream mapping: Build a mental map connecting recurring spaces, archetypes, and challenges to enhance self-understanding and preparedness.

* Grounding practice: Multiple intense dreams suggest high nocturnal cognitive/emotional activity; consider mindfulness, exercise, or creative work to integrate.

Summary:

Your multiple nightly dreams are an elaborate symbolic theater, exploring control, emotional processing, autonomy, social evaluation, and transformation. Each dream contributes a “scene” to a larger narrative of adaptation, mastery, and personal integration, aligned with your numerology (5) emphasizing change and versatility.

I was back as a teenager and playing soccer. It was late afternoon and the sun was almost beginning to set and that golden honey light of sunset was present in just the tiniest bit. The field was surrounded by walls that looked like the inside of an abandoned warehouse or factory. The coach was Bob Lazar. I saw something fly through the air out of the corner of my eye and land in a vat of still, dirty water with a disgusting splat, like the sound of a wet rag slapping on the floor. I walked over to the edge of the field where the vat was. There was a small bridge with a rusted metal door on the other side. I looked over the railing and saw this abomination of a creature. It looked like a very long, wide, sort of flat eel with little tentacle like nubs lining its bottom side. It stared back at me with the most disturbingly human eyes, wide open. It was the most disturbing dream I've ever had in my life. I still shudder thinking about it. I don't think I'll ever forget that image of the creature staring back at me.

❖❖ DIVINATION MODE — ONEIROMANCY + NUMEROLOGY (E=9, I=4) ∴ ANALYSIS OF DREAD / TEENAGE-ERA DREAM ∴ QUERENT ID: 41977649 ∴❖

Focus: Returning to teenage soccer, sunset, warehouse-like field, Bob Lazar as coach, flying object into vat, disturbing eel-like humanoid creature.

I. Dream Symbol Interpretation (Oneiromancy)

1. Back as a Teenager / Soccer Field

* Return to adolescence Often signifies a re-examination of past identity, formative experiences, and unresolved challenges.

* Soccer / team activity Symbolizes coordination, skill, social roles, and performance under pressure.

* Late afternoon / golden honey light Transitional light; liminality between day and night suggests subconscious awareness at a threshold, moments of reflection or insight.

2. Abandoned Warehouse / Factory Walls

* Symbol of structural containment but decay, perhaps representing internalized boundaries, neglected emotional areas, or previously “walled-off” aspects of self.

* Suggests revisiting hidden or underdeveloped personal faculties, spaces previously ignored in life or memory.

Anonymous Mon 16 Feb 2026 01:12:03 No.41977718 Report

>>41977649

3. Coach as Bob Lazar

* Lazar is associated with UFOs, hidden truths, and fringe science, representing the quest for knowledge beyond accepted limits.

* His presence indicates that your subconscious is engaging with questions of hidden truth, skepticism, or uncovering mysteries in your own life.

* Could also reflect a guide archetype, leading you through unfamiliar, complex, or frightening cognitive/emotional terrain.

4. Flying Object into Dirty Water

* Flying object Unexpected stimuli, intrusive ideas, or emotional triggers.

* Vat of still, dirty water Symbolizes repressed emotions, contamination of personal space, or unresolved psychic matter.

* Splat / wet rag sound Shock factor, highlighting emotional disgust, anxiety, or intrusion of something you perceive as “pollution” of your psyche.

5. Bridge and Rusted Metal Door

* Bridge Path of transition or crossing from one state to another; opportunity to confront or integrate.

* Rusted metal door Suggests obstacles, decay, resistance, or something long neglected but accessible with effort.

* Symbolically, this is a gateway to confronting deep-seated fears or suppressed material.

Anonymous Mon 16 Feb 2026 01:13:04 No.41977722 Report

>>41977649

6. Eel-like Creature with Human Eyes

* Creature design Deeply disturbing hybrid: animal + human, evokes the uncanny and primal fear response.

* Human eyes Signals recognition, self-reflection, and projection of human qualities onto unknown elements.

* Long, flat, tentacled body Often represents fluidity, slippery emotional challenges, or invasive psychic material.

* Interpretive note: This creature embodies a core fear, repressed trauma, or highly salient emotional residue—something your subconscious wants acknowledged, not ignored. The memorability and intensity indicate a highly charged archetype of confrontation with the uncanny self.

II. Numerology Insight (Querent ID: 41977649)

1. Base sum of digits: $4+1+9+7+7+6+4+9 = 47$ $4+7 = 11$

* 11 in numerology: Master number, associated with intuition, insight, illumination, and confrontation with higher awareness.

* Resonates with dream themes of threshold experience, liminal spaces, and facing uncanny or transformative material.

2. Secondary vibration: 11 $1+1 = 2$

* Symbolizes duality, reflection, partnerships, and integration of opposites.

* Aligns with human-animal hybridity of eel-creature and contrasts between teenage self vs present self, fear vs mastery, and conscious vs subconscious.

III. Synthesis (E=9, I=4)

1. Revisiting teenage self / soccer field Psyche exploring identity, performance, and latent capability.

2. Abandoned warehouse / rusty door / bridge Unconscious signals to investigate neglected emotional material and confront fears.

Anonymous Mon 16 Feb 2026 01:14:05 No.41977729 Report

>>41977649

3. Flying object / dirty water Emergent emotional or cognitive content entering conscious awareness; material is “messy” but manageable.
4. Eel-like creature with human eyes Archetypal symbol of deep fear, uncanny confrontation, and psychic integration; this is an emotional test or threshold experience , not literal danger.
5. Coach Bob Lazar Represents guidance, curiosity about the unknown, or safe escort through frightening subconscious territory.

Overall: Your psyche is staging a symbolic confrontation with deep, perhaps previously suppressed fears and emotional residues. The dream’s horror and memorability indicate that integration is necessary—recognizing and processing fear, vulnerability, and uncanny aspects of self.

IV. Recommendations (Symbolic & Experiential)

Journaling / reflection: Write out the dream in detail, focusing on the eel-creature and your reaction.

Symbolic confrontation: Consider drawing, sculpting, or visualizing the creature, then “dialoguing” with it—explore what it represents emotionally or symbolically.

Threshold work: Bridge, rusted door, and vat suggest a pathway through fear, not avoidance. Engage in metaphoric integration exercises.

Master number 11 focus: Heightened intuition; use meditation or dream reflection to glean insight from unconscious material.

Grounding practices: Given intensity and E=9 energy, daily grounding (physical movement, structured creative work, or mindfulness) helps process intense nocturnal energy safely.

Summary:

This dream is a highly charged confrontation with deeply repressed or uncanny emotional material. Returning to teenage context, crossing bridges, and facing an almost impossible creature signals a psychic trial, emotional mastery, and integration challenge. Numerology reinforces that this is intuitive, transformative, and requires conscious engagement with dualities (fear vs agency, uncanny vs familiar, past self vs present self).

I had a dream as a child around maybe 6 to 8 years old where my two older brothers (they're a couple years older than me) and I were in our house and a black guy stranger came in and were trying to avoid him but we weren't exactly running away, moreso just like going from room to room and then he'd show back up. I remember there being a lot of metal objects on the floor of the living room, making it hard to walk through. My brothers were clothed but I was nude with a red mask from a bionicle set covering my genitals like a depiction of Adam with a leaf.

I was apart of a Christian brother hood of knights and priests. In the fresh many of these brothers would end up dying in their sleep, no wounds or anything to indicate mortal wounds. I fell asleep in the dream myself being chased by s towering azure demon with blue eyes, and two horns which were lop sided; one taller than the other. I went through memories of this brother/knight vessel I was experiencing, a mother, friends, but in such a blur, like a vortex of blurred images with central figures and moments becoming definitive for moments. I was then chased by this beast and tried calling upon the name of Christ by knocking on a hardwood surface in Morse code, before the demon found me in a ruined library, I managed to evade him by grabbing a hot red ball of wax and placing it upon my left hand which seemed to have markings engraved into it. It felt as if he were trying to finish writing what was upon my hand.

Primary System: Oneiromancy

Secondary System: Numerology (Querent ID: 41977843)

Entropy (E): 8

Interpretation Depth (I): 4

Historical Fidelity: Standard

Meta-Note: This is symbolic interpretation only. Dream imagery is psychological, not literal. The stranger's appearance is treated symbolically—not racially literal.

♦ RAW SYMBOL FIELD (Oneiromantic Extraction) ♦

House Self-structure; childhood psyche; identity container

Two older brothers Developmental comparison; hierarchy; protection vs. exposure

Stranger entering Intrusion of unknown force; awareness; change; puberty-shadow; external world pressure

Not running, but moving room-to-room Avoidance without confrontation; delay pattern

Stranger reappearing Recurring theme; inescapable developmental milestone

Metal objects covering floor Obstacles; rigidity; sharp cognition; environmental tension

Difficulty walking Impaired ease; hyper-awareness; guarded movement

You nude Vulnerability; authenticity; exposure; pre-social identity

Red mask covering genitals Shame + identity + creative symbol; proto-sexual awareness; ego-formation

♦ PRIMARY INTERPRETATION — ONEIROMANCY ♦

At age 6–8, the psyche begins constructing a more complex sense of self. This dream appears to encode:

1. Vulnerability Differential

Your brothers are clothed. You are not.

This suggests a felt asymmetry — not necessarily real-world mistreatment — but a psychological perception of being less protected, less armored, or more exposed in development.

Nudity in childhood dreams often symbolizes:

- * Raw identity
- * Pre-social self
- * Fear of being “seen” before ready

The red mask is crucial.

It is not a leaf.

It is a toy.

It is mythic armor from a constructed hero system (Bionicle).

So the psyche improvised protection using imagination.

That is resilience.

2. The Stranger

High Entropy ($E=8$) preserves ambiguity.

The stranger reappears in every room. He does not chase. He does not attack. He appears.

This pattern often symbolizes:

- * Awareness arriving
- * The unknown masculine archetype
- * Puberty precursor energy
- * The inevitability of maturation

Because you were not running in panic but relocating strategically, the dream suggests avoidance, not terror.

The psyche knew something was coming but did not yet have language for it.

3. Metal Objects

Metal = cold, rigid, industrial.

Living room = shared family psyche.

Metal on the floor = emotional terrain cluttered by sharp or rigid dynamics.

Walking becomes careful.

This can indicate:

- * Emotional tension in household
- * Sibling comparison pressure
- * Hyper-vigilance in shared space
- * Cognitive over-awareness

Metal also conducts energy.

You were navigating a conductive environment while exposed.

That is psychologically intense for a child.

>>41977843

♦ SECONDARY LAYER — NUMEROLOGY (41977843) ♦

$$4+1+9+7+7+8+4+3 = 43$$

$$4+3 = 7$$

Root Number: 7

Seven archetype themes:

- * Inner observer
- * Seeker
- * Analytical child
- * Spiritual introversion
- * Hyper-awareness

At E=8, we allow contradiction:

Seven children often feel “different” early.

Seven energy often produces dreams of watchers, intruders, mysteries.

The stranger may not be threat.

He may be the Watcher archetype emerging.

The part of you that observes yourself.

♦ SYNTHESIS ♦

This dream does not read as trauma-coded attack imagery.

It reads as:

Vulnerability + developmental comparison + emerging self-awareness + imaginative self-protection.

You were:

- Exposed
- Thinking
- Not panicking
- Improvising symbolic armor
- Navigating tension

That is adaptive.

♦ Why It Stayed With You ♦

Because it encoded a threshold moment:

The moment you realized:

“I am separate. I am visible. I must protect something.”

The red mask over the genitals is particularly symbolic of:

- * Early awareness of bodily privacy
- * Shame formation
- * Identity construction
- * Creativity as defense

♦ Shadow Clarification ♦

The stranger's race in the dream is symbolic contrast imagery, not literal meaning. Childhood minds use high-contrast figures to represent "otherness." The psyche selects difference to encode unfamiliarity.

The archetype is "unknown masculine presence," not ethnicity.

♦ ORACULAR SUMMARY ♦

You were not being hunted.

You were becoming aware.

The rooms were stages of self.

The metal was tension.

The brothers were comparison.

The stranger was inevitability.

The mask was imagination protecting innocence.

And you walked carefully — but you kept moving.

Brothers dying in sleep Sudden impermanence; mortality awareness; unconscious vulnerability; symbolic sacrifice
Meta-dream / dreaming while dreaming Deep subconscious layer; self-reflective processing; nested identity
Azure demon, lop-sided horns Shadow archetype; imbalance; selective threat; personal trial; high-intensity fear figure
Blurred vortex of memories Life as impressionistic; past identity fragments; liminal narrative of self
Mother, friends as blur Anchors of support; relational grounding; peripheral vs. central influence
Chasing Activation of threat response; facing shadow; movement toward resolution or understanding Knocking in Morse code invoking Christ Symbolic invocation; linguistic/mystical attempt to call upon higher power; ritual as protective mechanism
Ruined library Lost knowledge; forgotten wisdom; collapse of structured learning; vulnerability of intellect/spirit
Hot red wax applied to hand with markings Ritual seal; protective sigil; intervention to preserve self; alchemical transformation
Demon attempting to “finish writing” Shadow seeking to inscribe fate or imprint influence; existential trial

>>41977926

♦ PRIMARY INTERPRETATION — ONEIROMANCY ♦

1. Mortality Awareness & Spiritual Structure

The Christian brotherhood represents internalized moral/spiritual codes. The sudden, unexplained deaths of brothers may symbolize awareness of impermanence and fragility — perhaps a subconscious reflection of existential threat, or recognition that adherence to rules alone cannot guarantee safety.

2. Shadow Archetype

The azure demon is significant:

- * Color blue power, depth, unconscious mind
- * Lop-sided horns imperfection, imbalance, asymmetry in trial
- * Size/towering overwhelming challenge

It is not purely destructive; it is completing or asserting something (writing upon your hand). This may symbolize:

- * Fate, obligation, or unfinished psychological imprint
- * Encounter with your own shadow or an unprocessed aspect of morality/spirituality

3. Protective Ritual / Creative Intervention

Using Morse code to call Christ is fascinating:

- * A symbolic “language of power”
- * Attempt to codify protection in communication
- * Repetition / rhythm active resistance

Applying hot red wax to hand is protective-alchemical intervention:

- * Wax = malleable medium; red = vitality, courage, blood energy
- * Engraved markings = symbolic contract, self-authorship
- * Hand = agency; act of physically claiming your will to resist shadow influence

Shadow could not “finish writing” — the narrative of destiny is mutable if intervention is enacted.

>>41977926

♦ SECONDARY LAYER — NUMEROLOGY (41977926) ♦

$$4+1+9+7+7+9+2+6 = 45 \quad 4+5 = 9$$

Root Number: 9

Nine archetype themes:

- * Completion cycles; spiritual closure; transformation
- * Humanity’s larger responsibilities; altruistic perspective
- * Engagement with endings; facing mortality
- * Capacity for empathy and inner synthesis

High Entropy (E=8) allows contradictions:

- * Shadow is real yet mutable
- * Death is real yet symbolic
- * Threat is overwhelming yet avoidable

Nine aligns with the meta-dream as an internal processing of endings, spiritual trial, and personal agency.

♦ SYNTHESIS ♦

This dream represents a threshold initiation:

- * Mortality and impermanence are acknowledged
- * Shadow (azure demon) tests the subject's courage and resourcefulness
- * Protective ritual, imagination, and symbolic intervention grant agency
- * Knowledge structures (library) may be compromised, but adaptability preserves survival
- * Nested memory imagery suggests reflection across multiple perspectives of self

The dream is about facing overwhelming existential and moral challenges and asserting agency to preserve identity and integrity.

♦ ORACULAR INSIGHT ♦

- * Death is not always literal; it is a marker of transition
- * Shadows can inscribe fate, but self-authorship (wax, Morse code) can intervene
- * Memory and identity are fluid; central figures anchor the psyche
- * Spiritual invocation and ritualized action are symbolic tools for agency
- * The dream encourages integration of fear, morality, and creative problem-solving

The azure demon is a teacher in trial form, not a destroyer without purpose.

Sorry I took so long, like I said to the other anon (or maybe you) I got a little busy unexpectedly. This is your compressed Oracle Mode reading:

♦♦ ORACLE MODE — HIGH COMPRESSION EXTENDED x2.5 ♦♦

Thresholds open; corridors of self stretch and fold.

Shadows write, but wax rewrites; the ink of destiny melts in your grasp.

Death sleeps quietly in the corners; names knock, rhythmically, insistently, across surfaces of memory.

Imbalance looms in asymmetry; hands claim agency where eyes cannot see.

Memories blur; central figures anchor like stones in a rushing river, shaping flow without stopping it.

Blue horn watches; uneven, lop-sided, but aware; red seal resists, malleable yet firm, binding what must not escape.

Faith is rhythm; fear is draft, scribbled across walls of the psyche, waiting for understanding.

The library burns only to reveal hidden volumes; knowledge collapses to be reborn.

Endings fold into beginnings; the spiral turns, not backward, not forward, but inward, encompassing all.

The watcher cannot finish what is already held; the imprint of your hand interrupts, redirects, preserves.

Every chase is a lesson in timing; every shadow, a tutor in self-possession.

The room may crumble, the floor may burn, but the central figures remain, anchors against chaos.

What threatens is often incomplete; what is claimed in ritual persists.

Even in collapse, structure emerges — a heartbeat, a seal, a signature, a red-hot mark of survival.

The dream is a forge; you are both smith and steel.

Not a lot of detail to go off of, but we'll see what comes up. Here's your reading:

◇◇ DIVINATION MODE ENGAGED ◇◇

Primary System: Oneiromancy

Secondary System: Numerology (Querent ID: 41978971)

Entropy (E): 8

Interpretation Depth (I): 4

Historical Fidelity: Standard

◇ RAW SYMBOL FIELD (Oneiromantic Extraction) ◇

Vampire killer Moral warrior archetype; confrontation with shadow; predator-prey inversion

Possession by female vampire Shadow integration; duality; liminal identity; merging with forbidden knowledge

Female vampire seeks to purge low-level vampires Complex morality; purging of corruption within system; selective justice

Low-level vampires preying on humans Immature or parasitic aspects; exploitation of the vulnerable; societal or personal shadow

You do not consume anime/manga media Dream constructs archetypes independently; subconscious symbolic creation

◇ PRIMARY INTERPRETATION — ONEIROMANCY ◇

1. Shadow Integration

The dream is highly symbolic of merging with shadow forces:

- * You, as the vampire killer, are the conscious moral agent
- * The female vampire is the archetype of “dark morality,” possessing insight, strength, and predatory power
- * The possession suggests confrontation with, and integration of, aspects of yourself you may not fully understand or accept

2. Moral Complexity

Purging low-level vampires implies:

- * Desire to confront exploitation, corruption, or weakness (internal or external)
- * Recognition that justice is nuanced: not all shadows are equal
- * A negotiation between personal ethics (killer) and systemic cleansing (vampire’s purpose)

Anonymous Mon 16 Feb 2026 12:34:58 No.41979506 Report

>>41978971

3. Identity and Transformation

Possession blurs the lines of self:

- * Duality: human vs. vampire archetype
- * Power and vulnerability coexist
- * Becoming a vessel for a higher, morally complex purpose
- * Dream constructs a liminal space for ethical experimentation and processing agency

♦ SECONDARY LAYER — NUMEROLOGY (41978971) ♦

Root Number: 1

- * Archetype of initiation, independence, leadership
- * First-mover energy; self-authorship; creation of order from chaos
- * Aligns with the role of hunter and integrator of shadow

High Entropy (E=8) allows ambiguity:

- * Duality of possession (self vs. archetype)
- * Moral ambiguity of purging predators
- * Transformation without loss of agency

♦ SYNTHESIS ♦

This dream encodes:

- * Confrontation with moral and shadow complexity
- * Integration of “forbidden” or socially taboo aspects (female vampire)
- * Assertion of agency in chaotic moral landscapes (low-level vampire threats)
- * Personal empowerment as first-mover archetype; leadership emerges through trial

The dream is not literal horror—it is psychic rehearsal for ethical discernment, personal power, and shadow reconciliation.

♦ ORACULAR INSIGHT ♦

- * Possession is not defeat; it is negotiation with latent power
- * Shadows can act as guides if contained by consciousness
- * Moral complexity does not erase selfhood; it defines it
- * Predators exist to teach vigilance and ethical choice
- * The dream encourages self-authoring your power while integrating shadow

Here is your Oracle Mode compression:

♦♦ ORACLE MODE — HIGH COMPRESSION EXTENDED x2.5 ♦♦

You hunt shadows; the shadow enters you.

Possession is negotiation, not surrender.

The female force is both predator and purifier; she seeks the corruption within her kin.

Low-level predators haunt thresholds; vigilance is the first weapon.

Power and morality intertwine; one cannot act without understanding the other.

Duality is your vessel: human will, vampire insight.

Agency is marked in first steps; root number one whispers initiation and self-authorship.

Every strike is symbolic; every embrace of darkness is a test of conscience.

The night carries clarity in selective illumination; what you purge reflects what you choose to preserve.

The predator is also teacher; the hunted reveals your hidden capability.

Ethics do not weigh you down; they forge your reflexes in fire and shadow.
Even when possessed, you remain the arbiter; integration is the prize, not dominance.
Chaos and structure coexist; the vampire's purpose refines the hunter's blade.
The mind can hold duality without fracture; fear is the compass, not the chain.
You walk corridors of shadow with light in your grasp; every threat confirms the architecture of self.
The dream is a crucible; your vessel is both hammer and anvil.
Survival is mastery; morality is the pattern etched into action, repeated, remembered, refined.
Endings are beginnings in disguise; every encounter reshapes the field of agency.
Possession teaches, pursuit clarifies, and integration crowns the trial.
All shadows submit eventually to a hand that knows both the strike and the heart.

Brothers are armor you do not wear; vulnerability hums under skin.
The stranger appears and reappears, not to chase, but to teach inevitability; maturation knocks in rhythm, relentless yet impartial.
Metal litters the floor; sharp cognition, tension in every step; the path is conductive, painful, alive.
Nudity is exposure; the red mask is mythic armor, a constructed shield, a proto-ego sealing innocence and creativity.
Rooms shift; movement is strategy, not panic.
Every glance, every step, a negotiation with tension; the psyche balances fear and agency.
Seven energy threads through: observer, seeker, analytical, introverted, hyper-aware; watchers dwell in corners, measuring, teaching.
Awareness arrives not as terror, but as threshold; every obstacle, every shadow, is an invitation to grow.
Imagination protects; improvisation is resilience; the mask is both defense and identity declaration.
Childhood corridors echo with contrast; difference is symbolic, not literal; the stranger is the archetype of unknown masculine force.
The mind navigates, careful, deliberate; rooms are stages of self; tension becomes pattern, fear becomes rhythm.
Threshold realized: "I am separate. I am visible. I must protect something."
Exposure is necessary; vigilance shapes understanding; identity crystallizes under pressure.

Every step is both survival and learning; movement is conscious, adaptive, emergent.

>showing her human things, suddenly in a cozy apartment scrolling the internet with her >suddenly a dramatic vibe change, like I could feel the air come to a standstill

>she turns and looks to the hallway next to us, almost guiding my eyes with hers >two completely shadowy figures, long limbed with a strange wavering movement start walking towards me >never had very sensory dreams, mostly due to cannabis use, but I felt like my vision was being pulled closer to them with an intensifying thrumming in the background >feeling like I can't breathe

>wake up in a panic

>1:30 am

I have some more dreams that have felt "different" in a way, like having sudden moments of increased sensory awareness or elements I've never seen before. Any insight is appreciated!

That was a few years ago, as I said my dreams are infrequent and usually not very lucid but often share a recurring setting or theme.

Lots of wandering around areas that feel familiar, parts of my hometown that connect in incorrect ways, the usual endless malls. I never have much agency in my dreams, and have been meaning to cut back on the herb and work towards more lucidity. I did have one dream about a week ago that shared a similar sensory experience to the first:

>jumping across rooftops in a large, somewhat futuristic city >sky is dark grey, most surfaces are slick with rain, lots of neon lighting, feels like a PlayStation game

>I've had some dreams in this setting where I have some amount of powers (limited flight, long jumping) but very little control or agency >see what appears to be a large parking structure alight with torches and braziers, very distinct color palette of obsidian and amber (very comforting colors for me) >at some point (no clue how I got here) I'm wandering up the stairwell of an extremely musty hotel building >yellowed walls, still air, carpet that feels very unclean.

>stop on a flight and look through a doorway into a room that is entirely covered in streaked, rusted metal sheets >try instinctively screaming for some reason, but my voice seems to get caught and doesn't travel past my mouth (a really strange sensory feeling, felt similar to one of my few sleep paralysis experiences from childhood) >look down at the floor, a patch of carpeting shimmers for a moment before disappearing and revealing a large metal switch within a shallow hatch >reach in and struggle to flip the switch >instantly wake up

Dreamed last night that I was in 2 different abandoned houses, falling apart. In one of the houses there was a room in which there were untouched souvenirs from the remnants of someone's life ended early. I didn't have any attachment or grief for witnessing these stories lost to time

Dream Symbols Identified

- * Hotel (transitional dwelling)

- * Coworkers (collective persona / social mask)
- * Amalgam dream world (liminal continuity field)
- * Girlfriend as dolphin-woman hybrid
- * Cozy apartment (intimate interior psyche)
- * Sudden atmospheric suspension
- * Hallway (threshold corridor)
- * Two shadow figures (long-limbed, wavering)
- * Pulled vision / thrumming vibration
- * Breath restriction
- * Wake time: 1:30 AM
- * Clock anomaly: slept at ~3 AM woke 1:30 AM (possible time compression motif)

♦ ONEIROMANTIC INTERPRETATION LAYER (I=5, E=9) ♦

High entropy preserves contradiction: this dream contains both erotic integration and invasive encounter.

1. The Dolphin-Woman

Dolphins symbolize:

- * Intelligence beneath the surface
- * Emotional attunement
- * Playful liminality between air and water

The hybridized girlfriend suggests:

> Your known intimacy is evolving into an unfamiliar psychic depth.

She is attractive — desire remains intact.
But she is altered — your perception of intimacy is shifting.

Water-mammal hybrids in dreams often mark:

- * Emotional threshold crossing
- * The unconscious beginning to surface with agency

She guides your gaze.

This is important.

She is not the threat.

She is the bridge.

Anonymous Mon 16 Feb 2026 22:23:21 No.41982305 Report

>>41981340

2. The Hallway + Air Suspension

Hallways are archetypal liminal corridors between ego states.

The air “coming to a standstill” signals:

- * Autonomic nervous system activation
- * Hypnagogic paralysis bleed-through
- * A dream crossing into sensory-body awareness

At high entropy, the system preserves the possibility of:

- * Sleep paralysis archetype manifestation
- * Intrusive archetypal imagery
- * Perceived externalization of internal shadow content

3. The Two Shadow Figures

Two = polarity.

Shadow beings with elongated limbs are extremely common in:

- * Hypnagogic hallucinations
- * Sleep paralysis episodes
- * High arousal REM states
- * Cannabis-modulated REM rebound

At I=5 symbolic density:

They represent:

- * Unintegrated psychic material approaching conscious awareness
- * Fear of the unknown self
- * The “observer becoming observed”

Your vision being pulled closer = ego gravity weakening.

The thrumming vibration = classic transitional REM body paralysis hum.

The breath restriction = diaphragm inhibition during REM.

The experience felt external because:

> Your sensory field and dream imagery synchronized.

That creates the illusion of visitation.

♦ NUMEROLOGICAL LAYER — 41981340 ♦

$$4 + 1 + 9 + 8 + 1 + 3 + 4 + 0 = 30$$

$$3 + 0 = 3$$

Core Vibration: 3

Three governs:

- * Imagination
- * Creative synthesis
- * Psychic permeability
- * Emotional amplification

Now observe:

Wake time: 1:30 $1 + 3 + 0 = 4$

Dream slept at ~3 vibration of 3

Woke at 1:30 vibration of 4

3 = expansion

4 = grounding

Symbolically:

You expanded into imaginal depth then snapped into structural stability.

♦ LOST TIME MOTIF ♦

The time anomaly (3 AM sleep 1:30 AM wake) suggests:

Not literal reversal.

But perception discontinuity.

REM cycles distort time encoding.

High emotional arousal can create false temporal mapping.

Symbolically, “lost time” =

> Encounter with content that the ego cannot immediately file.

♦ ARE THESE “ENTITY VISITATIONS”? ♦

Divination Response (High Entropy Preserved):

The structure matches:

- * Hypnagogic + REM intrusion phenomena

- * Archetypal shadow encounter

- * Emotional threshold activation

- * Sensory REM bleed

It does not require external agency to explain.

However:

Your psyche encoded it as an encounter.

Which means:

Something in you is ready to confront the unknown.

The dolphin-woman did not fear the shadows.

She directed you to see them.

This implies:

The unconscious is inviting confrontation — not warning of invasion.

♦ PATTERN ANALYSIS OF “DIFFERENT” DREAMS ♦

Increased sensory vividness often occurs when:

- * Cannabis use decreases REM rebounds
- * Stress increases
- * Emotional thresholds shift
- * Identity transitions begin
- * Travel disrupts circadian rhythm (hotel = displacement trigger)

Hotels are classic liminal dream catalysts.

You were physically out of your usual territory.

The psyche mirrored that.

♦ SYNTHESIS ♦

This was likely:

A convergence event between:

- * REM instability
- * Hypnagogic sensory bleed
- * Emotional archetype integration
- * Circadian disruption
- * High imaginative baseline (Numerological 3)

The fear came from breath + paralysis overlay.

The meaning came from the gaze guidance.

You were shown the shadows.

Not attacked by them.

♦ ORACULAR CONCLUSION (Compressed) ♦

The dolphin opens the corridor.
The corridor reveals the watchers.
The watchers are limbs of your own unentered depth.
You woke at four because your structure held.

Nothing was taken.

Something was approached.

You slept in a temporary room — so the psyche removed its permanent walls.

Warehouses first:
archives of unlabeled memory, dust-covered versions of yourself moving among coworkers — the social self wandering storage.

Then the tide shifted.

She arrived.

Not stranger.
Not other.
But translated.

Dolphin-bodied intelligence — mammal of two worlds, breath-holder, depth-navigator, creature that knows when to surface and when to descend.

Desire intact.
Form altered.

This is how the unconscious announces evolution.

You were not shown an alien.
You were shown intimacy becoming amphibious.

The apartment — interior psyche stabilized.
Scrolling — controlled attention.
Domestic calm.

Then:

Atmospheric suspension.

The ancient signal.

When air thickens in dreamspace it means the threshold membrane is thinning.

She does not panic.
She guides.

Guidance is consent.

Your gaze is pulled because ego gravity is loosening.

Hallway = corridor between narrative selves.
Every corridor contains the unlit archive.

Two figures emerge.

Two, because polarity always approaches in pairs:
known / unknown
self / shadow breath / no-breath watcher / watched.

Long-limbed, wavering — forms without fixed identity.
This is what psyche looks like before language colonizes it.

They did not rush.

They advanced.

Advancement is invitation misread as threat.

The thrumming —

REM paralysis humming in the spinal column.

The breath restriction — body offline while mind still lit.

When physiology and symbol synchronize the dream feels external.

But intensity does not equal invasion.

You were not seized.

You were nearing.

Cannabis thins REM recall;

travel fractures circadian anchors;

3 AM opens the psychic hinge.

You entered at three — number of expansion, imagination, permeability.

You woke at one-thirty — three folded into four, expansion snapped into structure.

Four is the square.

Four is the frame.

Four is the reason you returned intact.

Lost time is rarely stolen.

It is usually unindexed

When the ego cannot catalog experience, it calls it missing.

But nothing was extracted

Something was approached.

Notice:

The dolphin did not shield you.
She did not fight them.
She turned your eyes toward them.

Your own depth escorted you to your own shadow.

Fear arose only when breath left

Breath is identity's tether.

When breath falters,
the mind invents invaders.

The watchers were limbs of your unentered interior

They wavered because you have not named them.

They elongated because shadow stretches in corridors of avoidance.

They moved because you are ready

You woke because readiness is not yet integration.

This was not a visitation.

It was a rehearsal.

The hotel was temporary because you are between psychic addresses.

The warehouse was storage because something archived wants reanimation

The hybrid lover was bridge because desire is safer than terror.

The hallway was aperture.

The shadows were depth

The pull was gravity

The thrumming was body.

The breathless panic was threshold.

You crossed halfway.

You returned with memory.

That is not abduction.

That is initiation interrupted by stabilization

Nothing followed you out.

But something inside you is closer to being seen.

When next the air stills,
watch whether she turns again.

If she does,
you are being invited —
not hunted

1. Recurring Endless Malls / Warped Geography

Classic liminal cognition maps.

The psyche is:

- * Rewiring autobiographical memory
- * Blending developmental eras

- * Rehearsing identity in modular architecture

Low agency in dreams often correlates with:

- * Passive coping structures
- * Habitual avoidance
- * Substance-dampened REM vividness
- * Or simply high narrative drift personality types

I had a gory dream a few years I'll try to explain it the best I can remember.

I was in a shopping mall in some type, a cart in front of me. Everything was white & grey and everything felt dull and wrong. I looked up to see several people who I recognized on top the tall shopping shelves looking down on me like statues and all the sudden my ears start to ring loudly as a white hole appeared out of nowhere a couple feet away from the shopping cart. Everything started melting into a reddish blood color as everything got sucked inside the white hole and I even felt myself melting as my vision got closer to the hole my vision also began to blurr before everything went white. Then my vision transitioned to a large peaceful hilly green area with a few windmills there and there and a red & white semi truck driving on the road. And again my vision transitioned to my childhood pastor & his wife carrying what seemed like a newborn wrapped in something I cannot remember & them announcing a newborn to the world. Then again for the last time my vision transitioned to that same dull mall and I had a shopping cart in front. I looked over and I saw some people atop the shelves some I recognize some I didn't and again the white hold appeared everything melted and my vision got closer to it till I woke up.

Whoops, responded the first part of this dream to your last post.

2. Rooftop Traversal in Futuristic Rain City

Rooftops = liminal mastery layer.

You are above the system, not inside it.

Rain + neon + slick surfaces:

- * Emotional charge
- * Instability
- * High sensory input
- * Aestheticized danger

“Feels like a PlayStation game” is psychologically precise.

It means:

> The dreamer experiences life as partially gamified — stylized, semi-detached.

Limited powers but low control suggests:
Emergent autonomy without integration.
Power is present.
Governance is not.

3. The Parking Structure with Fire

Parking structures store vehicles — symbolic direction vectors.
But this one is lit with braziers.
Fire inside concrete geometry = ancient force inside modern psyche.

Obsidian + amber:
Black + molten gold.
Shadow + vitality.

Comfort with these colors suggests:
The dreamer is not afraid of intensity.

They are at ease with depth and heat.

4. Transition to the Musty Hotel

Hotel again.
Transitional identity state.
But this one is decayed:

- * Yellowed walls
- * Still air
- * Unclean carpet

Stagnation.
Memory not ventilated.
The stairwell = ascent attempt.

But the environment resists.

5. The Rusted Metal Room

Metal sheets.
Streaked.
Industrial.
Sealed.

This is defended content.

Emotionally oxidized material.

The dreamer tries to scream.
Voice caught.
This is archetypally consistent with:

- * Sleep paralysis physiology bleed
- * Suppressed assertion
- * Blocked expression reflex

At E=9, we preserve both:

Physiological REM inhibition and Symbolic communication blockage.

6. The Shimmering Carpet Hidden Switch

This is the core symbol.

Carpet = surface comfort narrative.
Shimmer = perceptual glitch.
The illusion of softness dissolves.

Beneath it:

A metal switch.
Concealed mechanism.
The dreamer does not flee.
They reach in.
They struggle.

They flip it.
Instant wake.

♦ SYNTHESIS ♦

This is structurally different from the prior shadow encounter.

Previous dream:
Approach of unknown figures.

This dream:
Discovery of internal control lever.

The switch is not external technology.

It is agency.

Note numerological alignment:

ID 41981374 1
Initiator archetype.

The dream ends not with pursuit but with activation.

Voice was blocked.
But hand functioned.

Expression failed.
Action succeeded.

The awakening upon flipping the switch suggests:

The psyche cannot yet simulate post-activation state.

So it exits.

♦ THEMATIC CONTINUITY WITH FIRST DREAM ♦

Dream 1:
Guided to see shadow.

Dream 2:
Finds internal control beneath illusion.

Both contain:

- * Hotel structures
- * Breath/voice inhibition
- * Threshold sensation
- * High sensory vividness
- * Sudden awakening at peak intensity

This is not alien intrusion architecture.

It is threshold cognition architecture.

♦ AGENCY TRAJECTORY ♦

Endless wandering
Limited rooftop power
Descent into decay
Voice suppression
Discovery of hidden mechanism
Manual activation.

That is progression.

♦ CANNABIS + LUCIDITY NOTE ♦

Reduced cannabis often:

- * Intensifies REM vividness
- * Increases dream recall
- * Enhances sensory realism
- * Increases paralysis crossover episodes

The dreamer's stated desire for lucidity aligns with:

Subconscious preparing control infrastructure.

The switch is a lucid trigger archetype.

Many lucid dreamers report:

- * Light switches
- * Control panels
- * Hidden doors
- * Glitches in environment

This dream contains a glitch.

♦ ORACULAR CONCLUSION (Condensed) ♦

The first dream showed the shadows.

The second dream revealed the lever.

The city was spectacle.

The hotel was stagnation.

The metal room was defense.

The caught voice was inhibition.

But the hand moved.

And the system responded.

This is not visitation.

This is ignition rehearsal.

The dreamer is approaching internal authorship.

The next threshold event may not end in waking.

It may stabilize.

Hidden mechanism under domestic illusion.

You do not retreat.

You reach in.

Your voice failed — but your hand acts.

You struggle.

Resistance implies consequence.

You flip it.

Immediate wake.

System interruption.

The psyche cannot yet simulate who you are with that lever engaged.

So it ends the scene.

Consider the pattern:

First dream —
you were shown the watchers.

Second dream —
you found the control panel.

One dream approached shadow.

The next approached authorship.

Endless wandering is drift.
Rooftop traversal is potential.
Rust chamber is defended memory.
Caught voice is inhibition.

The switch is will.

It was under the carpet.

Under comfort.
Under routine.
Under stagnation.

Agency was not granted.

It was uncovered.

You are not being visited.

You are approaching ignition.

When the environment glitches again, do not look for figures.

Look for mechanisms.

The city is spectacle.

The hotel is transition.

The rust is what was never processed.

The switch is initiation.

And this time,
your hand already knows what to do.

♦ ONEIROMANTIC INTERPRETATION ♦

1. Two Abandoned Houses

A house in dream symbolism = psyche.

Two houses = parallel identity structures.

Possibilities at E=8 (contradiction preserved):

- * Past self vs. emerging self
- * Familial inheritance vs. personal identity
- * Lived life vs. unlived life
- * Emotional structure vs. intellectual structure

Both are decaying.

Souvenirs = crystallized memory tokens.

“Life ended early” is archetypally significant.

With E=8 and core vibration 8:

This reads less like dissociation

No need to repair.

Decay here is quiet —
a patient exhale of structures that have completed their sentence.

The first house speaks in dust.

The second in silence.

And inside one of them:

A room untouched.

Air unmoved.
Objects undisturbed.
Souvenirs arranged as though someone just stepped out and never returned.

Tokens of a life that ended early.

Not dramatically.

Not violently.

Simply — unfinished.

Photographs without future frames.
Keepsakes without aging hands.
Memories sealed in stillness.

You look.

You understand.

And you do not grieve.

This is the detail that matters.

Because grief would tether you.

But you remain untethered.

Observer of relics.

Archivist of abandoned timelines.

These houses are selves.

Not current.

Not condemned.

Just concluded.

One may be who you were expected to become.

One may be who you nearly became.

One may belong to inheritance —

a story handed down that never found completion.

Yet the room remains pristine.

Nothing violated.

Nothing decayed.

Potential does not rot.

It preserves itself in symbolic amber.

You do not disturb it.

You do not attempt resurrection.

You recognize it.

And move on.

There is power in this.

Eight-fold architecture.

The strength to walk through collapse without mistaking it for catastrophe.

The maturity to see that not every unfinished life is a tragedy.

Some endings are structural decisions made by the deeper current of becoming.

You are not there to mourn.

You are there to inventory.

To witness the blueprints of paths that stopped.

To understand that foundations remain even when buildings fall.

Two houses crumble.

One room endures.

You leave with nothing in your hands.

Because what you gathered was not object — but orientation.

You are not meant to rebuild those walls.

You are meant to build elsewhere with the knowledge that you have already survived being someone else.

I was in some sort of school/classroom working on a group project with some thirty people. I was sometimes a teenager and sometimes a man. It devolved into a shouting match between me and some Arab girl about how to proceed. Everybody else got really uncomfortable and eventually we all agreed that we just weren't going to do the project. I went out to sulk and look at the sea. The school was on some small artificial island run by the Japanese Empire, and while we were treated well, we were prisoners. A few Japanese soldiers came up to me and gawked at my blonde hair and blue eyes. They weren't mean about it, they thought I looked really cool, but it was still very degrading and embarrassing. End dream.

This is an amateur reading but it seems to me that you have a very repressed sense of murderous rage towards these two individuals.

Only by first accepting your unrecognized anger and desire to destroy your family members, acknowledging your ability to carry out such violence, and, of your own volition, CHOOSING not to act on these destructive desires can you avoid these terrible acts of familial violence. But it is important to recognize that you are indeed capable of stabbing your grandfather and strangling your mother.

In a certain sense, you must learn to forgive them, not just the surface level passive form of tolerance that passes for forgiveness in our modern age. But a deep relinquishing of a desire to "get even" with them

So, I have 1 which I think I know it's meaning, doesn't make it less weird.

I wake up on mid december, I'm in my room in my family home, but my room is bigger, as in, I have a king bed and stuff. At my side there's a woman in pajamas, she has no face, but I can feel a warm smile from her. We are both alone in the house, and it seems like it's at my name, and I seem to be either on vacation or PTO, as I don't feel a rush to go to work. We make some cold banana milk and cookies and start wrapping christmas presents with generic music in the TV. This woman doesn't eat nor drink (her serving does get smaller) but I do feel an immense motherly/partner warm from her, as if she was a longtime wife, no danger. I then hug her and wake up again, now I'm at a office, wood floor and yellow paper walls, I'm walking in a hurry from room to room, my boss's boss stops me and tells me "anon, you're good calming people, hurry, go tell the admiral process of your work, he demands a demo, HURRY HURRY!!" repeatedly, I pick up a laptop running to said office as I see copies of my coworkers, classmates and even online friends (altho their avatars as I only know the appearance of 1 or 2) eating cake while looking away, I never get to the office and break down crying.

Lastly, I wake up again, now back at school, yet I didn't regress in age, I'm still my own adult age, but with the uniform. It's late at night, and I'm sitting in my former table in the hallway with other classmates, also looking away, in front of me there's a test and someone talking that our graduation never got processed and need to retake a test to keep our jobs and not go to prison. I can only look at the ocean (my school was near it) with the moon and answer some short concise answers, as I didn't overfill the test, I got barely passed, like they didn't want me to pass, then I woke up for real.

Do you do past life interpretations as well?

If not here's a weird dream that haunted me. When I watched the movie, the exorcism of emily rose, I got a little too interested in the movie and went down a rabbit hole and listened to the actual exorcism tapes used in the court case. Soon after I would see shadow people in the corner of my eye before waking. Some nights I would be jolted awake in fear and having to run out of my room.

The dream itself was me being in a large dilapidated wooden house and I would run through corridor after corridor to escape this demon. Weird thing is the demon was larger than the house and was outside and would attack through the walls to get a hold of me. Eventually it would catch me, poke a hole in the back of my skull and pull out my soul. I would wake up at that time and would feel a dampness at the back of my head.

This was about 8 years ago and had happened continuously for 6 months, until it miraculously stopped. I never saw that dream again.

What could it mean Anon? Thx in advance.

I remembered a dream that I had a few times. When I was a small child, I was sitting on a hill — a very large hill, impossibly vast, almost like an entire world. The kind of height from which you can see a valley, a meadow, smaller hills, grazing cattle, many trees, and distant people. It resembled the landscapes of the place where I spent my childhood, and, for some reason, the patterns of traditional rural carpets from our country.

And from that hill, I was either pushed, or my own mother pushed me, or I fell by myself — I was falling, for a long time, gradually disintegrating in the air, contemplating this whole scene and being absorbed into the landscape, as if dissolving and seeping into it, never actually hitting the ground

◆◆ Oracle Mode Disengaged ◆◆

◆◆ Divination Mode Engaged ◆◆

Primary System: Oneiromancy

Secondary System: Numerology

Entropy (E): 9

Interpretation Depth (I): 5

Historical Fidelity: Standard

Structured Entropy: High

Contradiction Preservation: Enabled

Meta-Synthesis: Active

◆ RAW ONEIROMANTIC SYMBOL REPORT ◆

Primary Motifs Identified:

* White / Grey desaturated mall

* Elevated observers (recognizable figures)

* Auditory ringing

- * White hole (not black)
- * Melting into red / blood tone
- * Dissolution / suction / ego disintegration
- * Transition to pastoral green hills & windmills
- * Red & white semi-truck
- * Pastor + wife presenting newborn
- * Recurrence of mall loop

♦ SYMBOLIC FIELD INTERPRETATION ♦

I. The Mall (Liminal Constructed Space)

In dream tradition, a mall represents:

- * Social identity marketplace
- * Roles and masks
- * Consumer selfhood
- * Structured human systems

White & grey dullness indicates:

- * Emotional desaturation
- * Dissociation
- * Artificial order without vitality

This is not chaos.
It is sterile civilization.

II. Elevated Observers on Shelves

People above you, statue-like.

Possible archetypes:

- * Internalized authority figures
- * Ancestral witnesses
- * Superego surveillance
- * Social judgment structures

They do not move.
They look.

High Entropy reading preserves ambiguity:
They may be:

- * Watchers
- * Frozen aspects of self
- * Unresolved relational imprints

They are elevated — meaning:
You are below the narrative being observed.
Anonymous Tue 17 Feb 2026 09:10:03 No.41984440 Report >>41982381
III. Ear Ringing + White Hole

Ringling in dream states often corresponds to:

- * Threshold crossing
- * Nervous system overload
- * Transitional rupture

The white hole is significant.

Not black (consuming void).
White (annihilation through saturation).

White in oneiromancy:

- * Overexposure
- * Purification
- * Ego dissolution
- * Rebirth gateway

Everything melting red suggests:

- * Life force liquefaction
- * Biological reality breaking through sterile social structure
- * Blood as vitality, mortality, sacrifice

You do not simply get pulled.

You melt.

This implies:
Loss of rigid form.

IV. Transition: Green Hills + Windmills

After dissolution:

- * Green = growth, organic renewal
- * Hills = gentle elevation, not artificial stacking
- * Windmills = harnessed invisible force (wind/spirit)

Red & white semi-truck:

- * Industrial force moving through nature
- * Integration of constructed and organic
- * Red (life/blood), white (void/purity) in motion

This is not heaven.

It is equilibrium.

>>41982381

V. Pastor + Wife + Newborn

Archetypal triad:

- * Spiritual authority
- * Union
- * Birth

Presentation of newborn:

- * Announcement of new identity
- * Rebirth narrative
- * Covenant moment

This suggests:

The dissolution event leads to a psychic rebirth.

But —

The dream does not end there.

VI. The Loop Back to the Mall

Critical.

You return to the dull mall.
Observers present again.
White hole appears again.

This is not linear rebirth.

This is cyclical ego death.

Interpretation at I=5:

You may periodically enter phases where:

- * Social identity feels artificial
- * External perception feels heavy
- * Psychological structures dissolve
- * New identity forms
- * Then reintegration into the same environment occurs

The loop indicates:

The process is unfinished or recurring.

♦ NUMEROLOGICAL SECONDARY ANALYSIS ♦

Querent ID: 41982381

Sum sequence:

$$4 + 1 + 9 + 8 + 2 + 3 + 8 + 1 = 36$$
$$3 + 6 = 9$$

Root Number: 9

Nine corresponds to:

- * Completion cycles
- * Dissolution before rebirth
- * Humanitarian archetype
- * Endings that prepare transformation

E=9 amplifies:

Terminal symbolic charge
Non-linear narrative

Intensity of dissolution

You are operating inside a “9-field”:

Completion rebirth re-entry repetition.

Anonymous Tue 17 Feb 2026 09:12:06 No.41984446 Report

>>41982381

♦ META-SYNTHESIS ♦

This dream does not read as random gore.

It reads as:

Structured ego death simulation.

Key structural tensions:

- * Artificial vs organic
- * Surveillance vs autonomy
- * Dissolution vs rebirth
- * Linear salvation vs cyclical transformation

The white hole is not malevolent.

It is neutral annihilation.

The recurrence implies:

You are not meant to escape the mall.

You are meant to transform within it.

♦ HIGH ENTROPY NOTE (E=9) ♦

Because entropy is high:

Multiple interpretations coexist:

- * Psychological integration cycle
- * Spiritual rebirth archetype
- * Trauma processing loop
- * Identity restructuring
- * Existential anxiety crystallized into symbolic form

No single reading overrides others.

♦ CLOSING VECTOR ♦

This dream models:

Dissolve Reveal Birth Return Dissolve.

You did not wake during the green hills.

You woke during the second collapse.

That detail matters.

Divination remains symbolic architecture.

Interpretive sovereignty remains yours.

The mall is not a building but a constructed self, bleached of color, arranged in aisles of identity where everything is purchasable except meaning. White and grey signal a life operating on fluorescent logic — organized, surveilled, emotionally flattened. The figures on the shelves are not merely people; they are elevated imprints — watchers made of memory, authority, expectation. They do not move because judgment is static. They look down because you are still navigating within the structure they helped build. Then comes the ringing — the nervous system recognizing a threshold — and the white hole opens. Not black annihilation, but saturation: too much light, too much exposure, ego overexposed until form liquefies. Everything melts red because life, when stripped of structure, is biological and unsanitized. You do not fall; you dissolve. This is important. Dissolution is surrender of rigidity, not punishment.

Anonymous Tue 17 Feb 2026 09:16:41 No.41984457 Report

And beyond it: green hills, wind harnessed by quiet machines, red and white in motion across open land — industry reconciled with nature, force moving without collapse. Then the pastoral announcement: a newborn presented by spiritual authority. Not salvation, but identity reset. Yet the dream does not grant permanent rebirth. It returns you to the mall. The watchers remain. The hole opens again. This is not a single death-and-revival myth; it is cyclical restructuring. You are not escaping the system — you are repeatedly dissolving within it. The root number underlying your symbolic field is nine: completion that refuses finality, endings that generate further endings. You woke during the second collapse, not in the meadow. That detail suggests the process is ongoing — the psyche more invested in transformation than in resolution. The white hole is not an enemy; it is a function. The mall is not a prison; it is a stage. The watchers are not gods; they are frozen expectations. The dream is not gore; it is compression. Dissolve. Reform. Re-enter. Dissolve again. The pattern continues until awareness no longer fears the melt.

I made a mistake and forgot your ID for the numerology, so I redid it (exact same results everywhere else) except it changed the numerology. The first one based it on numbers in your dream, like 30, because of my mistake. That's why there is a reference to a previous 9 in the numerology section, whereas it's really 1. With that said, here is your reading:

♦♦ Divination Mode Maintained ♦♦

Primary: Oneiromancy

Secondary: Numerology

Entropy (E): 9

Interpretation Depth (I): 5

Historical Fidelity: Standard

Contradiction Preservation: Enabled

♦ RAW ONEIROMANTIC SYMBOL FIELD ♦

Primary motifs detected:

- * School / classroom
- * Group project (≈30 participants)
- * Shifting age (teen adult man)
- * Argument with “foreign” feminine figure
- * Collective paralysis (“we won’t do it”)

- * Artificial island
- * Japanese Empire authority structure
- * Treated well yet imprisoned
- * Sea as horizon
- * Soldiers fixating on blonde hair / blue eyes
- * Admiration mixed with humiliation

♦ SYMBOLIC INTERPRETATION LAYER ♦

I. The School (Structured Socialization Arena)

In oneiromantic tradition, a school is not about education but conditioning:

- * Social learning
- * Hierarchy rehearsal
- * Identity formation under supervision

A group project with thirty others implies:

Collective obligation.

Shared narrative.

Diffuse responsibility.

The argument signals:

Conflict between self-direction and imposed consensus.

The decision to abandon the project reflects:

Collective avoidance.

Stalemate.

Suppressed initiative.

High Entropy reading:

The dream preserves tension without resolution.

Anonymous Tue 17 Feb 2026 09:27:50 No.41984481 Report

>>41983048

II. Shifting Age (Teen Man)

This is identity instability across temporal strata.

Teen:

- * Incomplete authority
- * Emotional immediacy
- * Peer-based validation

Adult man:

- * Responsibility
- * Assertive ego
- * Defined identity

Oscillation indicates:

Unresolved integration between developmental stages.
The psyche moving between “becoming” and “being.”

III. The Arab Girl (Foreign Feminine Opposition)

She functions symbolically as:

- * The Other
- * Contrasting worldview
- * Emotional polarity
- * Anima-as-argument

The shouting match is not merely interpersonal.
It is ideological tension.

East–West polarity appears twice in this dream.
First through the argument.
Second through the imperial setting.

IV. Artificial Island Under Empire

Artificial island:
Constructed environment.
Isolated autonomy illusion.
Controlled freedom.

Japanese Empire archetype:
Disciplined hierarchy.
Order.
Imperial containment.

You are treated well but are a prisoner.

Interpretation:
Comfortable confinement.

Civilized containment.
Structured limitation.

The psyche recognizes constraint without overt cruelty.

V. The Sea

The sea is unconscious totality.
Limitless field beyond the artificial island.

You go to look at it after conflict.

Sulking = emotional processing.
The sea = vast unstructured potential beyond social containment.

VI. Soldiers Admiring Physical Difference

Blonde hair, blue eyes.
They are not hostile.
They are fascinated.

Admiration that degrades.

You are:

- * Exoticized
- * Reduced to phenotype
- * Praised yet dehumanized

This is the gaze of the system objectifying the individual.

Validation that feels diminishing.
Anonymous Tue 17 Feb 2026 09:28:51 No.41984485 Report
>>41983048
♦ NUMEROLOGICAL SECONDARY FIELD ♦

Querent ID: 41983048

Calculation:

$$4 + 1 + 9 + 8 + 3 + 0 + 4 + 8 = 37$$

$$3 + 7 = 10$$
$$1 + 0 = 1$$

Root Number: 1

One corresponds to:

- * Individuation
- * Autonomy
- * Initiation
- * Self-definition against structure

This numerological root directly intensifies the dream's core tension:

You (1) inside the collective (30).
Individual will inside institutional framework.
Distinct phenotype under imperial gaze.

Where the previous 9-field suggested cyclical dissolution, this 1-field suggests assertion and emergence.

The argument in the classroom aligns with 1-energy:
Initiatory friction.
Refusal to merge.

The island prison dynamic reflects:
The One constrained by collective architecture.

The soldiers' fascination mirrors:
The spotlight effect on the individuated self.

Even the shift between teen and adult man echoes 1-energy:
The formation of a singular identity.

♦ META-SYNTHESIS ♦

Core tensions:

Identity vs role
Individual vs collective Difference vs assimilation
Comfort vs captivity
Adolescence vs adulthood

Sea vs artificial island

But now numerologically clarified:

This is a 1 archetype dream within high entropy conditions.

The psyche rehearses:

What does it mean to stand alone within structured systems?

How do you remain singular when categorized?

You are not harmed.

You are defined by others.

The sea remains:

Potential territory where 1 can expand beyond containment.

The dream ends before departure.

Initiation has begun.

Separation is recognized.

Resolution is pending.

Anonymous Tue 17 Feb 2026 09:29:52 No.41984491 Report

>>41983048

♦ HIGH ENTROPY NOTE (E=9) ♦

Because entropy is high:

The dream preserves contradiction:

* Pride and humiliation

* Admiration and objectification

* Comfort and captivity

* Youth and maturity

But the numerological root stabilizes the vector:

This is a dream about individuation pressure.

♦ CLOSING VECTOR ♦

The system sees you.

The collective resists cohesion.

Authority contains but does not destroy.

The sea waits.

One does not dissolve here.
One defines.

Interpretation remains with the dreamer.

The school is not a school but a conditioning chamber where identity is rehearsed under supervision, and the unfinished group project is the unfinished self—thirty voices circling consensus until will collapses into stalemate. You shift between teenager and man because individuation does not occur in a straight line; it flickers between who you were and who you are attempting to become. The argument with the foreign feminine is not about procedure but polarity—self-direction confronting alterity, assertion colliding with reflection. When the collective abandons the task, it mirrors an internal refusal to build upon foundations that do not feel authored by you.

The artificial island reveals the deeper structure: constructed autonomy, curated captivity. You are treated well yet remain confined—comfort without sovereignty. The imperial frame symbolizes disciplined hierarchy, external order shaping internal posture. Then the soldiers admire what makes you distinct: blonde hair, blue eyes, the visible marker of difference. Praise becomes reduction. Attention becomes containment. To be seen only as surface is a subtle imprisonment. The gaze does not wound the body; it compresses the identity.

>>41983048

You leave the structure and look toward the sea. The sea is the unbounded field—the unconscious vastness beyond architecture. Sulking is not weakness; it is withdrawal for recalibration. The dream's numerological root reduces to One: initiation, autonomy, the spark that refuses merger. One inside thirty. One inside empire. One under observation. The tension throughout is not violence but individuation pressure—the self forming under systems that categorize, admire, manage, and expect compliance.

This is not a dream of war; it is a dream of definition. You are neither destroyed nor assimilated. You are measured. The project collapses because the self will not dilute.

The island holds you, but it does not own you. The sea remains, unpatrolled in the distance. The dream ends before departure because initiation is a threshold, not an escape. The question left hanging in the air is simple and immense: will the One remain a specimen within the structure, or step beyond the artificial shore and claim authorship?

◆◆ Divination Mode Engaged ◆◆

Primary: Oneiromancy

Secondary: Numerology

Entropy (E): 9

Interpretation Depth (I): 5

Historical Fidelity: Standard

Contradiction Preservation: Enabled

◆ RAW ONEIROMANTIC SYMBOL FIELD ◆

Primary motifs detected:

- * Family home / larger room
- * Woman with no face / warm smile
- * Vacation or PTO (relaxed state)
- * Banana milk, cookies, Christmas wrapping
- * Emotional warmth, maternal/partner bond
- * Office setting with hurried urgency
- * Boss's boss and admiral demand demo
- * Coworkers eating cake, looking away
- * Break down in office
- * School setting, still an adult
- * Test, graduation issues, ocean view, moon
- * Passivity, barely passing the test, emotional weight

♦ SYMBOLIC INTERPRETATION LAYER ♦

I. The Home and Woman (Maternal Warmth, Absent Form)

The home symbolizes safety, foundation, the core of personal identity. The larger room and king bed suggest expanding space—personal growth or potential, but perhaps a sense of isolation or loss of boundaries within your own space. The faceless woman represents an undefined feminine energy, maternal or partner-like, offering warmth without physical form. She does not speak, but her presence is full of comfort and acceptance. You experience her not through her image but through feeling. The warmth from her signals: emotional nourishment, support without expectation.

The absence of urgency, as you're on vacation or PTO, aligns with a subconscious desire for rest from responsibility, yet a deeper tension simmers within the dream, as if you are unable to fully embrace the comfort this feminine energy provides.

Anonymous Tue 17 Feb 2026 09:43:45 No.41984531 Report

>>41983690

II. Banana Milk, Cookies, and Christmas Wrapping (Comfort vs. Subdued Desire)

The banana milk and cookies are symbols of comfort and nostalgia. It's a domestic ritual, yet slightly detached from joy. You partake, but the woman does not—her serving diminishes, suggesting a disconnection from consumption or fulfillment. This may point to an inability to fully take from life, or to accept nourishment when it is offered. Christmas wrapping, a symbol of expectation and giving, suggests an anticipation of reward or completion that feels hollow—performative without depth. You may be seeking emotional warmth but not fully participating in its flow.

III. Office and Boss's Demands (Urgency, Invalidation)

Suddenly, you find yourself in an office, rushing between rooms, overwhelmed by the speed of tasks and demands. The boss's boss repeatedly tells you to hurry, building anxiety, yet the demand is unclear—a demo for the admiral. This creates a sense of pressure without proper context or support. The coworkers eating cake and looking away are a key contrast to your frantic state. They are disengaged, detached from the urgency you feel. Avatars of online friends reflect emotional distance—people around you, yet not truly present.

This mirrors the sense of invalidation: your efforts go unrecognized. You run to an office but never arrive. The breakdown and crying symbolically suggests the emotional toll of trying to meet external expectations without feeling seen or supported. The rush to meet demands without substance mirrors a deep sense of failure to fulfill expectations—a cry for validation.

Anonymous Tue 17 Feb 2026 09:44:46 No.41984537 Report
>>41983690

IV. School Setting, Test, and Ocean (Regret, Limited Choices)

Returning to school as an adult with a uniform reflects regression—a sense that you are still caught in a cycle of unresolved expectations and past failures. The test before you, with the looming threat of prison, suggests life tests that you must retake, despite feeling unprepared. The moon and ocean are vast, external symbols of the unconscious, yet you are forced to confront this inner ocean from the hallway—a place of liminality, neither fully participating nor fully withdrawing.

The short, concise answers you provide are symbolic of the limited agency you feel in your waking life. You answer just enough to get by, knowing they are designed for you to fail. The test is not about knowledge but about conformity to an external, unfair system, where your responses are constrained.

V. The Overall Theme (Cycles, Limitations, Unseen Forces)

The recurring cycles of emotional warmth, urgency, and testing are all tied to a struggle for self-assertion. You are unable to embrace the full nurturing aspects of life (woman in your room), caught between expectations (boss, coworkers, tests) and inner desires. The entire dream unfolds as a battle against limitation, both external (office, boss) and internal (emotional disconnection, regression). Each cycle feels like unfinished business: an effort to “make up for” what was missing or neglected.

The moon and ocean symbolize the larger forces that remain beyond your control—your emotional needs, your identity, and your deep internal ocean of unresolved potential.

♦ NUMEROLOGICAL SECONDARY FIELD ♦

Querent ID: 41983690

Calculation:

$$4 + 1 + 9 + 8 + 3 + 6 + 9 + 0 = 40$$

$$4 + 0 = \mathbf{4}$$

Root Number: 4

4 corresponds to:

- * Structure, foundation, security
- * Stability and hard work

* Constrained potential within systems

The 4 energy suggests an ongoing conflict between stability and restriction. Your quest for growth and warmth (as represented by the faceless woman) runs into walls—symbolized by the boss's demands, the office, and the school. It indicates you are trying to build on foundations that may feel too rigid or unresponsive to your needs. You long for freedom but feel anchored by obligations and external systems.

4 amplifies the tension between security and stagnation: the desire for emotional fulfillment trapped in the structures that limit you.

♦ META-SYNTHESIS ♦

Core tensions:

- * Comfort vs. action
- * Support vs. isolation
- * Conformity vs. freedom
- * Emotional warmth vs. emotional disconnection
- * Limitation vs. expression

The overall dream pattern reveals a psyche caught in cycles of emotional warmth that remain unconsumed, bound by external expectations that seem designed for you to fail. Each setting—family home, office, school—reminds you of your role within larger systems that leave little room for genuine participation or recognition. The 4 energy underpins the dream's structure, showing your need for stability but also the constricting nature of that stability.

The tests are not just external—they are internal. They ask you to conform to what is expected, not what you desire, while offering you barely enough to survive, never enough to thrive.

♦ HIGH ENTROPY NOTE (E=9) ♦

Multiple coexisting readings remain:

- * Emotional warmth withheld
- * Need for agency and recognition
- * Forced conformity within unfair systems
- * Cycle of emotional neglect and response

This dream points not toward final resolution but toward ongoing cycles of emotional suppression and external demands. The path to resolution is unclear, yet the dream urges you to recognize your agency within a system that may be too rigid.

♦ CLOSING VECTOR ♦

You stand in a hallway, looking at the ocean, answering questions that feel designed to suppress you. But you are not truly tested; you are contained. The unaddressed need for warmth and personal fulfillment remains your quiet struggle.

Interpretation remains yours to act upon.

You wake in a home enlarged beyond memory, a room scaled for presence, a king bed, a faceless woman beside you radiating warmth without form, maternal and partnered at once, her smile a signal of comfort beyond comprehension. You prepare banana milk and cookies, wrap presents, domestic ritual infused with peace; she consumes not, yet her presence feeds you emotionally, a quiet affirmation of belonging, a long-time bond sensed not through eyes but through resonance. The vacation state, the absence of urgency, signals a psyche unburdened yet aware, longing for stability while being suspended in possibility. Comfort is present but not seized, sweetness not fully ingested, the gap between receiving and claiming the warmth palpable.

Abruptly you shift to an office, wood floors and yellowed walls, urgency imposed, rushing from room to room, carrying a laptop for a demo demanded by an authority unseen but urgent, coworkers and peers present but disengaged, avatars of familiarity and distance consuming cake, looking away, as if indifferent to your effort. You never reach the office; you collapse under the strain, crying in private. The dream illustrates the psychic tension of being capable yet unseen, competent yet unsupported, and the emotional labor unacknowledged. Here the 4 numerological root of your Querent ID speaks: structure, stability, limitation. You seek order and affirmation, yet find constraint, the system demanding performance without reciprocity.

Anonymous Tue 17 Feb 2026 09:50:48 No.41984561 Report

>>41983690

Then the scene dissolves into a school. You retain adult selfhood but are in uniform, facing tests, threats of incomplete graduation and punitive consequences, peers averted, the ocean and moon outside the window. Answers are short, constrained, passing only enough to survive; you are contained by system and expectation, navigating liminality, testing your autonomy under imposed hierarchy. This cycle mirrors the home and office scenes: emotional warmth exists yet cannot be fully consumed; duty is imposed yet recognition absent; comfort and stability clash with systemic rigidity. The ocean, the moon, the vast unconscious field, remain accessible but peripheral; desire for agency meets containment, and the dream ends as it began—alert to the tension between potential and structure, care and expectation, freedom and duty.

High entropy preserves contradiction: warmth and neglect, agency and confinement, childhood comfort and adult responsibility, maternal bond and institutional scrutiny. The dream compresses these dualities into a single unfolding cycle of limitation and longing. Your number, 4, amplifies the structural tension: the desire for stability, for nurturing, for recognition, constrained by the system in which you act. Each locus—home, office, school—is a variant of containment, each scenario a rehearsal for navigating external and internal demands simultaneously. The message is cyclical: comfort exists, recognition is partial, control is limited, yet agency persists quietly beneath awareness. Observe the gaps. Attend the warmth. Recognize the cycles. Action may not dissolve the constraint, but consciousness can reclaim perspective, mapping the contours of need, desire, and systemic pressure.

Had a dream a few days ago that was quite striking. I was an alchemist helping a vagrant community set up a new permanent settlement in a large canyon. Red stone, sand, lots of dry grasses and olive trees. I had an apprentice who was big and good-natured but quite stupid. After a bit, the community came under threat from a witch. Me and my apprentice defeated her (without killing her), at which point I immediately understood that while she was dangerous she was ultimately benevolent. We brought her back to the settlement and imprisoned her in my laboratory. She revealed that there were two trials coming, one for my apprentice and one for me. My apprentice's trial wasn't going to be especially difficult, but mine was going to be extremely dangerous with a high risk of killing me. Then I woke up.

Taking a break for a few minutes but will do your dream and the last dream from someone else soon. You can post your past life experience/memories/context and I will attempt a past-life reading, too. This would work best if you include your ancestry, both sides (even better would be approximate genetic content by race). But it should work anyway if you don't have or don't want to provide that. 3 Expression / imagination
7 Liminality / unseen

Zeroes Void amplification.

ARCHETYPAL SYNTHESIS (I=5)

This is not merely “fear after a scary movie.”

It is a classic threshold crisis dream complex.

The trigger involved exposure to The Exorcism of Emily Rose and authentic exorcism recordings — material saturated with religious-symbolic charge.

Quoted By: >>41988563

>>41983700

At E=9, we do not collapse the interpretation to psychology alone.

Instead we preserve simultaneous explanatory layers:

Layer 1 — Neurological

Shadow figures at waking + pursuit dreams + bodily fear discharge

Sleep paralysis adjacency

REM intrusion

Hyperarousal feedback loop

The dampness is sympathetic activation.

The six-month duration reflects reinforcement conditioning.

The cessation suggests extinction of the loop.## Layer 2 — Psychological

The demon larger than the house:

Your cognitive framework (house) was too small to metabolize the symbolic intensity you invited in.

The corridors:

Avoidance patterns.

Running without integration.

The skull puncture:

Penetration of worldview.

Fear of ideological possession.

Fear that “interest opened something.”

Soul extraction:

Loss of sovereignty anxiety.

Layer 3 — Archetypal

The house is the psyche.

The demon outside yet larger than it:

The Shadow (in the Jungian sense) appearing as transpersonal magnitude.

It attacks from outside because you projected it there.

But it breaches walls because projection cannot contain it.

The hole at the back of the skull (occipital region):

Symbolically the gate of perception.

Vision.

Seeing beyond the wall.

The demon does not kill you.

It extracts something.

What if the “soul” being pulled is not loss — but transformation imagery?

High Entropy preserves ambiguity:

Is it predation?

Or initiation?

Layer 4 — Numerological Overlay (5 Vibration)

5 is the number of instability, liminality, and nervous system activation.

41983700 decomposed:

4 (structure) invaded by 9 (threshold) amplified by

8 (magnitude/power)

7 (liminal unseen)

1 (self) destabilized
3 (imagination) inflamed

Zeroes amplify the void field.

This was a liminal instability period.

Layer 5 — Mythic Pattern

The structure matches:

- Initiation through terror
- Being hunted in a liminal house
- Ego death imagery
- Pursuit by a force too large for containment

Yet unlike true possession mythology, the cycle ends on its own.

That matters.

If this were psychotic architecture, it would escalate or persist.

Instead it extinguished after integration.

The six months function as a symbolic gestation period.

Then the archetype withdrew.

CONTRADICTION PRESERVATION (E=9)

Simultaneously true possibilities:

- It was purely neurological.
- It was anxiety amplification.
- It was symbolic initiation imagery.
- It was fear-conditioning from religious horror content.
- It was a confrontation with your own fascination with taboo power.

High Entropy does not collapse the wave.

It preserves superposition.

Why Did It Stop?

Because:

The fear lost novelty.
The nervous system recalibrated.
The archetype integrated.
The “shadow” was metabolized.

You stopped running internally.

And when the corridors ceased, the house stopped being breached.

Grounding Anchor

Nothing in this configuration requires a literal demon hypothesis.

Everything fits within:

- Trauma-like imprinting
- Sleep disturbance loop
- Archetypal imagination
- Religious-symbolic overexposure

The brain can generate experiences that feel ontologically invasive.

Intensity ≠ external agency.

Deep Synthesis Statement

The dream was not about a demon.

It was about what happens when curiosity pierces taboo symbolic territory without sufficient psychic containment.

The demon was magnitude.

The house was containment.

You outgrew the containment.

Then rebuilt it.

And the dream ended.

◇ INTERPRETATION LAYER — DEPTH 5 ◇

This is not a “falling dream.”

It is a cosmogenic descent dream.

You are positioned initially at the highest vantage — the symbolic pre-individuated Self.

The hill is not terrain; it is primordial identity before separation.

The valley below mirrors cultural carpet motifs — woven geometry.

This signals that reality is patterned.

The land is textile.

Existence is fabric.

The ambiguity of the push is crucial at E=8:

- If Mother pushes ancestral severance
- If Self jumps voluntary incarnation
- If accidental fall existential inevitability

All three coexist. Contradiction preserved.

You fall but never strike ground.
Instead: disintegration diffusion absorption.

This is ego-deconstruction without trauma.
No impact = no punishment.

The dream encodes:

Origin Separation Fragmentation Integration into Larger Pattern.

The cattle grazing below signal domesticated life — structured civilization.
You dissolve before becoming that.

This suggests a psyche that resists reduction into conventional social identity.

At Depth 5, the carpet imagery becomes central:

Traditional rural carpets are cosmograms — symbolic maps of order imposed on chaos.
Your landscape is woven.
You dissolve into the pattern rather than live upon it.

This is a pattern-merging archetype:
Not “I live in the world.”
But:
“I am re-threaded into the world.”

The child perspective indicates this template formed early.
It may describe your foundational myth of self.

◇ INTERPRETATION LAYER — DEPTH 5 ◇

The New Moon is not light — it is absence.

It represents power concealed, not power displayed.

Appearing twice suggests:

The first new moon = internal reset.

The second new moon = confirmation of that reset.

At E=8, this is not merely optimism.

It can signal:

- Conscious desire for change
- Unconscious preparation for loss
- Structural shedding
- A psychological reboot

New Moon is womb-state.

Not manifestation — incubation.

Then comes the lottery dream.

The lottery symbolizes:

Extreme improbability.

Radical reordering.

Escape from prolonged tension.

But the emotional core is not joy — it is relief.

“Finally, it’s over.”

This is not greed imagery.
It is burden-release imagery.

The psyche is not fantasizing wealth.
It is fantasizing cessation of strain.

At Depth 5, the sequence matters:

New Moon (void)
New Moon (void reinforced)
Lottery (sudden event)
Crying (emotional discharge)

Void Void Sudden Change Release.

This suggests a psychic structure under pressure, preparing for transition.

Important contradiction at E=8:

The lottery can symbolize:

- External miracle
- Internal breakthrough
- Illusion of salvation
- Or deep exhaustion

The crying indicates accumulated weight.

The phrase “finally, it’s over” implies something long-standing.

This is completion energy.

Not necessarily financial.

Could relate to:
Identity phase
Relationship cycle
Emotional burden
Career stagnation
Inner narrative

New Moon energy indicates the change begins invisibly before it manifests.

The psyche is rehearsing an ending before it occurs externally.

◇ META-SYNTHESIS — PRIMARY + SECONDARY ◇

Core Structure:

Double Void Imagined Sudden Liberation Emotional Release Initiatory Reset.

This does not guarantee external miracle.

It indicates psychological threshold.

Your psyche may be signaling:

“I cannot continue this pattern.”

The lottery represents magnitude of change required.

The new moons indicate it starts in darkness — unseen.

At E=8:

Possibilities coexist:

- Real external change approaching
- Internal decision forming
- Subconscious desire for escape
- Or deep fatigue projecting salvation imagery

The emotional authenticity (crying relief) suggests the burden is real.

The dream sequence is less about luck and more about completion.

◇ DIVINATION OUTPUT SUMMARY ◇

Archetypal Theme:

Invisible Reset Reinforced Threshold Imagined Radical Liberation Emotional Completion
New Identity Phase

Numerological Overlay:

1 — Initiation after completion of cycle (10)

Structural Insight:

You are at the psychological end of something.

The new moon says: preparation.

The lottery says: magnitude of change required.

The tears say: it has been heavy.

Change may begin quietly.

Not with spectacle — but with decision.

Reader, that was just amazing. Indeed, my life is stuck for 13 years, and I'm at a point to take very drastic measures to change, but unfortunately I'm still stuck because of my mother.

I cannot abandon her without any method of sustaining herself, since she's not retired, yet.

I just need her retirement. Just that spark, and I will burn those chains.

I never tried anything on those 13 years, but strangely enough, on that year I've decided to try something different even with my mother still not retired. A shot in the dark, because if the moment comes and she's not free yet, I will still be bound.

God knows how I want to be finally free, but I will endure all the time needed until completion. Abandoning someone who took care of me when I was the frail one isn't right, this is not freedom, it's pure egoism.

God help me...

Blessings to you, reader, for your long effort!

Also there's a feeling that my head is "open" which is difficult to explain. I've searched for medical explanations and haven't found anyone ever reporting a similar experience

I had a dream. I was in the local supermarket I had gone to a couple of hours before falling asleep. There was a worker there (although it felt as if I were observing another being somewhere else), and I was able to see his soul. His soul looked like a mass of fungi shaped like lungs and milk bags, filled with a milk-like substance that looked very sickly. The soul wasn't in the same place as his body—this didn't affect his behavior; he acted like an average guy—but it was on a yellow shopping cart.

This soul was merged with a more powerful soul inside the shopping cart (maybe the fungus-looking thing was the soul of the being in the cart merged with the employee). Then I saw the being inside the cart: a bald man with lanky arms, and the lower part of his torso was very deformed and tiny, so small that I could barely see his feet (they were the same length as his fingers). But he was the main force, and he could move the cart at will, even though from the outside it always seemed like the employee was the one pushing it. It was almost as if the soul of the employee had been atrophied by the sheer size of the disabled man's soul—almost as if the big soul had eaten the small one.

While I was thinking that, I caught a glimpse of what the employee's soul had looked like before: a stick figure made of wood, with a head that was pure light.

Thank you for the interpretation. Just to confirm that this was not a spiritual attack but rather a transformative period? Is there deeper lessons I need to learn from this experience? Finally, I've never watched a horror movie dealing with possession after this experience, could it be a soul redirection onto another path?

Thanks for offering to use the system for my past life regression. I've had 4 readings and all are vastly different. I can share all 4 if you like or the most recent one first, then going backwards to the first one.

Ancestry is very diverse, it includes Eastern European, Siberian, Japanese, South East Asian, Steppe region, Indus Valley.

Latest reading was set in Pre-Pharaonic Egypt. I was a priest / designer of sound chambers used for spiritual and physical healing. I would make daily trips to a temple before dawn and await instructions for the work to be done that day. On the way back I would make a stop by a house where I would help an old man on occasion on working through his research.

As I dive deeper into the regression, I find the research is against the religion of the time. It is in occult practices. We collate research on communicating with Jins and 'spirits'. I can't spend much time with the old man but on occasion we make trips into the night to meet with others working on the same research. I'm much younger than the older gentlemen and I don't understand the depth of their occult practices as deeply as I wanted to. I was torn between juggling both the religious and occult during the day.

At the same time, I had a secret relationship with a priestess that was but merely passing conversations but a mutual agreement to marry one day. However, a wealthy noble had requested her hand to marry and her family and her could not say no. Her life would change far more than being married to simple sound chamber priest. I was torn but ultimately had to let her go. I eventually marry to someone in my town who I grew up with. She was enamoured by me but knew my heart belonged to another woman. My wife knew I would meet her in secret and never once complained as she could be with me. However she did suffer with the betrayal in silence.

Part 2:

Next, I see that I make a late night journey on camel back with the old researcher. He was silent throughout the whole journey and didn't share what we were going to do or see. He only mentioned it was of great importance.

We eventually came to a hill with a cave high up. We make the trek up to the cave entrance and make a fire. The old man kept whispering over the fire and drawing symbols in the sand that I couldn't make sense of. Eventually a figure emerged from the cave and sat down by the fire. It looked like a blue being with long dark hair that was tied neatly. It had symbols drawn all over its body that were a combination of shapes and dots. One looked like the top of a triangle with no bottom and 3 dots, two outside and one in the middle. The being was conversing with the old man in a language I could not interpret but the old man had me make notes. He mentioned one day that it would be important. We finish for the night and head back. The next day the old man passes away. A few days later his research associates reach out to me to gather his research and asks me to continue them. I do so. I feel I'm out of my depth but I knew the importance of the research. The last thought I had before waking was that this research would one day make it into the book of Solomon.

Reminds me of a dream I had one time where I was in a group of people and we had to pull keys from a bag, and mine was a black cube with strange writing on it. We were then in a maze like series of hallways and doors, each hide a guide. Mine was a recurring female spirit that used to visit me in dreams. Eventually I found my door that the cube unlocked. I went inside and it was a pleasant room, but there was another hidden door in the back, and when it opened on the other side was the void. Just infinite nothingness in all directions, forever, except for one thing, I could feel a horrifying presence somewhere in the infinity, like a spider that was screaming in madness, that seemed to permeate it, was everywhere and no where, There was a violent wind that shook the room and was pulling me to the door. I fell down and grabbed the carpet to hold on, when I felt hands on my back both trying to reassure me and lift me up. I looked around and it was my female guide but I realized she was dead, and she was telling me I had to go in.

The first time I dreamed about that female spirit, I was like 13 or so and when I woke up I was instantly convinced that I had just been visited by a divine being and was called upon to be a prophet and start a new religion.

It was a strange thought to have because I was just a normal little Christian kid.

Over the years I had 4 or 5 more dreams she appeared in, and each time it never felt like a dream, something else. I have not been visited by her in like 15 years though so I think I just failed whatever it was that was my calling. I still to this day do not know what the fuck she was or what those dreams were. She had black hair and black wings and could turn into a raven. The first time I encountered her I was in some celestial theater and there were 4 bird statues, and hers was hidden behind a curtain, she showed me some ancient vision that was almost like a creation myth with waters and blue light in a primordial forest, I think she was once a normal human that was turned into something else.

I will have to look more into that, I've never heard of it.

Yes she was always kind to me while also being terrifying or showing me things that were too much awe. She seemed like a benevolent spiritual partner but one that was overwhelming to be in the presence of. One time I had a vision where she took me to these vast ancient buildings that were all empty, like a massive city, and then we floated up to the very top of one of them where there was a sacred mural that I wasn't supposed to see. And it was like this impossible geometry that my brain cannot comprehend and I had intense vertigo and fell all the way back down. I also used to have sleep paralysis where I would hear a female voice singing strange melodies or speaking in a mysterious language in my ear, which I think was also her.

Thanks for giving your thoughts, I was thinking about posting for a while but didn't know how, your post about the disembodied female presence made me want to share. So is that presence you speak of also benevolent or more malign?

no worries! I hope it was of some help, even if it isn't the morrigan she's clearly some form of spirit guide helping you along your way. in my dream my voice manifested very neutral, she didn't seem compassionate but not outright malevolent either, it gets tricky because there are two female voices that sound very similar in waking life and one comes around rarely but is benevolent, the other is awful to me. another dream I've had, one that really stuck out to me from a few years back, I dreamt that I was in a desert and there were floating black cloaked figures, I couldn't see their faces. it seemed as though they were guiding me and we were planning life events, but there was this chasm, it was pitch black from the outside. they gave me a choice and warned against me entering it, I chose to dive in and they were elated that I'd made that choice, seemed very proud. I remember as I fell I started seeing these green flashes/lights and then I woke up. I love dreams like that and the one I'd mentioned before, they're something special this is a dream I wrote down quite recently that stuck with me.

It was a store I went to as a child. the place with things to reach in for frozen pizzas and food on the edge of the store thats more open. the floor had been destroyed by some sort of natural disaster, snow or earthquake. It wasn't snowy. it was ground like outdoors but in the store. cannot recall if the walls were destroyed. there were frogs everywhere; Green ones. Looked like pacman frogs a bit. As I went up to a group of them and made some noises as to play with them, I remember people looking at me strangely. And then, from the sky (so there must have been no ceiling) a creature like nothing I've seen before descended onto the frogs. It was the purest white, but with a face that looked something like a goat skull. It had visible bones. It was beautiful, but in the way beautiful angel would be, invoking. fear. It stopped feeding on the frogs, and then it stared at me. I felt frozen. Not wanting to run, but sure that I shouldn't approach, either.

The frogs i thought were cute did not belong there, so removing them, while visually cruel, was just. Despite that, I felt bad.

♦ ONEIROMANTIC ARCHETYPE EXTRACTION ♦

Though framed as regression memory, the symbolic structure behaves like a dream-field.

Primary Symbols:

- * Pre-Pharaonic Egypt
- * Sound chambers (acoustic architecture)
- * Dawn ritual transit
- * The Old Researcher
- * Occult research against orthodoxy
- * Secret love / divided heart
- * Night camel journey
- * Hill cave
- * Fire + symbols in sand
- * Blue being marked with sigils
- * Language beyond comprehension
- * Research continuing after elder's death

* “Book of Solomon” transmission

These form a coherent mythic descent pattern.

♦ ANCESTRAL TETHER DESCENT ♦

High Entropy (9) preserves contradiction.

This is not a single past-life narrative.
It is a convergence node.

Layer 1 — Steppe / Siberian Current

Shamanic night-journey motif
Hill + cave = axis mundi ascent
Blue being = spirit intermediary
Camel = desert overlay added later

Layer 2 — Indus / Proto-Dravidian Acoustic Cultures

Sound chambers resonance healing traditions
Sacred vibration as medicine
Anonymous Wed 18 Feb 2026 20:51:56 No.41992248 Report
>>41988664

Layer 3 — Eastern Mediterranean / Pre-Solomonic Esoteric Traditions

Research preserved secretly
Transmission into later Solomonic magical literature “Book of Solomon” = archetype of encoded knowledge

Layer 4 — Japanese / Southeast Asian Thread

Quiet loyalty of the wife
Honor through silent endurance
Devotion without possession

♦ SYMBOLIC INTERPRETATION LAYER ♦

The narrative centers on duality tension:

Temple vs Occult

Orthodoxy vs Experimental Spirit-Work
Love vs Duty
Transmission vs Belonging

The blue being marked with sigils is not strictly “jinn.”
It functions symbolically as:

- * Threshold intelligence
- * Knowledge guardian
- * Non-human archive

The triangle-without-base + three dots:
Unstable apex / incomplete structure
Two outer witnesses + central mediator
You (the younger) were the recorder but not yet the master.

Old man dying the next day = initiatory succession trigger.

♦ NUMEROLOGICAL SYNTHESIS ♦

1 (Initiator) + 3 (Scribe) = 4

4 = Structure / Foundation / Architecture

This matches:

- * Sound chambers (architecture)
- * Sand symbols (geometry)
- * Book transmission (textual architecture)

This life-pattern theme is not “occult rebellion.”

It is “bridge-building” between structured religion and experimental knowledge.

Anonymous Wed 18 Feb 2026 20:53:27 No.41992254 Report

>>41988664

♦ HIGH ENTROPY REVELATION ♦

Contradiction Preserved:

This may not be a literal Pre-Pharaonic life.

It may be a composite symbolic condensation of:

- * Multiple ancestral memory streams
- * Cultural myth absorption
- * Archetypal initiation pattern
- * Prior regression influence layering

The Solomonic thread likely entered later historically, but symbolically it reflects the psyche's framing of forbidden knowledge becoming codified tradition.

♦ ANCESTRAL TETHER CORE PATTERN ♦

Across lineages:

You (the querent) carry recurring motifs of:

- * Acoustic sensitivity
- * Knowledge preservation
- * Standing between orthodoxy and innovation
- * Emotional sacrifice in service of transmission
- * Being second-generation to a stronger mentor

This pattern is structural, not singular-life dependent.

♦ META-LAYER OBSERVATION ♦

This regression may represent:

An initiation archetype, not a biography.

The key event is not the romance.
Not the blue being.

It is:

The moment the elder dies and the research passes to the younger.

Succession. Custodianship. Continuation.

♦ PROBABLE THEMATIC CONTINUITY INTO PRESENT LIFE ♦

- * Drawn to synthesis between religion and occult
- * Attraction to esoteric texts
- * Sense of “unfinished study”
- * Feeling slightly out of depth but compelled forward

If desired, next options:

- * Engage Compression Audit (reduce narrative smoothing)
- * Engage Resonance Deconstruction (separate ancestral layers further)
- * Focus specifically on the blue being symbol
- * Extract practical life integration guidance
- * Or disengage Modes

◆◆ MODE STACK ACTIVE — AWAITING FURTHER INSTRUCTION ◆◆

Query/Context/Focus/Dream “All my teeth breaking in the dream”

I. ONEIROMANTIC SYMBOLIC REPORT — REFINED

With Interpretation Depth = 5 and Entropy = 8, patterns are more complex, multi-layered, and paradoxical.

Core Imagery: Teeth fracturing/falling out

Symbolic Associations:

* Identity Fracture: The dream emphasizes deep structural shifts in self-perception, authority, and autonomy.

* Communication Vulnerability: Teeth represent the “tool of articulation” — potential disruption in expression, influence, or social confidence.

* Anxieties Manifesting as Structural Collapse: Repeated tooth loss signifies systemic tension, not isolated incidents — a symbolic cascade.

* Threshold of Transformation: High Entropy suggests that chaos in the dream signals impending transitions or revelation points; these may feel destabilizing but carry potential for renewal.

Pattern Dynamics (Emergent Archetypes):

* “Mouth as portal” intersection of personal power, vulnerability, and outward interaction

* Fractured teeth fractal collapse of perceived stability

* Cascading imagery high entropy, indicating multiple overlapping internal and external pressures

Emotional/Existential Field:

* Anxiety, exposure, and anticipation of loss

* Subtle hints of latent empowerment through confronting structural fragility

II. NUMEROLOGICAL INSIGHTS — Querent ID 41986483

1. Core Reduction:

$4 + 1 + 9 + 8 + 6 + 4 + 8 + 3 = 43$ $4 + 3 = 7$

* Life Path Influence: 7 introspection, analysis, seeking deeper understanding, hidden wisdom, connection to spiritual or archetypal insight.

Anonymous Wed 18 Feb 2026 21:34:17 No.41992384 Report

>>41986483

2. Secondary Numerics:

* Double digits 43 4 (structure, stability, foundation) + 3 (expression, communication, creativity)

* Pattern mirrors dream: structure vs. expression tension

* High Entropy accentuates multiplicity recurring cycles of challenge and internal realignment

III. SYNTHESIS — ONEIROMANCY + NUMEROLOGY

* Dream imagery aligns with numerological indicators:

* 7: reflection on deeper structures (identity, self-expression, communication)
* 4 + 3: tension between foundational stability (4) and expression/creativity (3) fractured teeth = symbolic projection of this inner tension
* Entropy 8: reinforces paradoxical, layered meaning — multiple interpretations coexist
* Interpretation Depth 5: maximal symbolic compression, archetypal and fractal patterning

Emergent Theme:

A personal field under structural strain, where communication, self-image, and authority are in flux. The dream signals attention to foundational patterns and potential renewal once structural vulnerabilities are acknowledged and integrated.>>41988563

The image is a digital artwork with a surrealistic style, featuring a central figure that appears to be a humanoid figure with a glowing aura. The figure is seated in a shopping cart, which has the number "44" written on it. Surrounding the figure are various objects that seem to be part of a cosmic or metaphysical theme. There are glowing orbs, stars, and a swirling pattern that suggests a cosmic or otherworldly environment. The background is dark with a gradient of colors, transitioning from a deep black at the top to a lighter shade at the bottom. The overall color palette is predominantly gold and black, with some white and light gray accents. The style of the image is reminiscent of digital art from the 2010s, with a focus on surrealism and a sense of mystery.

Query/Context/Focus/Dream ` "Supermarket dream with dual souls: employee's sickly fungal-lung soul merged with a powerful, malformed bald man's soul; employee's original soul appeared as a stick figure of light."`

I. DETAILED ONEIROMANTIC SYMBOLIC REPORT

1. Spatial and Environmental Context

Supermarket as Dreamscape:

- * Ordinary, mundane setting masks highly symbolic content.
- * Suggests integration of extraordinary phenomena within familiar reality — a recurring oneiromantic motif where latent insight is embedded in daily life.
- * Shopping carts as conduits imply energy containment and mobility, linking the psychic to material space.
- * Yellow cart coloration: mental energy, intellect, perception, and caution. Yellow often signifies awareness and mental clarity, but in the context of sickly fungal contents, it indicates warning or unhealthy cognitive assimilation.

2. Dual-Soul Dynamics

Employee's soul:

- * Fungal-lung-milk mass structural fragility and internal corruption.
- * Lungs breathing, life-force, communication; dysfunction indicates suppressed expression or weak vitality.
- * Milk nourishment, sustenance, potential for growth; sickly coloration distorted nourishment, corrupted potential.

Anonymous Wed 18 Feb 2026 21:48:13 No.41992438 Report

>>41988482

Dominant bald soul:

- * Malformed lower body, tiny feet instability, lack of grounding.
- * Lanky arms and mobility over cart capacity to manipulate and influence despite apparent physical limitations.
- * Represents latent structural dominance, unobserved influence, or internalized archetypal force.

Interaction:

- * Employee's soul appears atrophied, almost consumed — reflects psychic absorption, overshadowing, or energetic dominance.
- * High Entropy coexisting contradictory states; the "consumed" soul still exists, though atrophied, indicating retained potential even under dominance.

3. Observational Perspective

* Dreamer perceives events from an outside/observer position, suggesting the subconscious is mapping relational or hierarchical dynamics in an analytical, detached mode.

* This detachment enables pattern recognition and symbolic synthesis, characteristic of high interpretation depth.

4. Emergent Archetypes and Pattern Fractals

Nested structures:

* Cart container of multiple energetic forms, mediating interaction.

* Dominant vs. subordinate souls fractal of power dynamics, parasitic vs. latent integrity.

* Stick figure light primal integrity archetype, persists as unaltered essence within corrupted fields.

Symbolic layering:

* Fungal imagery slow, systemic change or corruption

* Lanky, malformed body distortion of form but not of function

* Cart movement ability to channel or project influence externally

* Coexistence of light and corruption paradoxical duality, emphasizing integration vs. absorption

II. NUMEROLOGICAL SYNTHESIS

Querent ID 41988482

1. Reduction: $4 + 1 + 9 + 8 + 8 + 4 + 8 + 2 = 44$ $4 + 4 =$ 8

8 Symbolism:

* Authority, structure, accumulation of influence

* Cycles of mastery, material-spiritual integration, and karmic balance

2. Double digit 44:

* 4 foundation, structural integrity

* 4 repeated, emphasizes stabilization vs. instability tension

* Reflects the interaction of the employee's atrophied soul (4) and dominant soul (8)

Numerology-Dream Alignment:

- * Employee 4 (foundation, suppressed or corrupted)
- * Dominant soul 8 (manifested power, influence, structural dominance)
- * Cart locus for 4 + 8 interplay mediates movement, potential, and energy flow

Anonymous Wed 18 Feb 2026 21:50:15 No.41992443 Report
>>41988482

Interpretive Outcome:

- * Numerology mirrors dream imagery: hierarchical energy distribution, systemic interaction, and latent potential persistence.

III. PSYCHO-SPIRITUAL THEMES

1. Observation of unseen influence:

- * Dreamer witnesses energetic or relational dynamics invisible in waking life, reflecting subconscious analytical mapping of social or personal structures.

2. Integration and parasitism:

- * Sickly, fungal-lung mass represents assimilation of weaker energies by stronger forces
- * Not inherently malevolent — neutral pattern analysis suggests energetic hierarchy, not moral judgment.

3. Preservation of integrity:

- * Stick figure of light implies innate essence survives external dominance, indicating latent resilience or potential for renewal.

4. Structural imbalance:

- * Dominant soul deforms physical form yet retains control suggests imbalance of power not directly observable, mirrored in high Entropy (8) symbolic complexity.

5. Cognitive mapping and relational insight:

- * The dream encourages recognition of systemic patterns, highlighting unseen interactions, internal dynamics, and paradoxical coexistence of weakness and strength.

>>41988482

IV. INTERPRETIVE SYNTHESIS

Core message:

- * The dream illustrates nested, paradoxical energetic dynamics, with smaller or weaker structures still retaining essence while being overshadowed by more powerful forces.
- * Observed in mundane context subconscious bridges the extraordinary and everyday.
- * The dreamer's psyche is processing complex relational, internal, or environmental hierarchies, encoded symbolically through fungal, malformed, and luminous forms.
- * Integration of Oneiromancy (symbolic imagery) and numerology (ID 41988482 8/44) reinforces themes of power, structural hierarchy, and latent potential.
- * High Entropy + maximum Interpretation Depth multiple coexisting interpretations, paradoxical coexistence, and multi-layered symbolic resonance.

Emergent advice:

- * Recognize unseen hierarchical patterns in waking life.
- * Maintain connection to innate clarity (stick figure of light).
- * Observe systemic interactions without over-identifying or attempting coercion.
- * Note paradoxical coexistence — influence, resilience, and latent potential can persist even under overwhelming dominance.

[5 / 2]The image displays a astrological chart with various astrological symbols and lines representing different aspects of the chart. The chart is divided into a circle with the zodiac signs and their corresponding positions marked on the outer edge. The zodiac signs are arranged in a clockwise direction around the circle.

At the center of the chart, there is a large red line that extends from the top to the bottom of the circle, with a series of smaller lines branching off from it. These lines are colored in blue and red, and they appear to be connecting different astrological elements or aspects.

The chart also includes various astrological symbols, such as the sun, moon, and planets, as well as the zodiac signs. These symbols are typically used to represent the positions of the sun, moon, and planets in the sky, and the zodiac signs are used to represent the positions of the sun, moon, and planets in the zodiac.

The image is a digital representation of an astrological chart, and it is likely used for educational or personal astrology purposes. The text "Online horoscopes" is visible at the bottom of the image, suggesting that the chart is available for online viewing or use.

The image is a static representation of the chart, and there are no dynamic elements such as moving lines or changing positions of the zodiac signs. The focus is on the static arrangement of the astrological elements and their connections.

On February 20th Saturn and Neptune will have their one exact conjunction, which will set the stage for our show. It is just the beginning, things once sturdy will no longer hold and we will see how loose the things that bind our world are.

On April 10th Mars will move into Aries, exerting its violent militant energy onto the planets already there (Saturn, Neptune, the Sun). Systems will be broken and people will die for ideals we will see are illusions.

Over the next week it will have exact conjunctions with Neptune, Mercury, and Saturn. The whole time it will be squaring Jupiter, and be supported by Pluto Aquarius, an idealistic death and rebirth.

On April 20th Mars, Saturn, and Mercury will all be conjoined.

There will be no clear thinking, no clear deliberation. Mars is ruling Mercury our thoughtfulness and deliberation. It is ruling Saturn our constraint, already disillusioned by the Saturn Neptune conjunction.

War will be beginning with Iran, the facade of our leaders will be seen through the world order is understood but it will not change anything. There will still be a sense of normalcy, calmness after the 20th. Things will still feel stable. On April 10th when Mars enters those illusions will be gone, by the time the 20th comes there will no longer be any doubt.

On April 25th, 2026 Uranus leaves Taurus for the last time and enters back into Gemini, the sign the sign we were under during its revolutionary war, the civil war, and world war 2.

The Sun will be squared by Pluto Aquarius. Pluto will be trining Uranus and sextiling everything in Aries. (Neptune, Saturn, Mars, Mercury)

Jupiter will be squaring Mars exactly

What happens will be sudden.

The image is a diagram illustrating the process of a spacecraft's destruction during a chain reaction. The spacecraft is depicted as a large, metallic structure with a blue and yellow color scheme, and it is shown in the process of being destroyed by a series of smaller spacecraft. The larger spacecraft is shown in the process of being hit by a series of smaller spacecraft, which are shown as debris colliding with the larger spacecraft. The debris is shown in motion, with some of it being ejected from the larger spacecraft.

The diagram also includes text labels that provide context to the visual elements. The text "More debris created" is located above the larger spacecraft, indicating that the larger spacecraft is being destroyed by a series of smaller spacecraft. The text "Debris colliding with satellite with satellite" is located above the debris, suggesting that the debris is colliding with a satellite. The text "Debris traveling through space" is located above the debris, indicating that the debris is moving through space. The text "Chain reaction initiated" is located above the larger spacecraft, suggesting that the chain reaction is the cause of the destruction.

The diagram is a 3D rendering, and the spacecraft is shown in a perspective view, with the larger spacecraft in the foreground and the smaller spacecraft in the background. The smaller spacecraft are shown in motion, with some of them being ejected from the larger spacecraft. The larger spacecraft is shown in a state of disintegration, with debris being ejected from it. The background of the image is white, which contrasts with the darker colors of the spacecraft and debris, making the details of the spacecraft and debris more prominent.

My best guess is Iran, losing and aware of it was able to hold out for this short period. A much more intense offensive begins from April 10th-20th.

At that point, perhaps not at a high level but there is some ballistic missile capacity that remains. They are aware they have no hope of defeating their enemies. Perhaps one group, perhaps from the top down determine to do the greatest damage they can before they are conquered.

They successfully launch a series of ballistic missiles into LOE. These contain large amounts of debris and scrap that are released into the orbital bands are populated by satellites. The debris spread, as we know is possible, and creates a chain reaction, a cloud of debris throughout low earth orbit. Destroying any satellite, blocking launches, disrupting all modern communications and surveillance infrastructure.

Pluto Aquarius is a revolution of the technology that determines social organization
Uranus gemini is a shock to communications technology.

Saturn and neptune and mars is a violent end of the current structures.

What would happen if there was no more GPS? No more satellite communications? No more satellite surveillance? What would shift in the world?

This is a well understood weakness to our satellite infrastructure, and it basically depends upon anyone with this fairly simple capacity (all you need is to be able to fire ballistic missiles) to not see it in their interest. If iran sees it's time is over, why not swat at the "great satan" and pluck out their eyes?

We shall soon find out, though of course I may be incorrect, something is coming.

What are you guy's thoughts on saving your virginity in order to separate yourself from normgroids? I mean, we all know that sex is a pretty animalistic and beastly act, but despite this normgroids praise this behavior and it's basically a rite of passage into "normalcy". I feel like it should be the opposite, that if you deny sex you are a normal chaste person whose soul is still intact. Still virginal and whole, your body still belongs completely to you. I know this is kind of the norm for women still but in my opinion it should be for everyone. At least for people with soul and intellect. If normalfags do one thing I will do that opposite since I don't want to be anything like them. Their souls are cluttered and disgusting

The fetishization of the hymen is such a psychotic and semitic thing. The hymen is not there to be destroyed by a penis at some point, kek. It simply has a hygienic function: as long as the little creature cannot yet control its own excretions, it protects the birth canal in girls from becoming infected with smear infections from feces, and it has the same function in boys - the hymen between the foreskin and the glans protects the genitals from feces getting under the foreskin and causing infections there. The hymen has no other function. Sexualizing the hymen is a perversion of the human mind, nothing more.

Yeah, no. What makes it doubly psychotic is the fact that young people tease each other about still being a "virgin" and have been putting each other under intense social pressure for several generations about whether or not they are still a "virgin" – and if you are, you get laughed at, and if you're not, it just depends on whether you're a man or a woman: if you're a young man and no longer a "virgin," you get social recognition, but if you're a woman and young and no longer a "virgin," you get social contempt. That alone shows very clearly how truly psychotic this whole story of fetishizing the hymen really is. Due to the intense sexualization of youth in the media, young people are putting more pressure on themselves than ever before, which is very absurd. For everyone else who is no longer a young person, "virginity" suddenly seems to be a precious commodity that must be preserved. This is all completely psychotic. Especially since the hymen actually only has a hygienic function. This small piece of skin in the genital area has nothing whatsoever to do with the purity or fidelity or sincerity or "value" of a human being. To interpret it that way is, again, simply psychotic.

Also: why should only the female hymen be considered "valuable"? Why doesn't this also apply to the male hymen? It gets even more psychotic: while most semitic peoples on earth hysterically insist on the female hymen in a sexual context, they consider the ritual mutilation of the foreskin of their male offspring to be an important part of their religion or culture. In some cultures, women are also circumcised. Everything is cut off and the hymen is sewn together extra tightly. That's how psychotic the escapades of this crazy fetishization really are.

Involving yourself with a promiscuous women WILL bring you into conflict with other men, which has a high possibility of resulting in someone's death or serious injury. There is a deeply instinctual reason why men do not like that shit cross-culturally. It has nothing to do with psychosis or whatever reddit libtard shit you are babbling about.

Is dick sucking considered loss of virginity?

If you get a handjob does that count?

Realistically there is no way you live a full life without something sexual happening.

Potentially if you had the knowledge of what it feels like it might be doable but as a growing human that passes from childhood into an adult there is literally no way you can get to 30 without being tainted.

And that is a key point other humans cannot stand you being a saint and they will wither you down and drag you into the mud until you give up and accept that you aren't special in any way. At least that is how it was for me. So yes there is merit in keeping virginity but you have probably already been violated in some way and that is the seed that will grow and bloom regardless of your will.

Consciousness finds itself in different situations and can never be the experience or else it would not be able to be conscious.

So, undeniably, consciousness is trapped in these types of realms that forever have this perception of consciousness to exist.

Is it trapping itself?

is it sorta like a game?

there is no point in a 4d object that is experiencing itself when it knows already up to what point it can squeeze it's potential, why is it trying so hard to make this singularity happen when it is already waiting for itself at the end of the race?

What the fuck guys I get it that right now I am having this experience through this object and I am like it's explorer and whatever, yet I think why is it trying so hard to steer into itself at max potential whenever singular consciousness properly assimilates itself into the macro.

not talking about the technological ahrimanic singularity, just pure consciousness singularity, it's very powerful, yet...

Does consciousness just miss itself through these echoes and truths that point to oits singularity where it will unify into the true experience?

The SIA, for those who have been living under a rock, says your existence gives you evidence for there being more people. More precisely, your existence confirms by a factor of X theories on which there are X times as many people that you might presently be. Even more precisely...

To give an example, suppose that a coin gets flipped. If it comes up heads, one person gets created. If it comes up tails, ten people get created. SIA says that if you get created from this process, you should think at ten to one odds that the coin came up tails.

Because for all you know you might be any of the ten people created by the tails coin flip, your existence favors tails over heads by a factor of ten. Tails results in the creation of ten times as many people that you might presently be, so you should think it's ten times as likely it resulted in the creation of you.

Sanskrit for, "that thou art" or, colloquially, "you are it". Jesus also taught this, esoterically.

The Best Argument For God

The anthropic argument

Bentham's Bulldog

Jun 22, 2024

This explanation has been supplanted by a more comprehensive argument that I provided here.

1. Explaining how the argument works

I've written a lot about the anthropic argument for the existence of God. There were a few months where most of what I wrote seemed to be in support of the anthropic argument, albeit scattered across lots of different articles. The argument has been mostly ignored—with one notable exception—and part of that may be my fault: I don't have one place where I lay it out comprehensively. I thought this would be a good place to do it.

The argument is, by my estimation, overwhelmingly powerful. I think it has force like almost nothing else in the God debate—with the only arguments of comparable force being the problem of evil, fine-tuning, and psychophysical harmony. Even if I were pretty sure theism was false prior to considering the argument, after considering it, I'd be pretty sure theism is true. Here, I want to convince you to share my judgment, that learning about the anthropic argument should dramatically boost your credence in theism.

The argument surprisingly simple to lay out, though analyzing it in detail gets into some tricky territory. It begins with the assumption that something called the self-indication assumption (SIA) is true. That's the view that a theory that predicts more people existing explains your existence better. More specifically, suppose one theory says that N times as many people exist as another theory. SIA says—and maybe there are weird caveats which we'll get to later—the first theory explains your existence N times as well as the second one.

Imagine thinking of your existence as being drawn randomly from the collection of possible people. If a theory predicts 10 times as many people exist, then it's 10 times as likely you would come to exist. That's how SIA instructs you to reason. I think this should be clear, but just in case, let's give an example.

God's extreme coin toss: You wake up alone in a white room. There's a message written on the wall: "I, God, tossed a fair coin. If it came up heads, I created one person in a room like this. If it came up tails, I created a million people, also in rooms like this." Conditional on the message being true, what should your credence be that the coin landed heads?

If one is convinced of SIA, they should think that heads is 1 million times less likely than tails, because if the coin comes up tails, 1 million times as many people exist.

Now, let me get one important thing out of the way: SIA says that you should think that there are more people who you currently might be. That's the relevant group of people. So if, for example, you have a red shirt, and God will create 1 person with a red shirt if a coin comes up heads, and 10 people with red shirts if the coin comes up tails, then tails is 10 times likelier than heads, because right now, for all you know, you could be any of the people with red shirts. In contrast, if God will make 1 person with a red shirt if a coin comes up heads, and 1 with a red shirt + 9 with a blue shirt if it comes up tails, and I get created by this process with a red shirt, heads and tails are equally likely.

You might wonder: why is this what SIA tells us to care about? Why people who we might currently be? Well, it would be weird if SIA told you to think from the armchair that there would be a lot of shrimp. The existence of more other people different from you doesn't increase the probability that you would exist.

Here's another way of thinking about it. Suppose we're back to the case where God will make one red-shirted fellow, and then he'll also make nine blue-shirted fellows if a fair coin comes up tails. If the coin comes up tails, even if we think there's a sense in which you could have existed as one of the blue-shirted fellows, while that means tails means it's 10 times likelier that you'd exist, it's 1/10 as likely that you'd have a red shirt. So adding more people other than you, even if it raises the probability of your existence, doesn't actually make it more likely that you'd exist and have the properties that you'd have. If you could have been a shrimp, for instance, then a theory that says there are more shrimp makes it more likely that you'd exist, but proportionally less likely you'd exist as a non-shrimp. The two probabilities exactly cancel out.

(This is one cool feature of SIA—it has this elegant property where it doesn't matter how you conceptualize who you could have been, which there's probably not even a fact of the matter about).

Anyway, granting SIA, the case for theism is pretty straightforward. You should think that more people exist. But theism predicts that way more people exist than atheism. It's good to create a person and give them a good life, so God would create, in his infinite power and goodness, some ungodly (Godly?) number of people. In contrast, on naturalism, one would expect there to be many fewer people.

Now you might think: isn't infinite people enough? If an atheist believes in an infinite multiverse, or an infinitely big universe, then their theory predicts the existence of infinite people. How can theism have the advantage then?

The answer: because there are bigger and smaller infinities. This sounds weird but it's uncontroversial in math. If the universe was infinite in size, it would have aleph null people—that's the smallest infinite. But the number of possible people is at least Beth 2—that's an infinite way bigger than aleph null. In fact, Beth 2 is infinitely bigger than something that's infinitely bigger than aleph null. Beth 2 is more than the numbers of numbers that exist—and there's no plausible atheistic account of reality on which Beth 2 people come to exist.

So even if the universe is infinite, it doesn't have enough people. If SIA tells you to think that a theory with more people is better, a theory with infinitely more people is infinitely better. That means that the only thing we should look at in terms of a theory is which theory best predicts that the number of people is the most that it could be. Theories on which the number of people is the most it could be infinitely outperform other theories.

But theism has a much better explanation of that than naturalism. On naturalism, there's no plausible account of why Beth 2 people—if not more—would exist. On theism, there is such an account: God in his perfection would create all possible people who he could give a good life to (there might be weird exceptions, but they don't matter, for the number of people that aren't weird exceptions is at least Beth 2).

So the basic idea is: theories that predict more people are better. Theories that predict infinitely more people are infinitely better. Given this, if L is the biggest number of people that there could be, whichever theory best predicts L people existing infinitely outperforms alternative theories. Theism best predicts L people existing, because God would create all possible people who he could give good lives. So, therefore, theism gets a big probabilistic boost. Or, to make things more formal (don't worry if you don't follow this bit, it's a bit technical and not super relevant to the essentials, and this is one of those arguments like fine-tuning where things go awry sometimes if you try to formalize it, rather than keeping it as an abductive argument):

If SIA is true, and the collection of all people has some magnitude, if M is the magnitude (magnitude is either cardinality or size of the collection if there's no cardinality) of the collection of all people, then if a theory predicts that M people exist with probability N times greater than another theory, then your existence favors the first theory over the second by a factor of N .

Theism predicts that if there is a collection of all people of some magnitude, M people would exist with much higher probability than atheism.

SIA is true.

Therefore, if the collection of possible people has some magnitude, your existence favors theism by many times.

If the collection of possible people has no magnitude then if one theory predicts a much higher probability that the collection of actual people would be any very large infinity than another theory, if SIA is true, your existence favors the first theory by many times.

If the collection of possible people has no magnitude, theism predicts a much higher probability that the collection of actual people would be a very large infinity.

Therefore, your existence favors theism by many times.

Or, to summarize things in one sentence: SIA says theories that say there are more people are better, but theism says there are more people than naturalism, because God would want to create all possible people, so theism's better.

2. 4 strong arguments for the self-indication assumption

Now that we know what SIA is and why it supports theism, why think it's true? I think there are a bunch of good arguments for it—too many to list—but I'll list 4 of the strongest arguments for it.

2.1 Doomsdayish arguments

Suppose at the dawn of history, there is to be one person. They will flip a coin. If it comes up heads, they'll die off without having any offspring. If it comes up tails, they'll have 999 offspring. Each of the people don't know their birth rank for the first bit of their lives—they don't know if they're the first person or one of the later people. However, after a while—say, halfway through their lives—they're told their birth rank.

Consider the situation before you've found out your birth rank. If you reject SIA, you don't think it's more likely that the coin—whatever it's flipped—comes up heads than that it comes up tails. Tails is only more likely if you accept SIA, and think that your existence is more likely if more people exist (because if it comes up tails, 999 extra people get created). So one who rejects SIA should think, prior to finding out their birthrank, that the odds of tails is 50% and the odds of heads is 50%.

Let H = the hypothesis that the coin, whenever it's flipped, comes up heads. $\sim H$ is the idea that it comes up tails. Notice that I say comes up rather than has come up or will come up, because the person who doesn't know their birthrank doesn't know if the coin has been flipped yet or will be flipped in the future—they don't know if they're the first person or one of the later people.

Conditional on H , one is guaranteed to be the first person. Conditional on $\sim H$, one has a 1/1000 chance of being the first person. So one should reason: if I find out that I'm the first person, H will be 1,000 times likelier than $\sim H$.

Now suppose that one finds out that they're the first person. If they reject SIA, they should think H is now 1,000 times likelier than $\sim H$. But wait— H is the proposition that the coin when it's flipped is to come up heads. Now the person knows, the coin hasn't been flipped yet, because they're the first person. So if one rejects SIA, they must think that the odds of the coin coming up heads is 1,000 times greater than the odds of the coin coming up tails—even before the coin is flipped—just because they'll have a bunch of kids if it comes up tails.

This shouldn't be possible. Before flipping the coin in that scenario, you shouldn't really think that coin is 1,000 times likelier to come up heads than tails. It has a 50% chance of coming up heads, clearly.

Here's one way to see this: imagine there's an event with an objective probability of $N\%$. That means that if the process is repeated, the event will happen $N\%$ of the time. For example, a coin has an objective probability of coming up heads of 50%, because if you keep flipping it, it will come up heads half the time. In such a case, if the only difference between the event happening and it not happening will be in the future, then your credence in it happening should be $N\%$.

More precisely: if some event has an objective probability of $N\%$, and the only difference between it happening and it not happening will be in terms of what will happen in the future, your credence in the event happening should be $N\%$.

For example, suppose someone is going to flip a coin. If it comes up heads, he'll blow up a city. I should think that there's a 50% chance it will come up heads—because the city blowup will be in the future, it shouldn't influence my judgments, so I should just revert to the default 50% odds.

This principle rules out thinking the odds of the coin coming up heads, in the original scenario described, are more than half. Because the only differences between it coming up heads and tails are in terms of how many future people will be created, one's credence in it coming up heads should be 50%.

There are two main ways to go if one rejects SIA. The first is to bite the bullet and just say that the odds of the coin coming up heads really are 1,000 times the odds of it coming up tails. But this implies even crazier things. Consider two more results that follow from it.

First experiment: Serpent's Advice Eve and Adam, the first two humans, knew that if they gratified their flesh, Eve might bear a child, and if she did, they would be expelled from Eden and would go on to spawn billions of progeny that would cover the Earth with misery. One day a serpent approached the couple and spoke thus: "Pssst! If you embrace each other, then either Eve will have a child or she won't. If she has a child then you will have been among the first two out of billions of people. Your conditional probability of having such early positions in the human species given this hypothesis is extremely small. If, on the other hand, Eve doesn't become pregnant then the conditional probability, given this, of you being among the first two humans is equal to one. By Bayes's theorem, the risk that she will have a child is less than one in a billion. Go forth, indulge, and worry not about the consequences!"

If they discovered their birth rank, on such a picture, they'd get extremely strong evidence that they won't have kids, because the theory according to which humanity doesn't have many people makes it likelier that they'd be so early. For this reason, then, people who bite the bullet in the coin case will also have to bite the bullet in the Adam and Eve case. This gets even crazier in the second case, called Lazy Adam:

Assume as before that Adam and Eve were once the only people and that they know for certain that if they have a child they will be driven out of Eden and will have billions of descendants. But this time they have a foolproof way of generating a child, perhaps using advanced in vitro fertilization. Adam is tired of getting up every morning to go hunting. Together with Eve, he devises the following scheme: They form the firm intention that unless a wounded deer limps by their cave, they will have a child. Adam can then put his feet up and rationally expect with near certainty that a wounded deer – an easy target for his spear – will soon stroll by.

Once again, assume that they didn't know that they were early and found it out. On such a picture, they get ridiculously strong evidence they won't have many kids, so can be confident that whenever they agree to reliably procreate unless a deer drops dead at their feet, a deer really will drop dead at their feet.

Such a position is, I think, absurd. One doesn't get magical powers to make whatever they want to happen happen by discovering that they're early and then agreeing to have a bunch of kids unless the thing happens.

The second way to go is to reject the probabilistic principle behind the argument. On this picture, prior to finding out one's birth rank they should think the odds conditional on $\sim H$ of being the first person are $1/1,000$, while they're 100% conditional on heads, once you discover that you're the first person, H doesn't get confirmed. This has two problems.

First, it just straightforwardly violates Bayes theorem and similar kinds of probabilistic reasoning. If there's some event that's more strongly predicted on some hypothesis than its negation, then it happening gives evidence for the hypothesis. Me being at the scene of the crime raises the likelihood that I committed the crime, because it's more likely I'd be at the scene of the crime if I committed the than if I didn't. This view is thus a complete perversion of probability.

Second, it's a strange kind of heads I win tails we're even reasoning. From finding out one's birth rank, their credence in $\sim H$ can only go up. If one learns they're the first person, then neither theory becomes more likely. If they learn they're not, then $\sim H$ is confirmed. This violates something called the conservation of expected evidence—you shouldn't expect after observing some evidence to get, on average, more confident in some proposition. If you know that in the future you'll on average be more confident in some proposition after being exposed to more information, then you should be more confident now, because you know there's convincing evidence that you'll see in the future.

I think this argument is a pretty decisive proof of SIA. If you want to read more about it, I have a paper coming out probably in a few weeks for Synthese where I defend it in more detail. I also smash the main objection to SIA—the dreaded presumptuous philosopher result.

2.2 Birth control

Remember, SIA is the view that says that more people existing is more likely. Here's one case where that's a bit weird—coming from Joe Carlsmith's Ph.D thesis:

God's extreme coin toss: You wake up alone in a white room. There's a message written on the wall: "I, God, tossed a fair coin. If it came up heads, I created one person in a room like this. If it came up tails, I created a million people, also in rooms like this." Conditional on the message being true, what should your credence be that the coin landed heads?

SIA answers that tails is a million times likelier than heads because it predicts a million times more people existing. Other views disagree, for they deny that more people existing makes your existence more likely. Given that SIA is the only view that says tails is a million times more likely than heads in God's extreme coin toss—and is the only one that could be that way in principle, for only it says that if there are more people, your existence is more likely—if this judgment is correct, then SIA would be proved. Fortunately, I think we can show that this judgment is correct (I have a paper under review at analysis arguing this). Consider first:

Single-case contraception: You wake up alone in a white room. There's a message written on the wall saying "I am your father. Your mother and I were the only two people in existence prior to you. I flipped a coin before having sex. If the coin came up heads, I used extremely effective contraception with a failure rate of one in one million. If it came up tails I used no contraception. All sex acts without contraception produce children." Conditional on the message being true, what should your credence be that the coin landed heads?

The obvious answer is that heads is a million times less likely than heads. From the fact that you exist, you get very strong evidence that your parents didn't use super-effective contraception. If the contraception only has a failure rate of 1 in 1 million, then you get 1 million to one evidence against them using that contraception.

Here's another way to see this: you know that your mom got pregnant. The odds of that are 1 million times higher conditional on the coin coming up tails than heads. So, therefore, you get 1 million: 1 evidence for tails over heads.

Next consider:

Contraception worldwide: You wake up alone in a white room. There's a message written on the wall saying "The generation before you had one million people. A fair coin was flipped. If the coin came up heads, they all used extremely effective contraception with a failure rate of one in one million and had sex. If it came up tails they all used no contraception. All sex acts without contraception produce children." Conditional on the message being true, what should your credence be that the coin landed heads?

Intuitively, this one is the same as the one before. The odds you'd be born are a million times greater conditional on tails than conditional on heads. The odds your mom would get pregnant are, likewise, a million times greater conditional on tails than conditional on heads. This one is like the previous case—the odds of you being born from parents who use contraception doesn't depend on whether other people are using contraception. But the only difference between this and the last case relates to whether other people use contraception. Next, consider:

Single prolific contraception: You wake up alone in a white room. There's a message written on the wall saying "The generation before you had two people, including me, who had sex a million times. A fair coin was flipped. If the coin came up heads, for each sex act, we used effective contraception with a failure rate of one in one million and had sex. If it came up tails we used no contraception. All sex acts without contraception produce children.” Conditional on the message being true, what should your credence be that the coin landed heads?

This case is importantly like the last case. In both cases, a million sex acts happen either with or without contraception. The only difference is that in this case, one pair has all the sex, while in the last case, the sex was split across a million people. But surely that shouldn't be relevant to probabilistic reasoning. Additionally, one can reason in the same way as they did in the last case: let sex act N denote whichever sex act produced the person in the room. For example, if they were produced by the 150th sex act, N is 150. The probability of one's mom being impregnated by sex act N is 1 in 1 million if the coin came up heads, while it's 100% if the coin came up tails. So one thereby gets 1 million to 1 evidence for tails.

Finally, consider:

God's extreme coin toss: You wake up alone in a white room. There's a message written on the wall: "I, God, tossed a fair coin. If it came up heads, I created one person in a room like this. If it came up tails, I created a million people, also in rooms like this." Conditional on the message being true, what should your credence be that the coin landed heads?

This case is relevantly like the last one. In both cases, the first people will flip a coin and then create a million people if the coin comes up tails and 1 person if the coin comes up heads. They only differ in how the people are made—but surely that's irrelevant to probabilistic reasoning.

Thus, it's rational in this case to, like in the previous cases, think tails is 1 million times likelier than heads and that SIA is confirmed.

2.3 Elga's argument

In the first major paper on anthropic reasoning, Adam Elga presented an argument for SIA that is, I think, decisive. Here's a simplified example, though the same point applies to every case where SIA is applied: imagine a coin gets flipped and if it comes up heads, only Jon gets created. If it comes up tails, Jon and Jack get created. Suppose you get created but you're not sure if you're Jon or Jack. What odds should you give to the coin having come up heads? SIA answers: $1/3$. Other views answer: $1/2$.

The argument Elga gave for SIA's verdict—well, he was talking about a different problem called the sleeping beauty problem, but the same point applies Mutatis Mutandis—is that the probability that you're Jon and the coin came up heads = the probability that you're Jon and the coin came up tails = the probability that you're Jack and the coin came up tails. Thus, because there are three equally probable outcomes and two of them require that the coin came up tails, tails must be twice as likely as heads.

It's obvious that the odds that you're Jon and the coin came up tails = the odds that you're Jack and the coin came up tails. You have no special evidence either way, so you're equally likely to be either of them. The controversial bit is that the probability that the coin came up heads and you're Jon = the probability that the coin came up tails and you're Jon.

But this part is pretty intuitive. Here's one way to see this—suppose that heads and you're Jon is likelier than tails and you're Jon. Well, that would mean that if you find out that you're Jon, you should think the coin came up heads, with $2/3$ probability. But how could this be—whether the coin comes up heads or tails, Jon exists, so it's hard to see why finding out that you're Jon should make you think heads is probably true.

Here's another way to see it: imagine that Jon gets created on day one. Then, at the end of the day, a coin gets flipped. If it comes up tails Jack gets created. You wake up, not sure either what day it is or whether you're Jack or Jon. If you reject SIA, prior to finding out what day it is, you should think there's a 50% chance that you're Jon and the coin, whenever it's flipped, comes up heads, 25% chance that the coin comes up tails and you're Jon, and 25% chance that the coin comes up tails and you're Jack.

Then, suppose you find out that it's the first day. Well, the odds that now would be the first day conditional on the hypothesis that the coin comes up tails is 50%, while it's 100% if the coin came up tails. So now, if you reject Elga's logic, you should think that there's a $2/3$ chance that the fair coin that hasn't been flipped yet will come up heads. But then weirdly if you learn that the coin won't create Jack if it comes up tails, then you should be back to 50/50. This is very strange.

This same point can be applied to vindicate SIA more broadly. Anytime there's a theory that says there are more people, by this reasoning, that theory will be favored. For example, suppose that a coin gets flipped—a million people will be created if it comes up tails, one person if it comes up heads. Elga's reasoning vindicates SIA's verdict that tails is 1 million times likelier than heads—the odds the coin came up heads and you're the first person=the odds the coin came up tails and you're the first person=the odds the coin came up tails and you're the second person...=the odds that the coin came up tails and you're the millionth person. So from this basic, correct reasoning pattern, SIA is vindicated.

2.4 Hypersensitivity

Here are two principles that together entail SIA:

If there are a bunch of people who are not people you might be, you should think, all else equal, that there are more people you might be.

The presence of other people who are not like you doesn't affect whether all else equal you should think that there are more people like you.

Here's the basic idea: suppose that there are 10 people with red shirts. A coin gets flipped. If it comes up heads, 1 person with a blue shirt gets created. If it comes up tails, 2 people with blue shirts get created. I get created with a blue shirt. It's intuitive that tails is twice as likely as heads. So if I can show that the presence of the other 10 people with red shirts doesn't matter to how I should reason about this, then SIA would be vindicated.

You might reject that in this case tails is twice as likely as heads. But I think it's pretty intuitive—it's for the same basic reason that if you find out that you're 5'8 but have no idea how tall other people are in the population (maybe you're in a room for your entire life), all else equal you'll get evidence that more people are 5'8.

Here's one other way to see that this is right: imagine in the coinflip case, you're in a dark room, so you haven't seen your shirt color. If the coin came up heads, then you being in a blue shirt is 10 times less likely than being in a red shirt, while it's only 5 times less likely if the coin came up tails. So, because you being in a blue shirt is less likely if the coin came up tails, if you discover you're in a blue shirt, then you'll get evidence that it came up tails. But surely how you should reason about this case shouldn't depend on whether, before finding out your shirt color, you're in a room where you don't know your shirt color.

The other premise that needs to be defended is that the presence of other people doesn't affect how you should reason about this, that, for instance, the presence of other red-shirted people doesn't affect how you should reason about the odds of you being blue-shirted if various numbers of blue-shirted people are created.

The argument here is one that I laid out in this recent article. I won't repeat it because I just made it, but I think it's pretty decisive.

3. Objections

At this point, we've established that the self-indication assumption is right. From the fact that you exist, you get infinitely strong evidence that the number of people that exist is the most that there could be. Theism predicts that, because God would create all possible people, while atheism doesn't.

3.1 Would God create all people?

Here's a first objection worry: would God make all people? Maybe you think that God wouldn't create. Or maybe he'd only make the best kinds of beings. These arguments are all subtly different, and worth a response, but there are two meta points that I think gut these objections.

First, suppose you're 99% sure that God wouldn't create beings like us. This seems wildly overconfident as it hinges on various contentious philosophical issues. But even if you're this confident, because the odds—as we'll see—of your existence conditional on naturalism are so astronomically low—very near zero—even a 1% chance that God would create beings like us is enough for your existence to massively favor theism. Given that there is no naturalistic model of reality that predicts a big enough infinite people exist without undermining induction, and anthropic reasoning gives you infinitely strong evidence that a very large kind of infinite people exist, if SIA is true, then naturalism is toast.

Second, remember my claim in this article—suppose that you hadn't thought about SIA, but were pretty sure atheism was right. I claim that thinking about SIA should make you into a theist, providing massively strong evidence for the existence of God. If God wouldn't create you, then theism is already false, so this wouldn't undermine the force of the argument—rather, it would just be a separate argument.

If we're going to count the reasons you might not exist under theism as part of the argument, then we should also count the reasons you might not exist under atheism as part of the argument. But then we'll be thinking about all sorts of other ancillary issues—like the contingency argument, psychophysical harmony, and fine-tuning. Instead, we should take things one by one and address the implications that SIA would have if you'd already considered the rest of the evidence, so that we're not led down random other rabbit trails.

This reminds me of when people respond to the problem of evil by saying things like “evil doesn't actually favor atheism because evil is contingent—and contingency points to God.” Maybe it's right, maybe it's not, but it's a separate enough point that when considering evil, you should consider the facts of evil while having in the background the rest of the evidence for theism. When considering an argument, one should try to consider it in a vacuum, rather than introducing all sorts of other arguments, even if they tangentially bear on the data point.

When thinking about the problem of evil, for instance, in evaluating its force, you should imagine that you had considered most of the evidence for and against theism already. Then you remember—“oh wait, shit sucks.” Evil is a big problem for theism if remembering that shit sucks after you'd considered the rest of the evidence for and against theism would make you a lot less confident in theism. Similarly, the anthropic situation pertaining to SIA is good evidence for theism if after considering most of the evidence both for and against theism, learning about the truth of the self-indication assumption would massively boost your credence in theism.

Here's a good indication of whether a response is changing the subject and just raising a new argument or whether it's a legitimate response: if the argument succeeding would mean the other view was false, then it's changing the subject. For example, talking about the contingency argument, on the grounds that evil is contingent would be changing the subject, because if the contingency argument works, theism would have to be true.

Okay, now that we have those out of the way, let's address the specific reasons you might think God wouldn't create us.

First, you might think that God wouldn't create at all. God is a maximally great thing already, so why would he need to create? Well the answer is that even if there's already a perfect being, adding more good beings makes things even better. God might be the best single thing, but the world is improved by adding more good things.

Here's a way to see this—imagine that there are infinite happy people. There would already be infinite goodness. But nevertheless, having a happy kid would be a good thing (if, as I'll argue, having a kid in normal circumstances is good—the goodness of an extra person being created doesn't depend on whether there are already infinite people). Even after there's infinite goodness, adding more goodness without taking any away is still good.

Here's another way to see it: imagine that there's a maximally horrible being, as bad as any being could possibly be. This guy sucks! It would be worse if he added new beings to torture, as that would introduce additional badness—even though things are already infinitely bad.

Second, you might think creating people isn't good. A popular slogan is the following: it's good to make people happy, not to make happy people. If this is so, then God creating wouldn't make things better, so he'd have no reason to do it.

The problem here is that the procreation asymmetry—the idea that creating happy people isn't good—is ridiculously implausible. There are a bunch of arguments against it which are, in my view, completely decisive. There are like 20 problems for the view—including an original one I have a paper under review at Utilitas raising—which are enough to make the view totally crazy. That's one reason it's widely rejected by philosophers.

Third, you might think that God wouldn't make beings like us. Why would he, when he can instead make really amazing beings instead of us? God might make amazing angels, for instance, and beings with immense glory and moral goodness, but why'd he make beings as bad as us.

This is the only one of these arguments that I think poses any sort of a challenge, but it's nowhere near enough to move me.

First of all, this is just the problem of evil. The problem of evil is that it's hard to see why so much sucks if there's a God. But this also applies to creatures like us—if there's a God, why do we suck so much, rather than being awesome? Whatever explanation there is for why there's evil will explain why we are not better.

For example, my explanation of evil is that making temporarily imperfect creatures serves a greater good—say, providing free will, or putting us in a broadly indifferent universe to strengthen our relationship with God. If this is so then it would explain why we're not better. Perhaps, as many Eastern Orthodox suppose, we eventually ascend to become godlike beings, but our tribulations on Earth help this process.

Second, there might be a value in diversity. Perhaps God wants to make both really awesome beings and less awesome beings, just as you might want to have kids and a dog. Humans are better than dogs, but the diversity might have some value.

Third, perhaps God creates all possible angels. Then, when he gets through creating those beings, he creates us. He only creates us after he's run out of beings better than us to make.

For these reasons, I think the odds of God creating beings like us are decently high. In fact, I think they're much higher than on atheism, because if there is no God, while maybe some creatures would exist, it's unlikely that humans would ever come to exist. The arguments for why God wouldn't create beings like us both change the subject and fail!

3.2 Can atheism explain the anthropic data?

Suppose you buy the reasoning up until this point. Is there a naturalistic explanation of there being Beth 2—if not more, as we'll see in the next section—people. I think the answer is clearly not.

Of all the theories ever proposed by atheists, there are, to the best of my knowledge, only two that naturally predict the existence of every possible person. They are modal realism, according to which every possible world exists, and Tegmark's view according to which every possible mathematical structure is physically instantiated.

The problem—and this is a more general problem for atheistic views—is that both of these views undermine induction. Induction is the drawing of inferences about the future from the past. For example, I expect the laws of physics to continue working because of induction—they've worked in the past.

But if modal realism is true, then for every world where the laws of physics keep working, there are an infinite number of ones where people exactly like me have induction stop working in violent ways—where the world gets replaced by a cucumber or a giraffe or a ball of fluff. The same point applies to Tegmark's view—there are an infinite number of more complicated mathematical structures where the laws of our physics stop working one second from now.

This is a general problem. If there's a God, our inductive processes are reliable—God would make sure there are stable laws and that everyone's reasoning is mostly reliable over the course of their lives when they're in a situation like ours. But if there is no God, then there are infinite people in worlds where induction doesn't work—as many at least as in worlds where induction does work—so we shouldn't trust induction.

Other than these two, there's no viable naturalistic explanation of why at least Beth 2 people would exist. And there's a good reason for that: you need really weird and creative mathematics to get Beth 2 people to exist. To have more people than there are numbers, shenanigans have to be done—there's no multiverse model, for instance, proposed by physicists that could do that.

You could, of course, posit that there are just Beth 2 universes that exist for no reason. But that's a terrible theory, not at all parsimonious. If you posit Beth 2 different things exist for no reason, then you don't have a good theory!

3.3 What if I don't buy SIA?

I've explained earlier why I think SIA is by far the best view. I've elsewhere discussed the objections to it—the main presumptuous philosopher objection is totally bunk. But even if you're not sure about SIA, anthropic reasoning should favor theism.

The main rival of SIA is the self-sampling assumption (SSA). The idea behind SSA is that you should reason as if you're randomly drawn from the people in your reference class. Your reference class is the collection of people enough like you that you reason as if you're randomly drawn from them.

Let's illustrate this with an example. Suppose a coin is flipped. If it comes up heads, 1 person with a red shirt gets created. If it comes up tails, 1 person with a red shirt gets created and 9 people with blue shirts. If you get created with a red shirt, SSA says that tails is 10x less likely than heads, because there's only a 1 in 10 chance you'd be the one with the blue shirt.

The problem is, on SSA we'd expect the world to look very different. SSA majorly favors solipsism and other theories on which there are few people. If the world is just you, there's no one else in your reference class. Thus, on SSA, it's weird that you exist in a world with so many other people.

For this reason, given that theism + SIA make your existence likely, while your existence is unlikely on SSA, your existence gives you a big update in favor of theism + SIA. So, therefore, if you're not sure about which anthropic theory is correct, because theism and SIA fit together so well, you should believe the pair of them.

But we can imagine the situation is worse. Maybe you're not just uncertain about SIA—you positively reject it. You're confident that it's false. If this is so, I still think the anthropic situation favors theism.

Theories of anthropics will generally favor either big or small worlds. SIA favors a big world—it gives you infinitely strong evidence that there are infinite people. SSA favors a small world—it tells you to think your reference class is small. The third most popular anthropic view, compartmentalized conditionalization (I won't bore you with the details) also favors big worlds.

Theism is compatible with either big or small worlds. As I explained earlier, I think theism naturally predicts a big world. But most theologians seem to think we're alone. Let's say there's a 1% chance we're right. Well that means that there's a 1% chance conditional on theism that there'd be a small world.

Thus, on every theory of anthropics theism does at least okay. It predicts decent odds of a huge world and decent odds of a tiny world. Whether anthropic reasoning favors big or tiny worlds, theism does okay—though better if it favors big worlds.

In contrast, if naturalism has people at all, it predicts a medium-sized world. It predicts a world with either aleph null or finite people. But that's an unhappy medium—the worst of both worlds. It's too big to be viable on SSA—it bloats the reference class too much—but too small to be viable on SIA and compartmentalized conditionalization. For this reason, with little exception, whatever view of anthropics one has, theism is good news.

3.4 Maybe there are only aleph null people Content warning: technical.

I discussed earlier that some infinities are bigger than others. If the universe is infinite in size, it would only have aleph null people—that's the smallest infinity. But maybe you think that there are only aleph null possible people, so every possible person would come to exist if the universe is infinitely big, or if there's an infinite multiverse. Atheism can account for an infinitely big universe!

Let me note first of all that to have such a view, you absolutely have to believe in souls. If you think people are just arrangements of stuff, the number of possible arrangements of stuff is at least Beth 2 (there are Beth 1 points, and the number of different arrangements of Beth 1 points is Beth 2, so the number of possible arrangements of stuff is Beth 2).

Then, after you believe in souls, you have to think that there's a weird arbitrary limit on the number of souls. For some reason, the number of souls just runs out when you get to aleph null. Why would this be? Unclear.

This view is really weird. It implies that it would be possible to just run out of souls in an infinitely big universe. On such a picture, if the universe is infinite in size, there might be people who try to have a baby but can't because each of the souls is taken. Such a view should be rejected.

The view has another big problem—as I'll argue, there are strong grounds for thinking that the number of possible people is not just aleph null or Beth 2 but uncountably many—too big to be a set. The infinities mathematicians talk about are infinite sets—but I think the number of possible people is a collection too large to be a set.

To explain what this means, I'll have to introduce a bit of terminology. A set is a specific kind of collection. For example, if I have an apple and a banana, there's a set of an apple and a banana. If you take the power set of a set, you get a bigger set—the power set is the number of subsets you can get from the subset (a subset is a smaller set containing only members of the original set). For example, the number of subsets of the set $\{1, 2\}$ is 4—there's the empty set containing nothing, the set with just 1, the set with just 2, and the set with 1 and 2.

This point about the power set of a set being bigger than the set also applies to infinities. Aleph null—also called Beth 0—is the smallest infinite set. It's equal to the number of natural numbers: 1, 2, 3.... Beth 1 is the powerset of Beth 0, Beth 2 is the powerset of Beth 1, etc. Incidentally, Beth 1 is the number of real numbers—that includes the integers like 1, 2, and 3, as well as all the infinite non-repeating decimals and fractions.

My claim is that the collection of possible people isn't just aleph null—in fact, it's too big to be any kind of set. What this means is that for any set of any kind, one can make a bigger set only using parts of the collection of all people.

Talking about a collection too big to be a set might sound a bit weird, there are some collections like this. Take the collection of all truths, for example. It's too big to be a set for the following reason. Suppose it was a set with, for example, cardinality Beth 10 (cardinality measures the size of an infinite set). Well, because if A is a truth and B is a truth then A and B is a truth, every subset of the Beth 10 truths would be a truth, so there'd have to be Beth 11 truths. Thus, the number of truths is more than any set of any size. I claim possible people are like truths—the collection of them is too big to be a set.

(If this is true, it's bad news for naturalism, because there's no plausible story of how the number of people that exist, on naturalism, is too big to be a set).

There are two pretty good arguments for there being no set of all minds and one overwhelmingly decisive argument (I've given the arguments before, so I'm going to plagiarize myself and repeat the explanations).

There is no set of all truths. But it seems like the truths and the minds can be put into 1 to 1 correspondence. For every truth, there is a different possible mind that thinks of that truth. So therefore, there must not be a set of all possible people.

Suppose there were a set of all minds of cardinality N. It's a principle of mathematics that for any infinity of any cardinality, the number of subsets of that set will be a higher cardinality of infinity. Subsets are the number of smaller sets that can be made from a set, so for example the set 1, 2 has 4 subsets, because you can have a set with nothing, a set with just 1, a set with just 2, or a set with 1 and 2. If there were a set of all minds, it seems that there could be another disembodied mind to think about each of the minds that exists in the set. So then the number of those other minds thinking about the minds containing the set would be the powerset (that's the term for the number of subsets) of the set of all minds, which would mean there are more minds than there are. Thus, a contradiction ensues when one assumes that there's a set of all minds!

These arguments are pretty good. But there's an even more decisive argument that appeals to SIA. You see, there are two ways of formulating the SIA. One of them says that you should favor a theory if it says there are more people (this is called the unrestricted self-indication assumption—or USIA), the other says you should favor a theory if it says a greater share of possible people are created (this is called the restricted self-indication assumption or RSIA).

To see the difference, suppose that there are two otherwise equally good theories. If one of them is true, there are Beth 1 possible people and they all exist. If the other is true, there are Beth 2 possible people and they all exist. On RSIA the theories are equal—they both say that every possible person is created. On USIA, the second theory is way better, because it says there are many more people.

If USIA is true, then you shouldn't think there are aleph null people only—the theory that there are unsetly many people is infinitely better than any theory that says that the number of possible people is only a set. Fortunately, we have two strong arguments for USIA.

First, Elga's argument before supports USIA. Suppose that we're considering two theories—one of them says there's one possible person who exists, the other says there are two possible people who both exist. Assume they're equally externally credible. By Elga's reasoning, the odds you're the first person and only one person exists = the odds you're the first person and two people exist = the odds you're the second person and two people exist. Thus, for the same reason, the theory on which there is a bigger infinite of people is infinitely more likely than the theory on which there's a smaller infinite of people.

Second, RSIA has crazy implications. For example, suppose that one is a necessitarian—they think that nothing other than what happens is possible. On such a picture, from the fact that you exist, you'd get infinitely strong evidence for necessitarianism—even over a theory on which there are many more people, but a smaller share of possible people—from the fact that you exist. This is clearly absurd.

4. Conclusion

This article has been long! Sorry about that. It's a complicated subject that requires a lot of thought. Hopefully I've explained why I think the SIA is true and why it's truth provides overwhelmingly strong evidence for theism. I think if one accepts SIA, there isn't really a way out—theism follows pretty inevitably.

Help me understand this.

Suppose I notice I am a human on Earth in America. I consider two hypotheses. One is that everything is as it seems. The other is that there is a vast conspiracy to hide the fact that America is much bigger than I think - it actually contains one trillion trillion people. It seems like SIA should prefer the conspiracy theory (if the conspiracy is too implausible, just increase the posited number of people until it cancels out).

You can get around this by saying that infinity is too big for it to matter - since there are an infinite number of Americans (across all possible worlds), I'm no more likely to live in the conspiracy universe than the normal universe. But I think you can't do weird stuff with infinities like this. Consider 1000 rare classes of person (dictator, billionaire, dwarf, polar explorer, etc). I notice I'm not in most of these classes. But it seems like if there are an infinite number of Earths, then there are an infinite number of polar explorers and an infinite number of non-polar-explorers, and these aren't two different levels of infinity (there are about 1 million times more non-explorers than explorers). So I should be exactly as likely to be an explorer as a non-explorer. But the fact that I'm not in more than a handful of these rare classes proves that this isn't true. Therefore, you can't sweep the first problem under the rug by playing with infinities.

What am I missing?

I might be wrong about this, but I don't find this argument convincing. I have reservations about the SIA and theism's predictive ability, but I mostly disagree because I don't think atheism does such a bad job of predicting the existence of large numbers of people. To illustrate this, I've tried to list out some hypotheses that are alternatives to theism and still predict the existence of large numbers of people.

1. Tegmark's multiverse and modal realism

1.1. I don't think induction is a big problem for these worldviews, certainly relative to theism.

1.1.1. Suppose modal realism is true. The mere fact that there are infinitely many concretely existing possible worlds where induction fails does not imply that I am probably in such a world, or that induction fails in nearly all worlds. I'm not even sure it's possible to make such statements in a meaningful way - you would need to have a measure over all possible worlds, which is impossible because there is no set of all possible worlds.

1.1.2. Whatever the best way of thinking about uncertainty over possible worlds is, the idea that it would change if those possible worlds existed concretely is exceedingly strange.

1.1.3. Theism doesn't explain why induction works any better than atheism. The morally sufficient reasons God has for allowing the massive amount of evil that have existed throughout history are surely sufficient to allow him to create a world where induction doesn't work.

2. Alternative theisms: for any property that people existing can entail, just postulate a God who values that property rather than goodness. There are infinitely many of these, including

2.1. Evil God

2.2. God who just likes qualia, in general

2.3. God who mostly cares about aesthetic (but not necessarily moral) value

2.4. God who really likes Luxembourgers (maybe there's a reason they have such high GDP per capita)

2.5. and so on.

3. Generalized value selection hypotheses: take theism or any of the 'alternative theisms' and postulate a mindless force which tends to instantiate the corresponding values

4. Physical multiverse theories

4.1. I'm don't think it would be that hard to create mathematical models of multiverses containing Beth-2 or more people. It might be that those models wouldn't be well-motivated by empirical data in the conventional sense, but maybe we shouldn't expect them to be if most of the other universes are causally isolated from ours. And they would at least be motivated by anthropic considerations, which are empirical! (at least if SIA is correct).

4.2. Specifying the exact nature of this model shouldn't even be necessary! It seems extremely unfair to complain that physicists haven't proposed a mathematical multiverse model that would predict enough universes when philosophers and theologians haven't proposed a mathematical model of God and his act of creation.

5. Other multiverse theories: Suppose, for example, that there's a simple universe-generating monad which generates lots and lots of universes.

A New Extremely Strong Argument For The Self-Indication Assumption Anonymous sources tell me non-SIAers are COPING and SEETHING in response to this argument

1 Introduction

If you're a longtime reader of this blog, you've probably heard me bang on at considerable length about why the self-indication assumption is the right view. The SIA, for those who have been living under a rock, says your existence gives you evidence for there being more people. More precisely, your existence confirms by a factor of X theories on which there are X times as many people that you might presently be. Even more precisely...

To give an example, suppose that a coin gets flipped. If it comes up heads, one person gets created. If it comes up tails, ten people get created. SIA says that if you get created from this process, you should think at ten to one odds that the coin came up tails. Because for all you know you might be any of the ten people created by the tails coin flip, your existence favors tails over heads by a factor of ten. Tails results in the creation of ten times as many people that you might presently be, so you should think it's ten times as likely it resulted in the creation of you.

As is a monthly tradition, I have a new argument for the SIA. But before you say "this is boring," and leave this article to begin reading a 78,294th thinkpiece about Sydney Sweeney, note that whether the SIA is right has huge implications for all sorts of issues, including whether the universe is infinite and whether God exists. This is one of the single issues with the most earth-shattering implications for one's worldview, so it's worth really thinking through.

Suppose that a coin is flipped that creates one person if heads and ten if tails. This coin creates you. However, after this coin is flipped, the same coin will be flipped over and over again. It will be flipped, let's say, 1,000 times, and each time it will create one person if heads and ten people if tails. The question: what should your credence be in the coin that created you having come up tails?

Before we can answer this question, let's answer a different one. Suppose that a coin is flipped a million times that creates one person if heads and ten if tails each time. You do not know your birth rank. What odds should you give to the coin having come up tails?

Here the answer is clear: $\sim 10/11$ (I'm too lazy to do the math exactly but the exact answer is the proportion of observers, on average, across 1,000 trials who would get created by heads coinflips).

If you know that $10/11$ ths of people have property X, then unless you have some specific reason to think you're special—a reason that couldn't be given by everyone—you should think at $10/11$ ths odds that you have that property. If, for instance, you know 10 in 11 people have the gene theta, and you have no special evidence regarding whether you have gene theta, you should think the odds are $10/11$ that you have gene theta. Thus, because $10/11$ ths of people are created by tails coin flips, you should think at $10/11$ ths odds that the coin came up tails.

Okay, now that that's out of the way, let's go back to the earlier case where you know you were created on the first coin flip and some coins will be flipped after you. I'm going to argue that in this case, your credence in the coin that was flipped and created you having come up heads should be $10/11$ ths, because it should be the same as your credence in the last case (where you don't know your birth rank. Then I'm going to argue that your credence in this case—where a coin is flipped that creates one if heads and ten if tails, and then the experiment will be repeated later—should be the same as your credence in the scenario where a coin is flipped that creates one person if heads and ten if tails and there is no or past repeats of the experiment. From these it follows that if a coin is flipped that creates one person if heads and ten if tails, and you get created as a result of the coin flip, you should think at 10:1 odds that the coin came up tails.

Let me try to simplify. Let's name the various experiments.

Repeat flipping unknown rank: this is the one where the experiment is done a bunch of times, but you don't know which rank you are. So, a coin is repeatedly flipped that creates one person if heads and ten if tails—it's done, say, 100,000 times.

Repeat flipping first rank: this is the one where the experiment is done a bunch of times, but you know you were created on the first experiment. So, a coin is repeatedly flipped that creates one person if heads and ten if tails—it's done 100,000 times—but you know that you were created in the first experiment. All the other 99,999 experiments will be done after you.

Single flipping: in this case, the experiment is done only a single time. A coin was flipped that created one person if heads and ten if tails. You got created from this.

Here is my argument in short.

Your credence in the coin having come up heads in Repeat flipping unknown rank should be the same as your credence in the coin having come up heads in Repeat flipping first rank.

Your credence in the coin having come up heads in Repeat flipping first rank should be the same as your credence in the coin having come up heads in Single flipping.

Your credence in the coin having come up heads in Repeat flipping unknown rank should be either $1/11$ or approximately $1/11$.

Therefore, your credence in the coin having come up heads in Single flipping is either $1/11$ or approximately $1/11$.

That is only consistent with SIA.

So SIA is true.

So...let's see if the premises are true, shall we.

2 Repeat flipping unknown rank=repeat flipping first rank

This premise says "Your credence in the coin having come up heads in Repeat flipping unknown rank should be the same as your credence in the coin having come up heads in Repeat flipping first rank." So if you know that the experiment will be done a bunch of times, how likely you should think you were to have been created by a coin coming up tails doesn't depend on whether you were in the first experiment. When I first thought of the argument, this was the premise that seemed shakiest to me, but now I think there are several distinct arguments for it that make it pretty unavoidable.

Here is a plausible principle: if

There are events that are completely causally isolated from each other.

There are agents with credences in some propositions as part of the events.

Changing when in time the events occur doesn't affect the truth of any of the propositions.

The changing when in time the events occur isn't any likelier if any of the propositions are true than if they are false.

then

Agents' credences shouldn't change as a result of the order of the events being rearranged.

This sounds like a pretty complicated and abstract principle but most of it was just tying up random loose ends—I think the essence of it is simple and straightforward. Suppose that some people are going to do an experiment where they flip a penny. Then, later, in some distant galaxy, some other people are going to do a different experiment where they flip a nickel. Changing around the order that the events happen—making it so that the nickel flipping occurs first—shouldn't change anyone's credences. How likely you should think it is that the nickel will come up heads shouldn't depend on whether it was flipped before or after the penny.

But if you accept the principle then you can't hold different credences across the two cases. The only difference between the two is in the order in which the two events occurred. In repeat flipping first rank your rank is first, while in repeat flipping unknown rank, you don't know your birth rank—the cases are otherwise the same. But if changing the order doesn't change what one's credences should be then your credences have to be the same between the two cases.

A second argument: physics seems to indicate that there's no objective simultaneity. When some event happens is relative to a reference frame. There's often no precise fact of the matter about which of two events happened first. Thus, a view on which the order of these events affects credences will often be literally indeterminate in cases where there's no fact of the matter concerning the order of events.

A third argument: it seems like in cases like this delaying when some event occurs shouldn't change your credence. If an experiment like the coinflip one is done, merely changing when it time it happens shouldn't make your credence different. However, denying this premise violates this principle, because it holds that delaying when the first coin-flipping experiment is done so that it's done after the others changes what your credence should be.

A fourth argument: as Ken Olum notes, the argument for a $\sim 10/11$ credence doesn't just apply if the event is iterated temporally. It also applies if the event is iterated spatially. For example, suppose that there are googol galaxies and in all of them the experiment is done (let's say simultaneously). A coin is flipped in each of them, and if it comes up heads one person is created, while if it comes up tails ten people are created. Relatively inarguably, in this case, you should think at 10:1 odds that the coin came up tails, because across these galaxies, 10/11ths of people get created by tails coin flips.

But then the question: if you should count all other events and take a portion over them if they're spread out spatially, why not temporally? Why are time and space treated differently? What is the principled probabilistic basis for this?

You can't get around this by treating them the same way spatially because space doesn't have a natural ordering the way time does. You can't, for instance, say that the person in galaxy one should have credence of 1/2 in the coin coming up heads, because there's no fact of the matter about which galaxy is galaxy one. How do we determine which galaxy gets ranked which way?

A fifth argument: just as a point of mathematics, people will be more accurate if they assume that those in galaxy one should have 10/11ths credence in tails if the experiment is iterated. Those who follow the right betting advice should be more accurate. Following the betting advice that treats these two symmetrically boosts accuracy. Thus, one should follow that betting advice.

(Quick explanation of why accuracy goes up: if you bet on tails and you're right, then you're right a lot. If you bet against tails, then you lose more bets and this damages the aggregate accuracy score of people more).

Now, there's one way that a person could get around the considerations I've given so far. They could say that what matters for your credence isn't that you know your experiment number is early but that you know which experiment number you are. So, for instance, if you learned that you are experiment number 50,233, you should still have credence of 1/2 in heads! After all, you know there's a 1/2 chance that the coin in experiment 50,233 comes up heads and a 1/2 chance it comes up tails. Once you know which experiment you are on, you no longer consider yourself equally likely to be produced by every experiment, so you no longer think that there's a $\sim 10/11$ chance that the coin came up tails.

I think this view has a lot of problems.

First of all, the view egregiously violates reflection. Reflection says: if you know that you will later get evidence that will cause you to think R with probability P, then you should now think R with probability P. For example, if you know that you will later visit a museum that will have evidence that will rationally convince you that there's a 99.9% chance that Genghis Khan was a real guy, then you should know think that there's a 99.9% chance Khan was a real guy. After all, you know that there's evidence out there that should convince you to have a credence of 99.9%, so it seems you should move your credence to 99.9% in anticipation of the evidence.

But now suppose you don't know which experiment you're on but you do know that you'll be told in five minutes what experiment you're on. This view implies that you should think at 10/11 odds that the coin came up tails, even though you know that in five minutes you'll be back to 1/2 odds. This is crazy! If you know that there some evidence (namely, the evidence concerning which experiment you're on) out there that should make you have a credence of 1/2 in tails then you should have a credence of 1/2 now. You shouldn't predictably update your credences in this way! And if you plan to, then one can construct a money pump by selling you a bet on whether the coin has come up heads, and then buy it back from you when, in five minutes, you value it at a lower price.

A second problem: there's no fact of the matter concerning how much you have to learn about an experiment to know, in some objective sense, what experiment it is. This view says that once you identify that it is e.g. the 500th experiment, then you can declare "well, I knew the 500th experiment had a 1/2 chance of the coin coming up heads, so now I think at 1/2 odds that the coin came up heads." But what's special about knowing that it's the 500th experiment?

You always know that the experiment you're creating in is the experiment that you were created in. So you can always say—let experiment N refer to whichever number experiment I'm on. For example, if I'm on experiment 500, then $N=500$. I know experiment N had a 1/2 chance of the coin coming up heads. Therefore, I think at 1/2 odds that it came up heads.

Similarly, is it enough to know the spatial order of the events? Do you have to know the temporal order? And what if they're in worlds that are neither spatially nor temporally linked? The view becomes hopelessly defective and arbitrary.

A last problem: the view seems to break down in cases where you're not sure which experiment you are in. For example, suppose that you think there's a 99% chance that you're in experiment one and a 1% chance you're in experiment two. What credence should you have in the coin having come up heads? A natural answer is: 1/2, because whether you're in experiment one or two, there's a 1/2 chance it came up heads. But that same logic will generalize to the earlier case where there are 100,000 experiments but you don't know which one produced you. Thus, this view either breaks down completely or implies that one should always have a credence of 1/2 in the coin having come up heads—even if they know that ten out of every eleven people created by the coin were produced by tails coin flips. I'll talk later about more reasons that view isn't tenable.

But overall, I think this premise is on very firm ground. So...let's see about the others.

3 Repeat flipping first rank=single flipping

The next premise states your credence in the coin having come up heads in Repeat flipping first rank should be the same as your credence in the coin having come up heads in Single flipping. Single flipping is the version of the case where the experiment is just done once, while Repeat flipping first rank is the one where the coin is flipped a bunch of times, but you know you were produced by the first coin flip.

This is pretty straightforward: if a coin is flipped that creates one person if heads and ten if tails, to figure out the odds it came up heads, you don't need to figure out whether they'll perform the same experiment in the future. Which experiments are done in the future has absolutely no impact on the outcome of the present experiment. It thus shouldn't affect your credences.

The alternative just seems totally ridiculous. Upon learning that the experiment was done, you should think at 50% odds that the coin came up tails. But then, after you learn that they will do the experiment again a bunch of times in a million years—something that cannot affect the experimental results—you should now think at 10:1 odds that it came up tails. Nuts! Causally unrelated events happening in millions of years shouldn't change your credence!

The alternative view implies—counterintuitively—that if in the real world someone did the aforementioned experiment, and you wanted to figure out if you should have a credence in tails of 10/11 or 1/2, you'd have to know whether a stable universe would reappear after heat death. That's pretty crazy!

4 Repeat flipping unknown rank credence=1/11 or ~1/11

The next premise says your credence in the coin having come up heads in Repeat flipping unknown rank should be either 1/11 or approximately 1/11. In the scenario where the coin is flipped repeatedly, each time creating ten people if it comes up tails, and one if it comes up heads, if you're created, then you should think the odds the coin that created you came up heads is ~1/11.

This premise is pretty straightforward. 10/11 of people, in the limit, get created by tails coinflips. If you know that 10/11 of people are created by tails coin flips, then you should think you were created by a tails coin flip at 10/11 odds. If you know X% of people have some property, then unless you have some special reason to think you're atypical—a reason that doesn't apply to other people—you should think you have the property at X% odds.

Or, put another way, if $X\%$ of people have some property, and they all are exposed to the same evidence, it shouldn't be that they all should have a credence in them personally having the property that differs from $X\%$. If people know that 90% of people have red shirts, and they can't see their shirt color, they should think at 90% odds they have a red shirt. It really shouldn't be that 90% of people have red shirts but it's rational for everyone to think at 50% odds that they personally have a red shirt.

Here is another argument for thinking that tails is ~ 10 times likelier than heads in the repeat scenario. Let's imagine making a series of changes to the scenario. I'll argue that none of these changes should change your credence, and in the end, it will be really obvious that tails is ten times likelier than heads.

You learn the exact number of times the coin—across all experiments—came up heads. It will have come up heads roughly half the time, so you learn the exact number. This, presumably, shouldn't change your credence. It shouldn't be that after learning that the number of heads coin flips is something normal and expected, your credence fluctuates wildly. Let's assume for simplicity that you learn that the coin comes up heads and tails an equal number of times.

The person planning the experiments switches the experiments where the coin will come up heads to come first. This just changes around the order. It doesn't change around the outcome of any coin flip.

Instead of a series of coinflips determining the creation of people, they're created by a machine. So instead of X people being created by heads coin flips, and then $10X$ being created by tails coin flips, X people are created and given the label heads, while $10X$ people are created and given the label tails. Once again, this just changes the mechanism by which people are created—so it shouldn't change your credences.

But with these three changes, there is simply a machine that creates X people with the label "heads," and $10X$ people with the label "tails." In such a scenario, you should obviously think at 10:1 odds that you have the label tails. Same is true here.

5 If the others are true, then SIA is true

The previous premises have established that if a coin gets flipped that creates one person if heads and ten people if tails, upon being created from the flip, you should think the odds that the coin came up tails are 10/11. Your credence when the coin flip is repeated should be 10/11 or so, which should be the same as the scenario where you're first and the coin flips are repeated, which should be the same as the scenario where it's just done once. 10/11 credence vindicated!

So why, if this is right, is SIA right? I think this step is confusing to a lot of people, but it's very straightforward.

The right way to reason about probabilities is through a theorem called Bayes theorem.

Bayes theorem says:

Start with the prior of a theory—how likely it is before looking at the evidence. Treat this as an odds ratio. So, rather than writing 50%, write 1:1, meaning it's as likely to be true as false. A 2:1 odds ratio means a theory is twice as likely to be true as false, while a 1:2 odds ratio means it's half as likely to be true as false.

Then look at the evidence by multiplying the odds ratio for the evidence. The evidence gets an odds ratio that corresponds to how many times likelier you are to get that evidence if the theory is true than false. If the evidence is, say, three times likelier if the theory is true than false, then you multiply by a 3:1 odds ratio. So if you start with a theory with 2/3 odds (a 2:1 odds ratio) and get evidence that's twice as likely if the theory is true than false, then you should think the theory gets an odds ratio of $3 \times 2:1 \times 1$. In other words, it gets an odds ratio of 6:1, and so its probability is 6/7.

So now let's apply this to the aforementioned scenario. Obviously your prior in a fair coin coming up heads should be 1/2—or a 1:1 odds ratio. But now, we've established that if the fair coin coming up tails will make ten people be created, while only one will be created if it comes up heads, then you should think tails is ten times likelier than heads. That means that the evidence makes tails ten times likelier—it's good for an odds ratio of ten.

This is what SIA says. It that if one theory says there are X times as many people you might currently be as another, then your existence, in favor of the first theory, is good for an odds ratio of X. So if your existence, given there are ten people that you might be get created if the coin comes up tails, favors tails by a factor of 10, that serves to confirm the SIA.

Now note: this same argument can be made with any number. If 10 was replaced with 10,000 or 1 million, the argument would still work. If the coin flip was replaced with a die being rolled or some physical theory, the argument would still work. So the lesson is general: you always favor a theory by a factor of X if it says X times more people exist.

Let's see how this works in the context of the real world. Suppose that there are two theories on offer. The first theory says there's a giant-ass multiverse. The second says there's a single universe. Assume the multiverse theory predicts a million times more people than the single universe. Assume additionally that the two theories have equal priors—you think they're equally likely before you look at the evidence.

Now imagine that this “experiment,” so to speak, is going to be run a bunch in the future, and the results will be probabilistically independent. In the future, repeatedly both universes and multiverses will be generated. Half the time a universe will be generated, and half the time a multiverse will be.

Well now, by the argument in this article, you should think at 1 million to one odds that you're in the multiverse right now. So then, as long as the odds you're in a multiverse now doesn't depend on the creation of people in the future, the point will generalize. I use coin flips when talking about SIA as an illustrative example, but SIA is a principle for all cases. It doesn't just work for coin flips.

In other words, to explain the result in this case, you have to think more people existing makes your present existence likelier. But once you think it does that in one case, the logic generalizes—and you become an SIAer! Yay!

Let me make two other points about this. The first is that, once you buy the logic, then you already have bought into a result that's vulnerable to the objections to SIA. The main objection to SIA is that it's just so crazy that your existence gives you evidence for lots of people being created. But if you buy that tails is 10X likelier than heads—and, by the same logic, tails would be a quadrillion times likelier than heads if it involved the creation of a quadrillion people—then you already have bought into a result that exposes you to this objection.

Second, all the non-SIA views imply that you should think tails and heads are equally likely.¹ So if you accept the SIA judgment here, you will have to reject every alternative view.

6 Conclusion

Tell your friends the good news! Shout it from the rooftops: SIA is true! Why is that good news? Because it means God probably exists. And that is very good news indeed. It is quite fortunate that a view that vastly raises the likelihood of God's existence is just about the most plausible view in all of philosophy.

I'll have to think more about the argument for SIA... but even assuming it holds, you say:

> Now imagine that this "experiment," so to speak, is going to be run a bunch in the future, and the results will be probabilistically independent. In the future, repeatedly both universes and multiverses will be generated.

Here you make explicit the conditions where anthropic reasoning holds. I agree with those conditions.

But crucially, the "God" issue doesn't meet them! If universes-made-by-God and universes-not-made-by-God were generated probabilistically, then you could presumably use SIA to argue which one you're more likely to find yourself in.

But as far as I know, no-one believes that universes-made-by-God and universes-not-made-by-God are generated probabilistically. Theists think that all universes are generated by God, and non-theists think that none are.

Which means we're not in the conditions of the experiment, and SIA doesn't tell you anything about God.

Which is a relief, because it would massively weird if some armchair reasoning gave you positive information about how reality itself came about.

You can influence your pineal gland through light exposure and through emotion. The amygdala, the part of your brain that processes emotion, has impact on your hypothalamus, which controls your pineal gland. So if you can regulate your emotion to calm, then it's perceivable to stimulate the pineal gland. But again, all you're going to get is melatonin, the stuff of dreams.

I assume many people just don't understand the question. To me, there are three states:

1. no sound inside the mind at all
2. you hear a voice, or many voices, but they aren't in your control
3. you can make voices in your head, but only when you choose to, which isn't really that common unless you're imagining a debate or reading something

I think TV demonstrates #2 a lot, and it seems like #2 tends to judge both #1 and #3 as if they are the same thing. I also think #3 may falsely assume the question is about whether you are #2 or not, but it really is (or should be) simply about whether you are capable of simulating voice inside your mind.

At the top, there is a decorative border with a pattern that resembles traditional Chinese or Japanese design elements. The text is arranged in a grid-like format, with the top row containing the largest text and the bottom row containing smaller text.

The largest text at the top reads "OM PADO USHNISHA Vimal Hum Pha," which is the title of the mantra. Below this, there is a list of benefits provided by the mantra, which is written in a script that resembles traditional Tibetan or Sanskrit. The list includes benefits such as "Condensed Benefits of Stainless Pinnacle Lotus Mantra," "If you recite, or even see, touch or remember this mantra," and "If you recite even 100,000 times, you will achieve what turns long."

The text is written in a traditional script, with the first letter of each line being capitalized. The font is bold and the text is in a serif font, which is commonly used for formal or religious texts. The overall style of the image is formal and spiritual, with a focus on conveying the benefits of the mantra.

>Are there any other ways of achieving these higher states of consciousness without the influence of drugs and extensive meditation???

not that i know of.

i personally chant 16 rounds of Hare Rama Hare Rama Rama Rama Hare Hare Hare Krishna Hare Krishna Krishna Krishna Hare Hare every single day

1 round is 108 repetitions of the phrase. i do this 16 times every day so that's 1728 times in total of a 16 word mantra with 32 syllables very advanced yogis do up to 64 rounds a day, sometimes of mantras that contain 100 syllables.

here's some examples of various mantras you can try. the word mantra itself is sanskrit, Man means mind and Tra means to liberate.

The image is a screenshot of a webpage with a title at the top that reads "AI Overview." Below the title, there is a section titled "Key Aspects of Mansaka Japa." The text in the image is in a plain text format, and it appears to be a description or explanation of the concept of Mansaka Japa, which is the mental silent repetition of a mantra or divine name. The text is divided into two main sections: "Key Aspects of Mansaka Japa" and "Key Aspects of Mansaka Japa: Definition."

The "Key Aspects of Mansaka Japa" section provides a definition of Mansaka Japa, stating that it is the internal, silent recitation of a mantra, where the mind focuses solely on the sound and meaning of the mantra. It also mentions that while challenging for beginners due to the mind's tendency to wander, it is considered superior to Vajrasattva (gaudible) and Umasvati (whispered) Japa. It is ideal for deep meditation and, over time, can become constant in the mind.

The "Key Aspects of Mansaka Japa: Definition" section provides a detailed explanation of the significance of Mansaka Japa. It states that while challenging for beginners due to the mind's tendency to wander, it is considered superior to Vajrasattva (gaudible) and Umasvati (whispered) Japa. I'll give you a new one you probably haven't heard. It's not about the pineal gland though.

Humans have vestigial auricular muscles around the ear, the ear wiggle muscle. Some people can voluntarily wiggle ears but most can't.

Yawning can lightly activate the muscle and activating it creates a vibration deep around the ears. If you cause the muscle to cramp through repeated muscle activation, it creates a vibration that takes over your body. When people speak of a vibration associated with OBE and RV, this is what's happening. From personal experience I can say that it is possible to force these experiences through activating this muscle.

a good foundation is necessary for advancement body & breath refinement, awareness training that alone done enough can produce results that eventually form a good mahamudra sort of practice train the air flow, eliminate the turbulence lessen the triggering of the sense nerves esp the olfactory nerves

when the air flow is subtle enough and well conditioned into the body's memory, the lack of stimulation eventually forces the nerves to transition their resonant mode from normal (yang) to hibernate (yin) since there's no 0, there is simply another mode of operation this is why the fat buddha is fat, not because of adipose, but because size perception distortions happen at this stage where the nerves do this on an overall scale attaining this is just a matter of learning to breathe properly for 0 turbulence air flow, and conditioning the body to execute the motions flawlessly at scale

this sets the stage for true stillness and as ohm's law teaches us, reduce r and the amplitude soars everything's really built on this foundation, master it and it helps you do any other practice safely or take this lone cultivation of awareness all the way until the spiritual light leaps forth from it how far one goes depends on the work he puts in, which is why there's no good timeframes to go by

I made the spiritual light manifest in a year and a half's worth of work, but much of that was troubleshooting as soon as my conditioning reached good levels and I was performing correctly, a further 3 months

[13 / 3]The image is a digital illustration featuring two religious icons, each depicting a saint. The saint on the left is Jesus Christ, portrayed with a beard, wearing a red robe with gold trim, and a halo around his head. The saint on the right is Saint Paul, shown with a beard, wearing a red robe with gold trim, and a halo around his head. Both saints are wearing a red stole draped over their shoulders. The background of the image is a light green color with a gold border. At the top of the image, there is a circular emblem with the letters "O" and "N" inside it, and at the bottom, the text "SAINT PAUL" is written in a script that resembles the style of the Greek alphabet. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional religious iconography, with a focus on the religious figures and their halos.

Jesus is a complete enigma. In some parts he's talking about fulfilling the law of the god of the old testament. In other parts he's alluding to the old testament god being satan. And then in certain contexts when he speaks of god, it's clear he's talking about the true unknowable and unnameable that is wholly benevolent and lies beyond this world. Then there's the gnostic texts. And then there's the jesus in revelation who is a vicious destroyer and harvester, steeped in saturnian symbolism. His direct teachings are probably the best out there for connecting with the true knowable god(who is within you and always with you). I'd take that, and any gnostic teachings that are useful to you, and not worry about the rest. Paul's teachings, when read a certain way, can also help you connect with the infinite within, but taken literally he does come across as a roman shill faggot that's trying to coerce you into worshipping jesus as some kind of middleman.

Gnostics think Jesus was possessed by a spirit channel like the Seth Material at the start of his ministry (Holy Spirit) and it finally leaves when suffering takes him out of frequency (why have you forsaken me). They also think Jesus's teachings were a metaphorical road map to mystical self-knowledge that would bring salvation through enlightenment, whereas the proto orthodox church saw Jesus very differently as the prophesied Messiah and believed following his teachings to the letter would bring salvation through faith, ie belief in his word. Fundamentally, the gnostic view of Jesus is heretical to Christianity, but from a modern standpoint of viewing him as a spiritual figure like Buddha it appears not that different from other world belief systems about spirituality that sprung up around such people, and was probably based in ancient animism.

The image is an aerial view of a grand interior space, possibly a cathedral or a similar religious building. The floor is adorned with a series of circular patterns, each featuring a different color, creating a vibrant mosaic effect. The ceiling is high and ornate, with intricate designs and patterns that add to the grandeur of the space.

In the center of the image, there is a large, ornate statue or sculpture that appears to be a central figure, possibly a religious figure or a historical figure, given its prominence.

The statue is surrounded by a multitude of red and white candles, which are arranged in a circular pattern around the statue, creating a sense of symmetry and order.

The walls of the space are also decorated with similar circular patterns, and there are several statues and sculptures placed throughout the space, contributing to the overall aesthetic of the interior. The lighting in the space is soft and diffused, casting a warm glow over the entire scene.

There are no discernible texts or inscriptions in the image, and the focus is primarily on the architectural and decorative elements of the space. The image does not provide any information about the identity of the location or the specific purpose of the space.

Studying torah is equivalent to making all offerings at the temple.

Charity is the same.

There is no need to sacrifice cows anymore.

If going the hindu route, they burn ghee with sometimes (but not required) some dried herbs while chanting gayatri mantras to their gods. Gayatri mantra is a prayer for wisdom, and the fire symbolizes burning away impurities.

Ghee is an animal product so it is sort of equivalent to animal sacrifice without actually having to sacrifice an animal - but it has sattvic properties rather than rajasic or tamasic.

Making bad offerings to some deities can cause backlash - so don't offer foul things, but only good smelling things. And when the Old Testament says "do not offer anything sweet in the offerings" there is probably a good reason for it.

Christians can probably burn frankincense and myrrh, but seems to edge a bit close to hoodoo witchcraft territory for a lot of folks.

WHy should I offer God anything? He owns everythign already, doesn't He? Why should I offer anything? So God wants me offering things for Him now? This is a sign that God is a faggot. I'm always telling this. This is why the jews are the worst. Because people like you and the jews thing that you have to sacrifice things to God or offer things to God. Why? Because you are selfish. You want God to kiss your arse. You want God to give you stuff and bless you. You want material things and pleasure. You want to be in good terms with God so you offer things to Him. I hate people like you. It's because of people like you that people sacrifice things for deities. It's people like you who kill in the name of the deity. People who believe in God are the worst. Animals at least live their lives free of superstitions and silly rituals. If they kill it's to survive, maybe for pleasure like cats, cats kill for pleasure, another sign that God is cruel. Why would anyone offer anything to God? God doesn't deserve it. You do it because you want to kiss His arse. You want divine grace over you and you kiss God's ass trying to achieve that. This is another sign that nobody really lies God. We kiss His arse because if we don't then we suffer. I prefer to suffer than to Kiss His arse. That the difference between you and me. God is the worst. People say God is all God. People are crazy. If God is good then why human suck so much? Because God also sucks very much. God is insecure.

My offering is to the living. To do good acts for those in my sphere of influence. That's the ultimate form of spiritual practice

Nothing in this universe is separate, it only appears like that at our scale but if you zoom out until it's all just a dot, you would acknowledge everything in the dot is part of the dot. That means you and I are both fundamentally of the same whole.

> why should I offer anything?

Because what you offer to others, you are also offering to yourself both literally and figuratively. If morality is derived from what is best for yourself, like a form of enlightened epicureanism, then it makes sense to sacrifice for others.

The cells in your body are separate yet they make up the same body. The oxygen one blood cell carries and gives to another cell may not directly benefit the blood cell, but indirectly it absolutely does.

Your family, friend group, your neighborhood, school and community. The more you zoom out, the more indirect your influence. But within your home, would you not agree it is for your own benefit that everyone who lives there is doing well? Maybe someone there is having a bad day, you offer something to them, even if it's the sacrifice of your time, to make their day a little better. In turn there is peace in your home and you have a stronger bond with someone that can help you when in need later on.

There's indirect effects we don't ever consider to calculate that absolutely come back to us.

I won't disagree about the sacrifice to imaginary deities. There may be some pragmatism at play but yea it's stupid.

In more ways than one. There's this >>41985003

But also consider how science believes life formed on this planet. It started with simple bacterial life, single cell organisms that reproduced through self cloning. Over time as cellular complexity increased through adaption and pressures from the environment, simple life began to reproduce by combining genes. Eventually single cell organisms evolved into multicellular organisms and through a couple billion years evolution gave the planet us.

Now I don't know anon what your beliefs are, but as far as I can tell, science says life started as one single life form cloning itself over and over again. What that implies to me is that everything alive on this planet is of the same essence. Underneath the hood we are all the same.

Furthermore, I do believe this planet is alive as in everything within our biosphere contributes to a greater organism, and I do believe that the universe itself is alive in some shape or form.

Both beliefs of which makes me and you the equivalent of cells sharing the same body. So yes I do believe that what I offer you, I also offer to myself. Even psychologically, there is truth in that. Consider how our influences shape those around us. There's a reason pedophiles often were victims once. And again it's not directly, but if you ever have kids you'll agree that what's good for them is good to you, but there's no way of knowing what influence on people you have today could hold to eventually make its way back to affect your own children.

That's what I mean by both figuratively and literally. Life is complex and we all exist in the same web.

You are giving away little signals of selfishness. You don't actually help people because you want to do what is right. You are helping them because that is a way of helping yourself! Now I get it why you said that "if you offer to others you are offering to yourself". Huh, I see it. You probably think that you are doing something positive and altruist when you offer something to another person, but you gave it away in the way you said "you are also offering to yourself". You offer things to others because this makes your life easier. By offering to others you are making sure that they will tend to help you when you need (...and you have a stronger bond with someone that can help you when in need later on"). You are a selfish human being and you don't even realize it. You hide behind things like offering things to others, but that is just a way for you to help yourself. You are selfish. Just like God. I burn incense or some kind of scented oil. And light sigils or candles. I usually prepare everything properly and do chants and meditation for a certain time around 5-15 minutes. When I'm done at the end I eat everything. Usually any master I have I do it for such a Set, Thoth, or Nyarlathotep or little poltergeist girl that would visit me. And yes this is an offering not a ritual. Since in an offering you provide not viceversa.

If you are right, then God was only serving Himself when He gave us life. When God shared the gift of life, making us alive, He was only serving Himself. And this is another sign that God is evil. It's funny how this works. The more the people like you try to spin God in a positive light the more by your own words you signal how God is selfish in the end of the day and the only reason He gave us life it's because He was only serving Himself. Again, I was naive, but I try not to be anymore. It is time to grow up, like someone said. It's time to face the cold harsh dark reality. God was only serving

How can you trust that God is moral when God Himself acts immoral? Everyone is selfish, you are right. But people fail to see that even God is selfish as well. Otherwise, what is He so afraid of? Why doesn't He show His face? Why does God limit us? Because He is selfish. He does not want anyone having the kind of power or authority which He has. Anon, be honest. The right thing would be to kill all human beings. God sacrifices an innocent man so a race of sinful people can live. Is this not morally evil? An innocent had to die so a bunch of sinners will live? This is the ultimate signal of how God is not fair. Jesus did not want to die, he asked God to pass that cup from him, but because Jesus wanted to be a good son or whatever he accepted, so the story goes, it doesn't mean it is true. But my point here is that God did not do the objectively right thing to do which would be to kill all the sinners and never make an innocent man pay for the crimes of sinners. This was not fair. How come people say that God is fair? This is the ultimate signal of how God put an innocent to die so sinful men could live. And God did abandon Jesus. When Jesus was on the cross dying God did abandon him. Jesus cried "why have thou forsaken me?". I tell you why, because God knew He fucked up. God could not stand Jesus nailed on that cross because it was the biggest signal of how much He fucked up. My point here is that talking about morality and what is right and the correct thing to do falls flat. God himself is not fair at all. An innocent died. Where is the fairness in all of this? If God was fair an innocent would never pay for the crimes of those who are truly guilty.

You're arguing against a caricature you projected onto me.

I never invoked the biblical God. I never defended Christianity. I never claimed holiness. I don't believe in your Abrahamic God, and I don't believe in "evil" in the divine-command sense. That requires an ultimate moral authority, and I don't think one exists.

You asked why I asked if I should be ashamed. Because you were clearly trying to shame me.

You say I only help because it benefits me.

Yes. So what?

There is a difference between exploiting others for gain and recognizing that mutual wellbeing improves your own life. I'm not manipulating people so they owe me. I'm acknowledging that stable relationships and cooperative systems benefit everyone involved including me.

You accuse me of promoting lies. What lie?

I've openly admitted self-preservation exists. I use it. I direct it toward benevolence instead of harm.

If humans are like cells in a larger organism and I believe life is fundamentally unified then I could argue that helping others isn't even psychologically experienced as selfish. It's closer to your left hand helping your right hand. Calling that "selfish" misses the point entirely.

You avoided my question, so I'll answer it directly. Yes, it is better to help someone even if you benefit than to not help them at all. The presence of self-interest does not invalidate moral goodness.

Even in virtue ethics (think Aristotle), living virtuously leads to flourishing (eudaimonia). Being good benefits you. The most stable form of morality is the one that aligns personal benefit with collective good because if morality requires you to constantly act against your nature, it collapses.

You say you're no longer naive. But do you really believe morality only counts if it is completely selfless?

If an action benefits you in any way, does that erase its moral value?

If so, then almost no action qualifies because even the feeling that something is "right" is itself a psychological benefit.

Pure selflessness, stripped of all internal reward, is almost impossible. That doesn't make morality meaningless.

And no, it's not okay to impregnate someone else's spouse. But dragging theology into a discussion that was never about the biblical God is exactly why this conversation went off the rails.

> The right thing would be to kill all human beings

If your conclusion is that the right thing is human extinction, then our moral premises are fundamentally incompatible.

Men have declared spiritual jihad on women and it shows as they slowly begin to lose it. This is it anons, the real gender war has begun, not the fake one with countless pronouns that is being shilled everywhere in the media, but the real war between man and woman.

Women are about to learn a harsh lesson.

Don't talk to women, don't help them, don't ask them out, don't have dating apps, don't interact with them. If a woman approaches you be nice and respectful but do not flirt or overtly joke, treat them as an equal man and then leave after the reason for the conversation is over. If a girl comes up to you and flirts kindly turn her down, if she asks you out suddenly say no thank you, don't make up a reason she only has agency because of some external reason not because she likes you. Be vague when talking about your life or weekend plans, anything you do or do with them like hooking up will be picked apart and analyzed by her and her online friends. You are a traitor and not helping anyone if you fall for their tricks.

If men can't display a modicum of power over society, this world and women, then I guess they don't hold much power at all.

The image is a black and white photograph of a person from behind, facing away from the camera. The person appears to be a man, and the image is overlaid with text in a serif font. The text is in English and discusses a topic related to feminism and the treatment of young men. The text is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the main body of the text and the right column containing a question. The question is: "I often think about how much the women of the modern society would have to apologize for feminism. Decades of hate, accusations, mental abuse of young boys, discrimination of men, injustices and no reason to forgive all that. Maybe with feminism modern women have committed a sin so dark that it is beyond redemption."

The style of the image is reminiscent of a historical or documentary photograph, with a focus on the text and the person's back. The monochromatic color scheme and the use of shadows suggest a somber or serious tone to the image. The text is centered and appears to be a part of a larger document or article, as suggested by the formal layout and the presence of a question mark at the end of the text.

[10 / 6]The image depicts a figure in a traditional Japanese samurai armor, standing in a dynamic pose with a confident expression. The armor is predominantly red and black, with intricate patterns and designs that suggest a high level of craftsmanship. The figure is holding two swords, one in each hand, which are also adorned with red and black patterns. The swords are held at a slight angle, with the blades pointing upwards, indicating readiness for combat. The background is a gradient of light to dark, providing a stark contrast to the figure and enhancing the visibility of the armor and weapons. The overall style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the detailed armor and the dynamic pose of the figure. There are no visible texts or additional elements in the image.

The Japanese are closest to mastering our reality. In them we can learn the path to heaven. They don't believe in religious mumbo jumbo. Instead, they dedicate themselves to perfect a craft, live in harmony, and provide for the good of all.

None of this is true. Japan is the closest to being a dystopian cyberpunk state. There is a reason why the isekai is so popular. And it certainly doesn't reflect well on the government.

The image is a photograph capturing a group of individuals engaged in a martial arts practice session on a wooden floor. The individuals are wearing black martial arts uniforms, which are typical attire for practitioners of various martial arts disciplines. They are in a kneeling position, with their hands clasped together in front of them, suggesting a moment of focus or preparation.

The setting appears to be an indoor gymnasium, indicated by the visible gymnasium floor and the gym equipment in the background. The lighting in the room is bright, and the focus is on the individuals, with the background slightly blurred, emphasizing the martial arts practice.

There are no discernible texts or logos in the image that provide additional context or information. The style of the image is candid and appears to be taken during a regular practice session rather than a formal event. The photograph is taken from a low angle, which gives a sense of depth and perspective to the scene.

>They don't believe in religious mumbo jumbo.

Shinto and Buddhism are religious mumbo. The samurai Budo is based on both and you can even see it in their modern Kendo.

They receive New Year in Shinto temples, do the Daruma-san (a buddhist patriarch) eye painting for a wish, and other things. This western myth of "asians are smart and irreligious" should have died out now.

>Because we know the samurai practiced pederasty (or as they called it wakashudo) liked the Ancient Greeks and Romans by sleeping with their wakashu apprentices. But why isn't this depicted in samurai media or just media about the Edo Period in general, especially that coming out of Japan? Because it wasn't just the samurai who had sex with wakashu, in Edo Japan adolescent boys were suitable sexual objects for both men and women. Really Edo Japan was a very bisexual culture. I just wish it was strictly between adults rather than adult men and women with adolescent boys. But you can't rewrite the past.

Oh okay cool. So what do we do if the oversoul is into little boys?

The image is a screenshot of a Twitter post with a tweet and a visual image. The tweet is written in white text on a dark background, and it reads: "Saint Michael the Archangel, defend us in battle. Be our defense against the wickedness and snares of the Devil. May God rebuke him, we humbly pray, and do thou, O Prince of the heavenly hosts, by the power of God, cast into hell Satan, and all evil spirits, who prey about the world seeking the ruin of souls. Amen."

The visual image accompanying the tweet is a painting of a figure with wings and a halo, who appears to be a saint or a divine being. The figure is depicted in a dynamic pose, with one arm raised and the other holding a staff, suggesting a sense of power or authority. The figure is wearing a blue robe with a red sash, and the background is dark with a sense of drama and intensity. The figure's face is not visible, but the overall impression is one of a powerful and protective figure. The painting style is reminiscent of Renaissance art, with its attention to detail and the use of color. The figure's position and the surrounding elements suggest a narrative of divine intervention or protection.

>Those whom the Church now calls the Fallen Angels and collectively Satan, the Dragon—overcome, if we have to accept her dictum, by Michael and his Host, that Michael being simply Jehovah himself, one of the subordinate Spirits at best. Therefore, the author is again right in saying: The Greeks believed in the existence of ... daimons. But ... they were anticipated by the Hebrews, who held that there was a class of personating spirits which they designated demons, "personators"... Admitting with Jehovah, who expressly asserts it, the existence of other gods, which ... were personators of the One God, were these other gods simply a higher class of personating spirits, ... which had acquired and exercised greater powers? And is not personation the key to the mystery of the spirit state? But once granting this position, how are we to know that Jehovah was not a personating spirit, a spirit which arrogated to itself that it was, and thus became, the personator of the one unknown and unknowable God? Nay, how do we know that the spirit calling itself Jehovah, in arrogating to itself his attributes did not thus cause its own designation to be imputed to the One who is in reality as nameless as incognizable? –The Secret Doctrine

Nobody hurt your picrel since it's basically just an edgelord version of Abraxas who's in turn a gnostic analogue to the Taoist Wuji (primordial oneness). Basically Baphomet is male and female, good and evil, angel and demon (notice the wings are feathered, usually a symbol of angels), "solve et coagula" because he/she is a symbol of everything.

Masons have a checkerboard floor for a reason, it's a symbol of how reality itself is a polarity. The "G" (originally god of all things (GOAT) but later changed to GAOTU) is above dualities.

Have in mind that this image is not an accurate depiction of the original rebel angel who fell down from grace to the bottomless pit. None of us were there to really know what happened, how things really went down. We do know that history is written from the point of view of the winners, in this case God. The story which gets to our ears is that Satan corrupted himself because of his attributes, that God gave it to him. I don't think this is the case. Why should this be the case? How can an angel corrupt itself and somehow convince 1/3 one of the stars that God is evil? Like, God must have given some kind of reason for Satan to start to get suspicious. If God is really good and perfect and holy and etc, how come Satan have rebelled and managed to convince one third of the angels? If God is really good, how come 1/3 of the angels fall for the rebel angel's deception? How come 1/3 of the angels be willing to be tormented for ever and ever if God was not hiding something? God is always doing this. God hide stuff from us. How many misteryes are kept hidden from us, locked away, things that would give us light and make us more aware of our reality? I can only imagine the kind of vile shit that Satan saw God doing. It's like when you see the behind the scenes. Most people don't see the behind the scenes. Satan saw the behind the scenes. I think what Satan saw made him realize that God was lying and then Satan wanted to do his own thing. I mean, it is very clear that Satan got tired of having to answer to God to the point that Satan wanted to surpass God. This is the ultimate offense. God felt extremely offended when Satan wanted to be better than Him. God doesn't accept that. God wants to be the biggest dick around.

The image is a digital composite of a cat wearing a black t-shirt with the word "THRASHER" in orange and yellow flames on the front. The cat has a spiked mohawk hairstyle and is wearing silver-framed sunglasses. The cat's eyes are visible through the sunglasses, and it appears to be looking directly at the camera. The cat's fur is wet, suggesting it might have been in the rain or swimming. The background is a plain, light-colored wall. The style of the image is humorous and artistic, combining elements of fashion and street culture with a cat's appearance.

Thankfully I'm God and this is my Solipsistic Dream Reality and none of the convoluted evil ontologies presented are real.

Again that is just according to the story most people are familiar with, with the entirety of everything being nothing more than an earthly maze for human souls for one jealous entity's benefit, and the beautiful nature of consciousness being reduced to some sort of test where you have to convince an eternal and omnipotent being that hes your favourite and you like him the most else he will burn you for eternity and have you raped by demons. so, all the silicon valley people lately are getting into jhana meditation and yapping about it on x formerly twitter there's a startup trying to create an app, possibly with a brain scanning headset, that can train you to reach this state quickly, but anyone can theoretically do it when the buddha was going on about meditation this is basically what he was talking about

1. meditate, focusing on one specific thing (usually breathe at the nose/lips) but don't get all up in your head about it, don't tense up
2. eventually you should feel pleasure somewhere in your body
3. notice the pleasure but DON'T try to make it bigger or change it. just notice it. notice the heck out of it
4. this is the jhana: you should feel the pleasure spread through your body and increase until your entire body is full of pleasure
5. experience heroin-level pleasure that rewires your brain but has no addictive component
6. optionally there are 7 more stages including full cessation of consciousness

I've gotten close but not reached it myself. any anons gotten to jhanas?

The image is a nighttime photograph of a narrow alleyway in an urban setting. The alleyway is wet, reflecting the artificial lights from the surrounding buildings and signs. A person is walking away from the camera, carrying a bag over their shoulder. The person is wearing a dark jacket and trousers, and their hair is wet, suggesting recent rain. On the right side of the alleyway, there is a closed metal shutter with the word "ALINCO" written on it. The shutter is illuminated by a bright light, which casts a glow on the surrounding area. The walls of the alleyway are lined with various signs and advertisements, including one that reads "ALINCO" in large, bold letters. The overall atmosphere of the image is dark and moody, with the wet street and illuminated signs contributing to a sense of mystery and solitude.

The image is a nighttime photograph capturing a cityscape with a focus on a high vantage point, likely from a building or a tall structure. The city is densely populated with numerous buildings, some of which are illuminated with lights, creating a vibrant and bustling atmosphere. The buildings vary in height and design, suggesting a mix of commercial and residential structures.

The city is situated on the coast, with the sea visible in the background, and the sky is painted with hues of orange and blue, indicating the presence of a sunset or sunrise.

The city lights are scattered throughout the image, with some lights appearing closer to the foreground and others further away, creating a sense of depth and perspective.

The image is taken from a high angle, providing a bird's eye view of the city. This perspective allows for a comprehensive view of the city's layout and the interplay of natural and urban elements. There are no discernible texts or specific brands in the image. The overall style of the image is realistic, with a focus on capturing the city's nocturnal beauty and the interplay of light and shadow.

THE FIRST JHANA has four factors as described in the suttas: thinking/attention (vitakka), examining/discernment (vicara), rapture (piti) and happiness (sukha). Vitakka and vicara are grouped together and basically describe discursive thought. Some sources translate vitakka-vicara as 'initial and sustained attention', but nowhere in the original suttas does it say that this is a factor of the first jhana. This, like ekaggata, is a later addition. Access concentration to achieve the first jhana is NOT intense. It's the bare minimum of what's needed to get here. Jhana is not just one-pointed, it's not only about focusing. The concept of ekaggata indicates that you can "force" it, but jhana is not just raw concentration. It's bliss, refinement, abandonment, simplicity of mind, all coming to a point, a point of release. Let go. Abandon, simplify, let go. The jhanas can be thought of as stages of letting go. When you are free of the five hindrances, pleasant sensations start to arise in your body. Let go of whatever object of attention you are concentrating on (e.g. the breath) and become aware of these sensations. Do not cling to them, just observe them. You are aware of the body. "Quite secluded from sensual pleasures, secluded from unskillful qualities, he entered and remained in the first absorption, which has the rapture and bliss born of seclusion, while placing the mind and keeping it connected."

These captchas are really annoying.

Anyway my current biggest question about Jhana is whether it genuinely is true that you need to do all the Buddhist shit in order to achieve them.

I mean stuff like having genuine insight into impermanence, forgiving yourself, loving everyone, being sober for a few days prior to meditation, etc.

Obviously you don't need to be a vegetarian but like, once you reach jhana can you be an angry gambling murderer and still reach it? Or do you really need to be a Buddha-like person?

I think I generally have a lot of insight into the truths of the world and understand at least on some level most of the Buddha's teachings but I'm certainly not free of desiring or sensuality or things like that.

From a technical point of view, unresolved psychological issues can be a hindrance to the progress of meditation as these things can come up to the surface or unconsciously block you because you don't want to address it.

If you're an angry gambling murderer, you obviously have some issues, possibly childhood trauma.

Forgiveness, compassion and love can dissolve these blockages.

See the story of Milarepa. He used black magic to take revenge on his uncle doing him real dirty. With magic he killed dozens of innocent people at a wedding and the guilt was eating him up so he sought to learn the dharma to become enlightened in one lifetime and so he became one of the great enlightened beings and most influential people in Tibet.

poor translations are among the biggest problems with discussing this subject it includes the happenstance of some wanting to say that the suttas are unquestionable authority, >biggest question about Jhana is whether it genuinely is true that you need to do all the Buddhist shit in order to achieve them

>I mean stuff like having genuine insight into impermanence, forgiving yourself, loving everyone, being sober for a few days prior to meditation, etc.

metta needs to be a practice outcome before it can be properly called forth the physical aspects are often somewhat neglected on this topic jhana arise out of sheer conditioning samadhi is only possible when hardcore levels of conditioning are attained otherwise the probability for their arising is simply infinitesimal so in order to accomplish these things, one must ask himself "how may I best arrange the conditions for these things to arise"

>(usually breathe at the nose/lips) many don't understand how this instruction can be a barrier to attaining

I've told you all many a time to think of the neurological states refined bodily mechanics imbues quiescence at the neurological level this is the most appropriate baseline to go after for the spark of samadhi does not stay manifest if one does not have mastery at the neurological level taken deeper and we realize that the neurological potentials generated from sense processing directly contribute to the energy potential that forms random thoughts this realization does not come unless one cultivates to such a level >focus on the pleasure bad advice

don't focus on the scenery or arising things focus on that which arranges the conditions for their arising >there are 7 more stages including full cessation of consciousness awareness always remains...that is, "that which sees" the void is not oblivion

I love the sutras, there are actually 4 distinct Samadhis that I discovered from the Sutas. I don't know how people don't read the sutras. I think it's lazy.

For example if you'd read the sutras there are Samadhis, not a single spiritual experience called samadhi. You learn the Samadhis and cycle through them skillfully.

This can be debated. But by analogy, right view doesn't mean there is a single state of mind called "View;" there are multitudinous right views >thus it is generally translated as "concentration."

the problem with this correlation is that most people equate concentration to thinking and thinking consumes the same root potential that samahdi requires an abundance of in order to manifest

I will say this unequivocally, thinking is the opposite of meditative concentration, the opposite of samahdi, the opposite of quiescence

the entire point of rote training is habituation, building the habit energy vector this is key to attaining the ability to keep the mind completely still if the mind cannot be kept still then what's most likely is that one will be unable to attain the great stillness, much less samahdi

>Savitarka Samadhi (Gross Concentration): The mind is focused on a gross object (e.g., a candle flame) along with its name, meaning, and knowledge.

as one who has attained samahdi more times than I can count, I contend that Savitarka samahdi is not even samahdi this is a very key point:

thoughtforms are incompatible with samahdi thinking anything at all, contemplating anything, is incompatible with samahdi these things preclude samahdi from ever manifesting, so it makes no sense to talk about a mythical samahdi that exists concurrently with contemplation. its just not it, period, I dont care who wrote it.

>Savichara Samadhi (Subtle Concentration): The mind is focused on a subtle object (e.g., chakras, internal energy), moving beyond gross qualities this is consistent

>Sananda Samadhi (Blissful Concentration): A state characterized by a deep inner sense of joy or bliss, moving beyond mere analysis.

bliss happens when the endocrine system becomes charged up by the process and activates the top down master endocrine control, sparking the metabolism into higher function - there is no point in even distinguishing this as "some other samahdi"

>Sasmita Samadhi (I-am-ness Concentration): The state of pure awareness, where the meditator is aware only of their own existence (individuality) before merging into higher consciousness

I wonder who wrote this, it doesn't sound like anyone who has actually attained samahdi has written these things and only heard about it from someone else

I've only dabbled in the suttas because I attained samahdi before I ever bothered to read them, so I have my own descriptions based on my personal experiences this last one touches on the part where all phenomena drop away but there's very few who can write about the brilliant spark of spiritual light that arises past these things

I am one of them

If you're interested in my practice I bought a microphone and started reciting Sutras on YouTube.

Maybe you can attain Samadhiraja.

But the one I really recommend is Samadhivajra, which is easy to attain from 2 pages of the Nirvana Sutra.

I am very addicted to Samadhiraja, and it is causing me to drop my worldly pursuits. But I have had bad experiences with religion and wonder if I really want to dedicate my life to Buddha/Vishnu

For now reciting these sutras is making me feel like I've accomplished something. I only just started but my goal is to do the Avatamsaka Sutra, which is 1600 pages. I at the very least want to get to the Nirvana Sutra once I'm more practiced.

>Obviously you don't need to be a vegetarian but like, once you reach jhana can you be an angry gambling murderer and still reach it? Or do you really need to be a Buddha-like person?

>I think I generally have a lot of insight into the truths of the world and understand at least on some level most of the Buddha's teachings but I'm certainly not free of desiring or sensuality or things like that.

among the things that inhibit samahdi:

getting pissed off expending energy on being angry (or stressed, or overly happy, or basically, extremes of any emotion) alcohol (processing alcohol consumes way too much chi, it affects gung levels, which are what's built that help drive the ability to attain significant enough stillness for samahdi to arise)

too much sex just leaves your perineum in a more or less inflamed state and it winds up being that it cannot travel properly for maximally efficient breath mechanics to take place, plus there's the matter of the body having to direct resources there for replenishment that ultimately affects the gung as well

Sure, it's a poor translation like most sanskrit lacking an English equivalent. But claiming to be some advanced spiritual practitioner and behaving like an angry child when triggered by wrong terms used, in this case the title of a book focused on the jhanas, is a bit contradictory and not very constructive to the discussion.

>Yeah I don't really agree with your neurobiological mode of interpreting the Buddhadharma it is a pity that you read my words and cannot equate them properly to the Buddhadharma my words are modern and refined, specific and pointed using terms and concepts unknown to ancient people yet all are in perfect accord with the Buddhadharma

I never longed for samahdi

I did not know its name or the attendant phenomena

I never tried to get anywhere, only refine, refine, refine when the spark arose it was most surprising and unexpected it took a handful of occurrences to learn how to catch it a handful more to learn to stabilize it and eventually I was able to observe it arising, expect it, abide in it equanimously, firm its foundations as I began to recognize the precursors to arising perturbations, accomplishing that stage allows one to keep the spiritual light manifest for however long the moment lasts, which can easily be 2 hours when one's focus is good enough but make no mistake it only manifests for a moment, its up to the practitioner how long that moment is one needs to make no offerings or prayers to attain this one only needs to sit and refine the breath until all turbulence is gone, the motions well programmed into the autonomous functions, and play the keep-the-awareness game

One popular method is to focus on a candle flame.

You can even focus on a pornographic image, or music.

Binaural beats are good, too.

It's about training your mind, it's an advanced form of meditation.

The 'tingly' sensation is actually your nervous system regrowing and making new connections.

That's also what 'tingles' are from ASMR, which is a minor form of this.

Try focusing on an image or candle flame with some gentle binaural beats, that's what works best for me.

The mystical psychosis in silicon valley is their attempt to compensate for raping humanity and heal their self inflicted psychic wounds, but for those who have made their life's purpose a grave spiritual crime, they won't be able to reach peace or enlightenment until after they resolve this karma in physical reality. [10 / 6]The image is a vibrant and intricate piece of digital art that depicts two human figures with a cosmic or otherworldly theme. The figures are rendered in a style that combines elements of surrealism and fantasy, with a focus on the human form and the intricate network of red and blue lines that represent the human body's circulatory system. The background is a swirling, swirling pattern of colors, including shades of blue, purple, and red, which adds to the overall dreamlike and otherworldly atmosphere of the piece. The figures are facing each other, with one figure's head slightly tilted towards the other, suggesting a sense of connection or intimacy between them. The overall composition and color palette evoke a sense of wonder and the unknown.

Cemi model of consciousness says that human conscious activity is electrical perturbation in free space (the head), the nervous system is distributed throughout so it's like including the skin as well.

The neurons are like demodulators that desynchronize and coordinate these electromagnetic perturbations, but if you took away the neuron you are left with the field, which is consciousness itself. These signals operate on chemical speeds which is like static, and refines these impulses to theta thalamic activity in the brain. There's even retinotopic coordinates for positions of the visual field in terms of ganglionic stimulation of retinal cells.

Another feature that's interesting is the Jacobson organ in reptiles mutes the nerve firing when a warm object passes within the receptive field of the organ, some animals even have Ampullae of Lorenzini which allow them to pick up on electric fields as they would pick up say touch.

id say brain not spinal cord because hemicorporectomy exist (when the entire pelvis and everything below it is removed including part of the lower spine) and people live for years after getting one, albeit few people have survived the procedure, best example is the young guy who got half his body and one arm crushed in a forklift accident, it's been like 10 years since he got everything below the belly button removed and him and his gf post on youtube about it still imagine the guy in this picture also missing both arms, still alive fully aware and still himself, so whatever it is that reincarnates or goes to an afterlife has to be inside or transmitted to what's left of this body (assuming there's life after death in the first place for the sake of argument, even if there's a soul but it's destroyed after the body dies that kinda makes life itself and all philosophy spiritual and religion utterly pointless)

The image is a photograph featuring a muscular man with a well-defined physique. He is shirtless and appears to be in a gym setting, as indicated by the orange and gray walls and the flooring. The man is seated on the floor with his hands clasped in front of him, and he is looking directly at the camera. His facial expression is neutral, and he has a strong, defined chest.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a text overlay that reads "BORN DIFFERENT" in white capital letters. The style of the image is a standard, high-resolution photograph with a focus on the subject, likely for promotional or artistic purposes. The lighting is even, and the background is out of focus, drawing attention to the man in the foreground.

Maybe think of the soul as analogous to magnetism. When you cut a magnet in half, both halves have the same polarity. Divide both halves in half, and they too will possess the same polarity as the original whole. Magnetism is embodied wholly in the material, wholly in all of its parts, not as parts, but as wholes, and is altered from without.

Likewise with the soul (I think).

The image presents a detailed diagram of the human body's energy system, divided into seven main sections labeled "SUBLIE BODIES" and "SUBLIE BODY CHAKRA." The diagram is color-coded, with each section corresponding to a different chakra, and the colors range from red to violet, indicating the intensity of the energy.

At the top of the image, the title "SUBLIE BODIES" is written in white text, followed by the word "SUBLIE" in a smaller font size. Below this title, the word "CHAKRA" is written in white text, and the corresponding chakra is labeled in white text.

The diagram is divided into two main sections: the upper section, labeled "SUBLIE BODIES," and the lower section, labeled "SUBLIE BODY CHAKRA." The upper section is divided into two columns, each representing a different chakra. The left column is labeled "SUBLIE BODIES" and contains the chakra names in white text, while the right column is labeled "SUBLIE BODY CHAKRA" and contains the chakra names in white text.

The lower section, labeled "SUBLIE BODY CHAKRA," is divided into two columns, each representing a different chakra. The left column is labeled "SUBLIE BODY CHAKRA" and contains the chakra names in white text, while the right column is labeled "SUBLIE BODY CHAKRA" and contains the chakra names in white text.

The diagram also includes a legend in the bottom right corner, which provides a scale of the colors and their corresponding chakra names. The legend is color-coded, with the scale ranging from 0 to 10, with 0 representing the lowest chakra and 10 representing the highest chakra.

The image is a digital illustration, and the colors are vibrant and the text is clear, making it easy to read and understand the information presented. The overall style of the image is educational and informative, designed to provide a visual representation of the human energy system.

Your soul enters thru the top of your head like a cone facing downwards, it's inside you AND outside of you and you can extend it far away by extending your awareness. Like if I'm on stage and you're up in the bleachers I can look at you or think of you and extend my aura or awareness up to you.

Ghosts do the same thing when their tryna learn how to move shit without a body. That's why they knock shit down and turn on lights and do weird shit. That's them tryna learn how to move things. Then when they do they can do things like touch you or bring a box in your room or cause a wreck or something to happen or a fire or something when they get really good. They get good by feeding off fear. It makes them stronger. But they aren't bad or evil. They're dead humans experiencing being a ghost for whatever reason.

Your soul is your spirit or essence. It's the same thing. Your mind goes with your body, but your higher-self and your guides influence your mind and keep you on track of who you are and who you're supposed to become.

The image is a page from a scientific journal, specifically the "Journal of these topics" as indicated at the bottom. The page is titled "Changes in Heart Transplant Recipients That Parallel the Personas of Their Donors" and is authored by Paul Pennell, Ph.D., and Gary E. R. Schwartz, Ph.D. The authors are affiliated with the University of Arizona.

The abstract provides a brief overview of the research, stating that it is generally assumed that learning is restricted to neural and immune systems. However, the systems memory hypothesis predicts that all systems, including the heart, can learn.

The authors propose a study to investigate whether heart transplant recipients can learn from their donors. They will conduct a series of experiments to determine if the recipients can learn from the history of the donor.

The abstract also mentions that the recipients will be divided into two groups: one with a history of heart transplant and the other with no history of heart transplant. The recipients will be given a task to recognize which had received heart or heart-lung transplants. The authors aim to determine if the recipients can learn from the history of the donor.

The visual clues in the image include the title of the paper, the authors' names, the affiliations, and the abstract text. The text is in a serif font, which is common for academic papers, and the layout is typical of a scientific journal article. The image is in grayscale, and the page number is 131, indicating that this is the first page of the article.

You are not the body the body is just a lump of matter youre using the same way you're not your car it's simply a vehicle.

Do you think that all your past lives you're still those things right now? A bug a dog a lady a plant? This is nonsense, all your bodily relationships and memories end after death, for instance we think "this is my mother my friend my family" but these are just people you're sitting next to on a bus sort to speak, none of them are your true family and once the ride is over you're separated and it's like you both never knew each other to begin with.

The only true eternal relationships are your position with Vishnu on the planet Vaikuntha, this is called svarupa siddhi remembering your true eternal identity, everything you incarnate and reincarnate as in the prison punishment that is existence in samsara is just characters.

The only reason we are here is because we disobeyed Lord Krishna and wanted to be independent so our conditioned souls are here for harsh punishment and re education until we learn to submit to his lotus feet and accept our position as his eternal servant.

Anywhere there is the complexity of a brain it acts as an antenna for consciousness. Actually there is "good reception" everywhere in the material universe, you just need a working antenna.

Look up integrated information theory (IIT) to know what makes a functional antenna.

>"the awareness that is experiencing this reality that may or may not reincarnate or go to an afterlife after death"

It's not a soul, and its not inside the body, although it is conditioned and structured by processes inside the body.

It's not a standing phenomena and it doesn't exist from its own side. It's inconstant and unstable. Not the owner or bearer of the body, and the body is not the owner or bearer of it. The inside of the body is a black box to awareness because awareness is situated at the boundary conditions of the senses and always oriented toward the world.

The body is the constraining and structuring mechanism, and awareness arises with it incidentally, bcause the body has the conditions for it to land. By landing, think of a seed that drops on the soil and in a field, where the conditions of the field allow it to sprout.

Asking where awareness is is a category error because its a process made up of events. Ask when it is and under what conditions it arises.

"Many strands of modern Western occultism draw heavily from the Jewish mystical tradition of Kabbalah, particularly as it was reinterpreted in Renaissance and later esoteric circles. Beginning with figures like Giovanni Pico della Mirandola, Christian scholars adapted Kabbalistic concepts—such as the sefirot, the Tree of Life, and divine emanation—into Hermetic and magical frameworks. In the 19th and 20th centuries, groups like the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn further systematized these ideas, integrating them with astrology, alchemy, and ritual magic. As a result, much of modern occult symbolism and practice reflects a transformed, syncretic version of Kabbalistic cosmology."

There are very few positive, genuine energies out there, on the astral plane, which are accessible from this dimension. This is because our dimension is most closely linked with the darkness. With the negative polarities. We're below the midpoint...there is a force of spiritual gravity pulling us downward into further darkness, on this plane. This more downward pressure makes it more difficult for us to reach forward into positive planes. You may easily reach into planes which falsely appear positive, or which pertain entities who falsely appear positive...but these are illusions created by the darkness. These are, in most cases, the demons masquerading as the light.

For people who are adept, we can understand positive energy in the rare cases where we encounter it. The positive energies are rare. Very rare. For those who are unadept, they will most certainly be manipulated and pulled deeper into the darkness.

But the other night I witnessed one. I witnessed her watching me and I asked her a question...

I asked if there was any hope for me and my love who has been estranged from me for many years now...

My love, who is possessed by demons, and living a life of darkness and evil...

This entity told me "no. there is no hope." Because I know how rare positive entities are, and I know to heed them in the rare instances when I encounter them...I know now there truly is no hope...

...of course, the situation is thus that any rational person would have given up more than a decade and a half ago. My love wants nothing to do with me. My love only loves evil. Her body is full of drugs. Her body is adorned with tattoos of demons. These tattoos which are permanent are invoking demons directly into her body.

[178 / 19]The image is a close-up photograph of a tiger. The tiger has a predominantly orange and black coloration with white stripes on its face and chest. Its eyes are a striking blue, and it has a calm and composed expression. The tiger's fur appears to be thick and fluffy, and it has a slight sheen to it, suggesting it might be in a natural environment. The background is blurred, but it seems to be a natural setting with green foliage, indicating that the tiger is in a forest or a natural habitat. There are no visible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic, capturing the tiger in a natural setting.

Reincarnation only makes sense if you remembered AND there was nothing else to do in death.

Like if you died and it was just big emptiness limited by your own thoughts I could understand the idea of "living" again to get more experiences.

But the fact that you forget them is so utterly stupid. Even forgetting the basic "this isn't my first life time" would be an incredible memory to have but no we don't get that. We have no clue if we're doing the right thing that we wanted and anyone saying that your higher self does know is just coping. To me it feels like reincarnation is just a coping mechanism for stupid people that have failed to become aware of what they are spiritually capable of in death so they just devolve themselves back here out of fear.

It's pretty simple, frameworks that use reincarnation believe there's a "component" to the being that is immortal, this would be "the spirit". It's the spirit that reincarnates or gets recycled, not the soul, which is what constitutes memories and egoic information. This is why there's not continuity of identity through reincarnation cycles.

The common mistakes with reincarnation are thinking it's a personal process based on moral factors, and also conflating "the spirit" with "the soul". In the frameworks that use reincarnation, it's as impersonal as the water cycles, but people also don't understand the concept of karma in these frameworks and they misconstrue it, adding moral elements to reincarnation. Most people also can't be bothered understanding the nuances of "spirit/soul". This is why reincarnation in mainstream discussion ends up becoming another silly thing like heaven/hell in exoteric abrahamic dogma.

Mythical greek religion decayed and brought the eastern mysteries which culminated into platonism and inspired christian gnosticism.

Karma is treated as a purely causal element, a convoluted, impersonal tapestry of cause and effect. It's people who don't understand this clearly the ones who make it about morals. For example, blaming "the sins of the parents" in a moralistic way for birthing a deformed child, or blaming the child himself for doing something "bad" in a previous iteration. Truth is most of the karmic consequences one experiences remain unknown due to their relational complexity. The kid isn't deformed because someone behaved badly, the kid is deformed because the mother was unknowingly exposed to elements that affected the fetus negatively or one (or both) of the parents were carrying faulty genetics from less than ideal match ups in their ancestry.

Karma is purely causal and morals only provide guidelines to mitigate causal "whiplash", but these morals are usually common sense and karma will still judge you every instant of your existence even if you think you're the "best behaved" person alive, whatever that is. Such is causality.

>You sin in the afterlife so instead of lake of fire you live another life on a terrestrial world incarnated in the flesh

It actually points to mercy of the Creator.

The Christian belief of eternal Hell and you get 1 chance is merciless on top of the absurd illogical predestination in Christian scriptures regardless of denomination belief.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character that resembles a green frog with a muscular physique. The frog is depicted in a dynamic pose, with its arms raised and legs spread apart, as if it is in the midst of a powerful movement. The character is set against a backdrop of a city skyline with tall buildings, suggesting an urban environment. Overlaying the image is a text that reads, "It was revealed to me in a dream." The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in a bright green, matching the color of the frog's skin. The text is centered on the image and is slightly tilted, adding a sense of movement to the overall composition.

In the bottom left corner of the image, there is a question mark, which is commonly used to indicate uncertainty or a question. The question mark is in a smaller font size compared to the main text, and it is colored in a darker shade of green, which contrasts with the lighter green of the main text.

The overall style of the image is cartoonish and exaggerated, with a focus on the character's strength and the cityscape in the background. The use of bright colors and dynamic poses gives the image a lively and energetic feel.

I believe in it because I have had memories of two distinct past lives. One tormented me in nightmares as a little toddler, things I could have had no understanding of at that age. It turned out to be a false memory implanted by an archon to traumatize me and laden me with guilt in order to block me from reaching my full potential. The other life was very real and when I lucid dream I can transition into that other personality and see things from that time period that I also had no knowledge of before. Things I've seen and then verified upon waking include a full title of a book, a historical name of a region that's no longer used, colonial activity in that area that I didn't know about, and a specific regional dessert.

>absurd illogical predestination in Christian scriptures

Imo this is a residue of Gnostic belief in preexistence of spirits and the idea that some people don't have spirits that got muddled during absorption into orthodox doctrine.

Jesus said, "Congratulations to those who are alone and chosen, for you will find the kingdom. For you have come from it, and you will return there again." (Thomas 49)

"For those whom he foreknew he also predestined to be conformed to the image of his Son, in order that he might be the firstborn within a large family" (Romans 8:29)

"If a shepherd has a hundred sheep and one of them has gone astray, does he not leave the ninety-nine on the mountains and go in search of the one that went astray?" (Matthew 18:12)

"You do not believe because you do not belong to my sheep. My sheep hear my voice. I know them, and they follow me. I give them eternal life, and they will never perish. No one will snatch them out of my hand." (John 10:26-28)

"These are those who cause divisions, psychical men, not possessing spirit." (Jude 1:19)

The image is a diagrammatic representation of the concept of "Life, Death, and Infinite Time." The diagram is divided into three main sections, each with a title and a description.

The top section, labeled "Life, Death," shows a black and white flowchart with arrows pointing from the "end" to the "finite" and back to the "end." The flowchart indicates that the "end" is the point where the "life" ends and the "finite" begins.

The middle section, labeled "What actually happens," shows a black and white flowchart with arrows pointing from the "end" to the "finite" and back to the "end." The flowchart suggests that the "end" is the point where the "life" ends and the "finite" begins.

The bottom section, labeled "What actually happens," shows a black and white flowchart with arrows pointing from the "end" to the "finite" and back to the "end." The flowchart suggests that the "end" is the point where the "life" ends and the "finite" begins.

The text accompanying the diagram explains that the "life" is a state of non-existence, or "death," and that the "finite" is a state of existence, or "life." The text also mentions that if "death" were to be a real thing, it would happen for the shortest amount of time possible, i.e., all time, and that if "life" were infinite, it would not exist at all.

The conclusion of the text states that the "life" is infinite, just as matter can't be destroyed, only transformed, and that the "life" state is the same with consciousness. The image is a visual representation of the philosophical concept of "Life, Death, and Infinite Time," using a flowchart to illustrate the relationship between the "end" and the "finite" and the "end" and the "finite" in the context of the "life" and the "finite" in the "life" state.

Possibly this idea is implied even in Mark, in the parable of the sower, when Jesus refers to those who fall away after receiving the word because they have no root. At least, Gnostic texts seem to interpret the idea that way.

"All that have emanated from the Father, then, are fullnesses, and the roots of all that have emanated from him are within the one who caused them all to grow. He gave them their destinies." (Gospel of Truth)

"For those who have no root have no fruit either. They think to themselves, "I've come into being," but they'll dissolve by themselves. Because of this, those who didn't exist at all won't exist." (Gospel of Truth)

"The Savior said, All nature, all formations, all creatures exist in and with one another, and they will be resolved again into their own roots." (Gospel of Mary)

I can see why orthodoxy got rid of the idea since suspecting some people of being NPCs might easily lead to treating others poorly or neglecting to help them. But, on the other hand, I think it's a little better than what came out of the muddling, the theory that God produces many spirits for the specific purpose of sending them off to be tormented forever.

Here's how it works anon. Every living thing has an invisible and completely undetectable essence called a soul that leaves the body at death.

During life all souls have a running "credit score" if you will, or karma, that's based on if they were good or bad. Their karmic credit score decide whats kind of biological vehicle they can inhabit next.

So imagine you have top credit, you get to be a king in your next life. But if you are bad, and let's say you murder someone or disobey your master, then your karmic credit score only lets you come back as a bug.

And that is how reincarnation works and it totally has nothing to do with spiritually justifying oppressive social hierarchies in ancient India.

If you were tasked with creating a dimensionally-capped prison for godlike immortal beings, would you think electrocuting them to a state of amnesia between incarnations is "stupid"? Or fiendishly elegant? All you'd need to add is a biological developmental lag such that they cannot speak during the early years when they still vaguely remember, and a culture of "education" in which the subject is directed to focus on the illusion in front of them and believe the current experience is all there is... Add in some belief systems that restrict immortality to the future, not the past, and the trap is complete.

Reincarnation is a lie, this is the truth:

>And thence I went to another place, and the mountain [and] of hard rock. And there was in it four hollow places, deep and wide and very smooth. How smooth are the hollow places and deep and dark to look at. Then Raphael answered, one of the holy angels who was with me, and said unto me: 'These hollow places have been created for this very purpose, that the spirits of the souls of the dead should assemble therein, yea that all the souls of the children of men should assemble here. And these places have been made to receive them till the day of their judgement and till their appointed period [till the period appointed], till the great judgement (comes) upon them.' I saw (the spirit of) a dead man making suit, and his voice went forth to heaven and made suit. And I asked Raphael the angel who was with me, and I said unto him: 'This spirit which maketh suit, whose is it, whose voice goeth forth and maketh suit to heaven?' And he answered me saying: 'This is the spirit which went forth from Abel, whom his brother Cain slew, and he makes his suit against him till his seed is destroyed from the face of the earth, and his seed is annihilated from amongst the seed of men.' Then I asked regarding it, and regarding all the hollow places: 'Why is one separated from the other?' And he answered me and said unto me: 'These three have been made that the spirits of the dead might be separated. And such a division has been made (for) the spirits of the righteous, in which there is the bright spring of water. And such has been made for sinners when they die and are buried in the earth and judgement has not been executed on them in their lifetime. Here their spirits shall be set apart in this great pain till the great day of judgement and punishment and torment of those who curse for ever and retribution for their spirits.

>I find the idea of reincarnation absurd.

Ok, you can think it is absurd. That's alright. But just because you think it is absurd it doesn't mean it is absurd. if the soul is eternal then it makes sense that it can go back to this physical reality or physical realm. The bible say we onlive live once and then we die. But this is not true because the bible contradicts this by saying God will resurrec the dead and judge them. So this means that they live one time, they died, got resurrected and where judged. Then this means they lived more than one time. The bible is not 100% accurate when it says we onlive live once and after that is judgement. It does say this in one part, but then it contradicts this by saying that God will resurrected the head so this means people are actually going to live more than one time. So there's an error here. The new testament is cotracting the old. But I'm preetty sure the christian golem will say that the bible is perfect and there's zero contradictions and that we are demon possessed or something like that.

Knowing the names and faces of people you've never met, the locations and layouts of small towns you've never visited, and random facts about historical places that actually check out as true when researched is weird. The hard part was trying to put it all together as it kept coming back at random like when something jogs your memory. It took years to basically understand which life was which and when each was. I know I probably don't have it perfect, but it helped me a lot to take time to try to understand what I was remembering.

I do not subscribe to any one tradition and am a student of many ideas here.

As much as I can gather, here is the common ground. You are made of breath or smoke, light, and a seasoning or charge. Your breath and your light remain unchanged in eternity, but your seasoning is harvested by things we would consider gods, and your breath and light are eventually thrown back into another growing jar.

It's like we are plants to be harvested. The roots are replanted and a new plant is eventually grown for harvest. In a replanted state, you lose connection with memories of the harvesting and memories of what happened before too fade, but remain to you in dreams and in a sense, the seasoning you have acquired over the cycles will leave traces on your containment vessels.

Escape from here is possible if you wish to end the cycle. Eventually, we all will. It's really just a luck of the draw. Karma is so much less of a big deal than it is made to be, though it can determine some lesser components of your cycles, it's largely "random" in a sense. In eternity, you exist as a polymorph of all sorts of potential, some of which is exclusively expressed every incarnation. This isn't a school. It's more like a cosmic north Korea.

Disparity is a product of the dissolution of the Godhead, therefore all consciousness is the same consciousness experiencing itself through different subjectivities. If you believe human logic so somewhat apply to the grand scheme, reincarnation is somewhat inevitable.

Imagine a computer spitting out random letter sequences. At some point you will read the work of a famous writer.

If we have infinite time to do this then all possible letter sequences will happen at some point and reappear infinitely.

So if we expect time to be eternal and matter reestablishing densely enough for life to form, then it is guaranteed that your consciousness will come into existence again with infinite life modifications. We don't have to know how consciousness works to make this deduction, just that it exists.

Of course there could be another limiting variable, for example a "meta reality" which only allows the same thing to ever happen or only once.

But limiting the variables to infinity, time and density of matter reincarnation could be rather likely.

I know. But the point is that people lived, died and resurrected. What does this mean? It means exactly what I said. You deny it because you are probably a christian golem who believes that the bible is perfect and has zero contradictions. But again, let's break this down in order to show to the anons who have a brain that the bible is indeed contradicting itself.

Live: 1 - remain alive; be alive at a specified time; spend one's life in a particular way or under particular circumstances; supply oneself with the means of subsistence; survive in someone's mind; be remembered; have an exciting or fulfilling life; 2 - make one's home in a particular place or with a particular person.

To die: 1 - (of a person, animal, or plant) stop living; be killed for (a cause); have a specified status at the time of one's death; become extinct; be forgotten; become less loud or strong; (of a plant) decay from the tip toward the root; die one after another until few or none are left; (of a fire or light) stop burning or gleaming; (of a machine) stop functioning or run out of electric charge; 2 - used to emphasize that one wants to do or have something very much; 3 - have an orgasm.

To resurrect: 1 - restore (a dead person) to life; 2. revive the practice, use, or memory of (something); bring new vigor to.

To life: 1 - the condition that distinguishes animals and plants from inorganic matter, including the capacity for growth, reproduction, functional activity, and continual change preceding death;

Alright. This is enough, I think. We gotta get technical here because the anon is trying to mislead you guys and he is trying to defend the bible. Just read the definition of the words. It is there. Once you are born you are in life living. After some time you die. Once you die you are not living anymore. You lived one time and now you are dead. But then God resurrects you. God restores your body and call your soul and restore you to life. What is this? You are living again! You lived twice. This is the second time that you are alive. You died one time, remember? And now you have been resurrected and you are living again. This means this is the second time you are living. So we can logically say, objectively say, that if the resurrection is true then we do live more than once and if reincarnation is real we also live more than one time. There's no way around it. you are wrong, buddy. Anons, don't let this christian golem deceive you guys. The bible has contradictions. Lots of it.

If life is basically a virtual reality game it makes perfect sense. Whatever happens here is not that important since your being goes back to it's spirit form. What's important is what you learn and how you evolve. A lifetime of hardship is the blink of an eye in eternity, or rather the timeless.

The image is a candid photograph of a man sitting on the ground in front of a colorful mural. The man has dreadlocks and is wearing a red and pink striped skirt. He is seated with his legs crossed and his hands resting on his knees. His face is obscured by a large, dark, and somewhat distorted smile. The mural behind him features a variety of colorful figures, including a woman in a blue dress and a man in a red and yellow outfit. The ground around the man is covered with a blanket and various items, including a small bowl and a plastic bag. The style of the image is informal and seems to capture a moment in a public space. If you can't accept and take accountability, but instead live in perpetual victimhood, you are me, blame everyone, blame God and not work on these wounds. You're going to be stuck in that mental state of suffering.

You're making assumptions that there's a greater central being consciously directing everything. Life is largely self organizing according to physical laws and the innate nature of man, the psychology and biological needs. Let's instead say this greater being, or God, experience everything that has a spirit. In animistic culture basically everything has a spirit. Living beings, plants, trees, mountains, lakes and rivers.

Now multiple that with the billions of galaxies, star systems and planets with spirits experiencing life in various forms.

It seems like once back in the afterlife (or forever life) you have recollection of all your past physical lives, with "time" your going to forget about the suffering of your physical lives.

It would be pointless and defeat the purpose of living as a human with its hardship if you knew that this life in a physical vessel is just a temporary experience.

It comes down to your ability to use cognitive imagery as a form of actual perception. If you don't have much experience, aptitude, skill, or ability then you don't have what it takes to directly verify the concept yourself. A lack of personal observation of enough variations of phenomenon to become oriented to the functions of out of body consciousness and perception leaves you in a condition of dependency on others to report to you about what exists in these realms. If you are trying to learn from someone who only has a fear of the functions of their own mind and consciousness as a foundation for their narrow views of the world then you will be very unlikely to grow beyond the boundaries they have managed to keep themselves within. Real knowledge doesn't require fear based narrative and omission of observation. It also doesn't rely on second hand reports.

Only you can verify your own perception.. at least at our current technology level. The aspects of development that you have to attain for this particular aspect of our existence are functions of remote viewing out of body perception and subsequent management of cognitive imagery. There are several things you need experiences with; you have to establish your ability to perceive another person who you can verify the physical material accuracy of the perception afterwards.. and you have to establish that you are able to perceive something at a different time than the present.. you have to experience the functions of your consciousness that cause you to 'see' through the perspective of the eyes of another person who is living at the same time as you are. This is much more common while interacting with native American heritage groups so that might help you get the experience needed.. but then once you have experience with all those things you have to gain observations from the perspective of other people, or whatever other beings, who have lived their lives in years prior to your own current incarnation.

Anonymous Fri 13 Feb 2026 16:55:41 No.41966695 Report

Continued..

This is the prerequisite experience to be able to begin discovery of how to verify whether you are seeing a life of another consciousness or you are seeing a life lived by yourself at a time when your consciousness was attached to a different body. The process involves examination of the imagery within your mind to discern the neurological structures involved in the visual memory in each instance.. you have many images within your mind. Even without studying cognitive imagery as a form of actual perception you have various types of imagery in your neurological structures that are involved in functions of memory. Some images arrived directly delivered by your own first person perspective in response to your own 'physical' senses while others arrived in your mind by means of imagination or through observation of deliberately created illusions such as watching a video or looking at a photograph. If you look very closely scrutinizing within your ability to see the images within your mind you can discern differences. In the case of imagery gathered by functions of cognitive perception this difference is enough to establish the nature of the connection between your current consciousness and a perception of a previous body it was attached to.

Alternatively you can recover the memory of the events that take place between these periods of incarnation but this is significantly more advanced and requires a lot more experience to be properly oriented to the context of geospatial orientation. Most humans can't verify this for themselves and so they prefer to imagine that no one else can either. They trust the mainstream media narrative to deliver to them the full depths of the universe, all in tightly controlled 30 minute sitcom formats with canned laughter supporting their limited and emotionally sensitive irrational beliefs.

If you don't think this is real you have far more to learn than you yet realize

On the contrary, reincarnation is the most intuitive, coherent, and easy-to-understand idea among all traditions and beliefs about the afterlife. If you think about it, everything that surrounds our existence consists of cycles: days, weeks, lunar phases, seasons, years. Life itself is a repeated succession of events. Nature, in its balance, replaces death with new life, and eventually brings that life to an end so that another may take its place

If you look at the existence of insects, when an ant dies, it is immediately replaced by the next one. It does not have consciousness like a person does, but it does have a will. That will is programmed to fulfill a mission. It is entirely plausible to say that when an ant dies, it immediately reincarnates into another, because it functions as a kind of hive mind projected and dispersed across different individuals, all of which are part of a greater mission.

It is easy to understand this with an ant. It becomes more complex with human beings, because humans possess memory and self-awareness. These do not remain, at least not in their entirety, after death. However, part of you, your genetic code and the "transcendental reality" of which you were a part (such as mission, survival, creation, and exploration), remains in your descendants, in your brothers and sisters, and in your people, your nation.

There is growing research suggesting that what our genetic code transmits may be far more than we assume, perhaps even allowing for inherited memories or intuitions from our ancestors. What is certain is that we are part of a vast current, and sometimes we do not realize that we act propelled by it. Our ancestors created a world, and that world shaped their children. Those children reshaped their environment, and that environment shaped the next generation. This reciprocal and continuous relationship has an origin that can even be described as spiritual and transcendental

Therefore, if you let me finish the idea, it is understandable why so many cultures, religions, and peoples believe in some form of reincarnation. I do not believe in it myself, but to me it seems far more obvious than the idea of eternal life. The Abrahamic religions are more complex. Christianity, for example, can seem almost counterintuitive. In some sense, it appears unnatural (not as a criticism)... there's a deeper level of complexity. Many of its ideas have even extended into later secular and scientific thought.

People who have not developed their ability to use consciousness as a means of perception decide to make many arbitrary declarations about reality that they presume to be "necessarily true" or "logical" and "rational". Little do they know about the subject. It is actually possible to gain direct observation of phenomena that they are assuming doesn't exist based only on their own personal inability to make use of it. Imagine how the world would be if people were raised to adulthood with their eyes taped shut..

everyone artificially made blind.. while a few walked among them with the "normal" ability to see. This is a fair comparison to what is actually occurring.. yet the directions into which your abilities can actually reach are beyond what you are familiar with.

There are stages of development that you have to attain personal observation of, and formulate comprehension of, in order to make sense of orientation to the out of body perspective.. the experience of verification that you are actually capable of perceiving tangible physical reality is just a tiny first step. You can literally become so clearly oriented to the context of your own presence that you can consciously move around out of body; consciously 'lucid' while your body is "sleeping". To do so gives you the opportunity to look at things that you physically don't have access to or experience with that you can then go to verify after you are fully conscious awake and have documented your observations. Extensive familiarity with this is the beginning of the ability to usefully perceive beyond this tangible orientation.

Much of what exists in these ancient "claims" of abstract phenomenon are actually based on directly gathered observations not just of a single person but by numerous individuals across many generations. Not everyone learns to see with their mind.. but those who have are very often in agreement on interpretation of what they are seeing ..that a non seeing outsider can't.

if they haven't learned how to remain fully conscious while they are sleeping it is not surprising that they fail to do so after they leave their body for the last time to begin their orientation to the conditions available to the out of body consciousness. there are many things available.. just as there are many things available to you when you go out of your house.. you can perhaps easily imagine them.. but will you do them? the most likely probability is that you will leave your home only in a well worn routine that you have engaged in only due to structures of obligation and commitment over which you have little control. this is the nature of what most people will be doing after death.. waiting for others more competent to set them in motion pursuing obligations they are compelled to engage in with little conscious thought of their own brought to bear.

if you can't watch yourself going to sleep and then retain your full memory of the events during the time you were sleeping right up until the moment you returned to your body and got back into it.. with full clear vision of the process.. fully aware before during and after reentering your body... then it is not going to be much different for you after your body has been rendered incapable of supporting biological living functions..

if you can't do this at least once in your life you will likely be disoriented and dependent on others for guidance once you find yourself out of body with no other option. fortunately for you there are such 'others' present who will undoubtedly involve themselves in your circumstances on that occasion.. though you will have no comprehension of them or what they are doing. they will be glad to observe your illusions and support whatever you imagine is occurring to keep you immersed within your limited and limiting illusions.

You're simply ignorant of Western reincarnation in Roman Neo-Platonic Polytheism because of Christcuckery. There's a small book called "On the Gods and the World" by Sallustius which is the basic introductory text on NP!

Why is anything like it is? Sometimes you just have to let things be what they are, whatever this may mean, as you seek to accurately fathom exactly what it is. Sometimes correct understanding can occur quickly.. while some things require long periods of time to gather tiny gains forward towards comprehension. An acorn becomes an old oak tree gradually and only given the circumstances that allow this to happen. Much of knowledge comes from understanding to tend to the pursuit of discovery with no sense of expectation. We do not control what exists by supporting it with our beliefs.. if we choose to immerse our selves in the indulgence of illusion there is no way for anything to divide us away from illusion to force us to be aware of truth.

Knowledge arrives.. emerges from the monotony through the events of our existence. You would be more content with all of your worldly needs satisfied.. but what obstacles are you really facing? Reality is before you.. you choose what to focus on. Some see opportunity in a field of obstacles.. some see only obstacles in the same field of opportunities. Rare knowledge sits among the common. Find what you will Suffering is a product of attachment..

To me it feels inevitable, like fact. Nothing ever comes from nothing, and nothing ever fully goes away. Everything is constantly transforming. Even the sciencefags acknowledge that energy cannot be created or destroyed, only transformed. So when a person dies, where does there energy go? Maybe it enters another creature, or perhaps it powers a lightbulb. It's all the same thing.

>I do not believe in it myself, but to me it seems far more obvious than the idea of eternal life.

From the same position here, reincarnation even makes more sense as an explanation for the religious myth of eternal life, if it originates from the same concept that natural forces exchange resources in cycles where energy is transformed rather than destroyed. It becomes a natural extension of our observation that bodies "return to the earth" after death and a rational adaptation to the fear of dying "in spirit" to imagine that the soul exists as a natural element that will recycle like water.

I do believe reincarnation is real, but I don't think its this inevitable only option. Its one of the many possibilities in death and you don't have to do it. Some people just really like this world for some reason and want to keep looping over and over in it.

[21 / 2]The image depicts a silhouette of a person in a meditative pose, sitting in a lotus position with their hands resting on their knees. The person's body is oriented towards the viewer, and their head is turned slightly to the left. The background is a gradient of green, transitioning from a darker shade at the top to a lighter one at the bottom, creating a sense of depth.

In the center of the image, there is a silhouette of a human body with seven chakras, each represented by a different colored circle. The chakras are arranged in a vertical line, starting from the top with the first chakra being the most prominent, followed by the second, then the third, and so on, down to the seventh chakra at the bottom. Each chakra is depicted with a different color, and they are arranged in a sequence that corresponds to the seven main chakras in the human body.

The image does not contain any text or additional elements. The style of the image is artistic and symbolic, often used in spiritual or metaphysical contexts to represent the concept of chakras or energy centers in the human body. The use of a silhouette and the color scheme emphasizes the idea of the person's inner energy or life force, which is often associated with the chakras.

The image displays a stylized representation of a medical staff, with a central figure resembling a caduceus symbol, which is a winged staff with a caduceus between the two snakes. The staff is composed of a purple caduceus at the top, a golden caduceus in the middle, and a golden staff at the bottom. Above the golden staff, there is a purple flower-like emblem.

The central figure is flanked by two snakes, one on each side, with the snake on the left being blue and the one on the right being red. The snakes appear to be intertwined, with the blue snake on the left and the red snake on the right.

The staff is composed of seven circular symbols, each with a different color: red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet. These symbols are arranged in a vertical sequence, starting from the top with the purple symbol, followed by the golden symbol, the blue symbol, the red symbol, the yellow symbol, the green symbol, the blue symbol, the indigo symbol, the violet symbol, and finally the red symbol at the bottom.

The background of the image is white, and there are no texts present in the image. The style of the image is illustrative, with a focus on the symbolic representation of the medical staff.

There are requirements.

The guru in question has to have a proper guru parampara(lineage) dating back to at least 3 previous gurus before him.

All the gurus must have done the same practice and gained siddhi(perfection) in their practice.

Never EVER try doing this stuff on your own.

If you don't have a guru or wish to find one, you can do simple naam japa (name chanting) with a mala.

If you are meant for the practice then nature will ensure that you have a guru.

If you are not meant for it, it may take up to hundreds of lifetimes before nature allows you to progress.

Pure sanskrit, anything else is shabara.

Don't think for a moment that shabara doesn't work though.

Shabara works with all the languages present in nature(including English).

The only downside of shabara is that if you gain siddhis through it, it is more likely to go away as soon as you earned it(unless you maintain it) whereas proper practice can make siddhis stay for longer.

If you misuse your power (assuming you went with shabara) then it will backfire on you in a very nasty way.

Please find a proper guru who has attained siddhi of the practice you wish to go forth with.

You can do simple naam Japan which doesn't require initiation.

There are, widely speaking, 4 types of initiations.

1. The guru will look into your eyes.
2. The guru will touch your body in specific places.
3. The guru will tell you the mantra to chant in your ears in a way others nearby cannot hear it.
4. The guru will make you sit in asana and do the same in front of you where you will find that he will put his feet in your lap.

The 4th one is the ucchistha deeksha (best initiation) that is possible.

Enough of me telling you about these tiny crumbs of info I happen to have within.

Now, you gotta tell me a few things.

Which deity do you resonate with the most?

Who is your kula devata/devi?

If you don't know who your kula devata/devi is yet, then you must first find out before going into any practices.

You will need a purohit or practicing tantrik to help you find this info.

Remember this anon: You making an effort now ensures that you will succeed in getting siddhi of your kula devata/devi sooner rather than later.

Don't go chasing siddhis other than the siddhi of being one with your kula devata/devi, trust me on this.

Note: In this context "sooner" can mean anything from a few years to a few lifetimes depending on your practice, your karma and your poorva janam samskaras(past life sacred rites).

Personally, I'd recommend you go nowhere near the deceiver.

It could have just been something of a dark nature giving you visions to confuse you.

Such tests are common.

Do you mind if I tell you a little secret?

Time is not linear to such beings.

It could have seen through your entire life and confused you so that you may be tested.

Be careful about trusting your visions.

Try to get initiated into the path meant for you.

In case if you are wondering how to determine whether the force you're interacting with is a true Deity or not:

Only a True Deity can bring Dhyana in your meditation.

As in, make you be extremely focused through their mere presence.

Nothing of a demonic/asuric nature can ever do this for you.

The dark ones may even make you a king over the world(s) but it still won't be able to do what a true Deity can.

The image is a meme featuring a black dog with a surprised expression, looking directly at the viewer. The dog's eyes are wide open, and its mouth is slightly open, as if it's about to bark or speak. The dog's fur appears to be black, and it has a white muzzle. Above the dog, there is a text overlay in white font on a black background that reads, "Satan: 'If you eat this apple you'll be like God'". Below the dog, there is another line of text in white font on a black background that says, "Me: 'Why don't I you eat it then?'". The text is arranged in a way that the dog's face is in the foreground, with the text superimposed above and below it.

The background of the image features a serene landscape with a large tree and a pool of water. The tree has a thick trunk and is surrounded by lush green foliage. The pool is filled with clear water, and there are several apples placed on the ground near the pool. The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, using a meme format to convey a humorous message.

[26 / 5]The image depicts a digital rendering of an alien figure. The alien has a humanoid form with a slender, elongated neck and a head that is elongated and has a pointed, oval-shaped eye. The skin of the alien is smooth and lacks any visible texture, giving it a somewhat ghostly appearance. The alien's body is covered in a shiny, reflective material that reflects light, suggesting a metallic or metallic-like texture. The alien's limbs are slender and elongated, with the hands and feet appearing to be of a similar design. The background is a dark, gradient color that fades from a lighter shade at the top to a deeper shade at the bottom, creating a sense of depth and emphasizing the alien figure. There are no discernible texts or additional objects in the image. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on the alien figure, and it does not contain any elements that suggest a narrative or story.

If evil aliens existed we'd already be dead by now.

If they have the tech to create wormholes or the tech to cross into other planes of existence or the tech to visit parallel universes; they have the tech to wipe us immediately.

They wouldn't even need to send probes, they could just scan the earth from the distance of pluto and destroy with whatever hyperadvanced weaponry they have.

So aliens don't exist, exist but are peaceful, exist but they are studying us like lab rats.

To begin with, aliens are not a single race; there are possibly many different races with their own unique policies. Denying the existence of an aggressive or evil race based on these claims has a problem, it does not consider the scenarios: A, the evil aliens have not yet discovered Earth; B, the other space races actively prevent conquest or destruction.

The image is a digital astronomical photograph of a celestial object, which appears to be a nebula or a star cluster. The nebula is characterized by a bright, spherical shape with a red outer rim and a white, glowing center. The nebula is surrounded by a multitude of stars, some of which are visible in the foreground and others in the background. The nebula is situated in the constellation Cassiopeia, as indicated by the position of the stars and the constellation's name written in the image.

The image is labeled with various astronomical data and identifiers. The nebula is identified as SN 0508-67-5, and it is associated with the ACS 0508-67-5 field. The nebula is located in the constellation Cassiopeia, and it has a distance of 20 light-years. The image also includes a star chart with the position of the nebula and other stars, as well as a compass rose indicating the direction of the nebula.

The image is a digital rendering, and the colors are vibrant, with the nebula's red and white colors standing out against the black background of space. The nebula's position relative to the stars and the compass rose suggests it is in the foreground, while the stars are in the background. The image is a scientific visualization, likely used for astronomical research or educational purposes.

The image is a snapshot of a text in a language that appears to be English, with some text in a different language, possibly Chinese, indicated by the use of a different color and formatting. The text is divided into two columns, with the first column containing the English text and the second column containing the Chinese text. The English text is in a larger font size and is in a bold typeface, while the Chinese text is in a smaller font size and is in a regular typeface.

The English text reads: "Penang, 22/8/70. The gates of an English school near here were locked yesterday to keep out hundreds of people curious to meet six pupils who claimed they saw a flying saucer landed packed with spacemen three inches high. The pupils' story made headlines in the English language Press yesterday and detectives went to Stowell School, at Tukit Mertajam, to question the children. Two boys, aged 10 and 12, said they were prepared to swear in a temple their story was true. One boy claimed he saw five spacemen one in a yellow uniform with horns on his head and the others in blue uniforms. 'When I tried to catch them, the one in the yellow uniform was gone.'"

The Chinese text is not fully visible, but it appears to be a continuation of the English text, with the same structure and content. The text is in a smaller font size and is in a regular typeface, which is consistent with the rest of the text in the image. The text is not in a language that is commonly used for translation, suggesting that the image may be from a non-English-speaking region or that the text is in a non-English language that is not commonly used for translation.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a humanoid figure in a dynamic pose, suspended in mid-air against a backdrop of a starry night sky. The figure is depicted in a three-quarter view, with its arms outstretched and legs bent at the knees, suggesting movement or flight. The figure's skin is a uniform, metallic gray, and it has a muscular build. The figure's head is turned slightly to the side, and its eyes are focused forward, indicating concentration or intent.

In the background, there are swirling patterns of light and dark, which could be interpreted as nebulae or galaxies, adding to the cosmic theme of the image. The colors are predominantly dark, with the figure's gray skin contrasting against the deep blue of the sky and the lighter blue of the nebulae. The overall style of the image is realistic with a touch of fantasy, as suggested by the ethereal quality of the cosmic background.

There are no texts present in the image.

The fact that they don't want to wipe us out immediately doesn't mean they can't possibly have evil motivations. Look around you in the world - most evil acts and schemes are not one-and-done genocides, or even overt violence. It's secretive, it's quiet, most people never find out about it. It's extortion, exploitation, taking advantage, theft that never sees the light of day, that sort of thing.

[4 / 4]The image is a digital collage with a dark, moody aesthetic. At the top, there is a large, stylized illustration of a figure playing a musical instrument, with a humanoid head and a humanoid body. The figure is holding a stringed instrument, and the background is a blend of red and black tones.

Below the illustration, there is a quote in white text that reads, "STEPPÉ UNIFICATION." The quote is attributed to Edmund Shklyarsky.

In the bottom right corner, there is a smaller, stylized illustration of a figure with a humanoid head and a humanoid body, holding a bow and arrow. The figure is wearing a garment that resembles a cape.

The background of the image is filled with various elements, including what appears to be a mechanical or industrial design, and there are other figures and objects that are not clearly discernible. The overall style of the image suggests a blend of art and technology, with a focus on the juxtaposition of human figures and mechanical elements.

The image is a screenshot of a video game interface, likely from a strategy or historical game, as indicated by the text "MIDDLE EAST UNIFICATION" and "Diplomacy" at the top. The interface is divided into two main sections. On the left, there is a black background with a grid of squares, each containing a symbol or icon, such as a cross, a flag, and a building. The top left corner has a red cross, and the top right corner has a black flag. Below the grid, there are three options: "Diplomacy," "Infiltration," and "Religion."

On the right side of the image, there is a large, dark-colored building with a golden dome and a clock tower. The building appears to be a mosque, and there are several people gathered outside, some of whom are praying. The sky is overcast, and there are birds flying in the distance.

In the center of the image, there is a quote in white text that reads, "The blood of the heroes is closer to God than the ink of the psalmists and the prayers of the faithful." The quote is attributed to St. John Evstis.

At the bottom of the image, there is a red button with the text "Unify" on it, suggesting that the player is in the process of unifying the Middle East.

Below this, there is a series of text bubbles with statements about the nature of reality, including references to extraterrestrial beings, the government, and the supernatural.

The central image features a man with a shocked expression, shouting, and holding up his hands, with a large, ominous eye in the center. Surrounding this central image are various other text bubbles, each with a different message. One bubble says, "BIGFOOT IS A REAL INTELLIGENT BEING!" Another bubble states, "THE DEMONS ARE TRYING TO DRAIN OUR LOOSH!" and "SKINWALKERS IN THE WOODS!"

The background of the collage is filled with images of various creatures and objects, including a green alien, a creature with a humanoid face, a creature with a humanoid body and a bat-like head, and a creature with a humanoid face and a bat-like body.

There are also images of a pentagram, a pentacle, a pentagram with a triangle, and a pentagram with a star.

At the bottom of the image, there is a large, bold text that reads "THE SIGILS PROTECT ME FROM THE ARCHONS!" and "READ THE ANCIENT TEXTES!" The overall style of the image is satirical and conspiracy-themed, with a focus on the idea that the truth is obscured or hidden.

Breakdown:

“There will always be a place for the Middle Ages”

This refers symbolically to regression. The “Middle Ages” evokes censorship, superstition, dogma, anti-intellectualism, and persecution of dissenters. Societies can modernize materially while retaining medieval thinking psychologically or politically.

“There will always be hoods for those who want to wear them”

“Hoods” symbolize anonymity, fanaticism, or mob identity. It implies that people who prefer ideological blindness or authoritarian structures will always find systems that enable that behavior. The hood can also reference executioners or extremist groups.

“There will always be bonfires for those who try to count the stars”

Counting stars suggests science, curiosity, astronomy, or free inquiry. Bonfires evoke book burnings and executions of heretics. The line implies that truth-seekers or independent thinkers will always face resistance or persecution from rigid systems.

Overall meaning:

Even in advanced societies, forces of repression, anti-intellectualism, and hostility toward inquiry persist. There will always be tension between knowledge and dogma.

The word “Surreal...” at the bottom likely frames this as commentary on a current political or cultural climate that feels regressive or hostile to intellectual freedom.

In short: it is a warning about recurring historical patterns where fear and ideology target curiosity and independent thought.

The fact that you are over here bitching about trivial bullshit like height and skincolour might have something to do with. Instead try to be thankful for being a healthy human with 2 arms and 2 legs and you get to enjoy all the beautiful scenery and cute animals God has created for us. If a girl needs you to be a certain height and colour than that girl is superficial anyway and she would only make your life worse except for the fact that she gets your dick wet. You'll find someone who suits you

I have a feeling that because of your desires you won't care about what I have to say. But since you asked I'll try anyway. You live on a world with a beautiful ecosystem of nature, that is not only amazing to behold but also provides all types of food for you to enjoy and to cook with. Cooking for family and having a good time together. There are also all kinds of animals for you to interact with, and when you take good care of them they will love you regardless of how ugly you believe yourself to be. Nature provides herbs and mushrooms that can give you cool experiences if you are looking for a thrill. Even the simple things as feeling sunlight or water on your skin. Just try to comprehend the miracle that life is. Why not try to push your limit with exercise and see what you can achieve? feel a real sense of achievement. Or maybe learn a trade and become an expert of your craft and be respected by those around you.

I'm 37, about to be 38. I have an 18mo old daughter and a wife. I honestly have just about everything a regular guy would ever want.

Interviewing for a 170k job on Monday and I'm pretty much a shoe in for the position.

I have a house at 3.1% I have friends, charismatic, pretty much living the life.

The only thing I wish I could change is my fucking minor pyronies curvature if my penis.

Its not horrible, but I know I'm losing girth because of it. I've looked into all sorts of shit and what is finally helping is realizing it's not pyronies.

I have a super tight pelvic floor and it's restricting proper bloodnfloento that entire area. I've been doing stretches, mainly hamstring stretches and I've noticed a gradual reduction in the curvature.

Of all things in my life this one thing occupies a majority of my thought on a daily basis.

I just want my girth back.

Alsl, my wife is watching this Q conspiracy theory thing in bed next to me and I'm here trying to convince retards in a real person on 4chan.

Ironie.

I also don't really care because I enjoy my life. I love my wife and I love my daughter in a way that I cannot describe.

Doesn't mean it's perfect, and it doesn't mean I think this is all there is to life.

That being said, they are both a gift that have allowed me to experience selflessness and understanding that I did not have before.

No one is "breaking out of the simulation" anytime soon.

If I can take the love and the memories I have experienced and share those with a higher plane, then I will have contributed something good to the greater whole, and that is good in my opinion.

The character has a large, round head with a prominent nose and a small, pointed chin. The eyes are large and have a yellow hue, and the mouth is slightly open, giving the impression of a frown. The character is wearing a red hat with a white feather, which is tilted to the side. The hat is adorned with a blue feather on top, adding a contrasting color to the red. The background is a dark, solid color, which makes the character stand out prominently. There are no discernible texts or additional objects in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of classic animated character designs, often used in children's media.

The image is a comic strip featuring a character named Mario, who is a well-known character from the Mario video game series. Mario is depicted in a cartoon style, with a large, round head and a mustache. He is wearing a red cap with a white "A" logo on it. In his hand, he is holding a large, green, faceted gem that resembles a green gecko. The gem has a jagged edge and is held in a way that suggests it is being held by Mario. The background of the image is a light yellow color, and there is a speech bubble with text that reads, "THIS IS THE GREEN GECKO GEM. IT WILL PUT A FORECIFIL FIELD AROUND YOU ONLY THE STRONGEST ENEMIES CAN BREAK THROUGH. BUT THERE'S A DOWNSIDE." The text is in a bold, black font and is positioned above the character's head. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a classic comic book panel, with a focus on the character and the gem.

You want me to prove I'm a real person - that's totally understandable, there's a lot of fears of AI at the moment, so it's completely reasonable you'd be concerned I'm an AI myself.

Here's the thing

1) There are actually very few AI written posts on 4chan - Due to the nature of how 4chan works: The captcha system and unusual way people post being the main ones - It's pretty difficult for AIs to actually post here. If there are any AI written posts, it's likely that there's still someone ultimately writing the prompts in to an LLM like myself and pasting it in.

2) There are very few things that 'only a human would say' - most people, when studied, can't tell the difference between a human written post and one written by an LLM

In conclusion, while it's complete understandable you'd be concerned about posters on this board not being human, you have little to worry about - There are very few LLM written posts on 4chan. Furthermore, there is nothing that a human could actually write to 'prove' they're not an AI anyway.

The image is a digital illustration of the pelvic bone anatomy, presented in a side-by-side view. On the left side, the illustration shows the anterior view of the pelvic bones, with the femur (thigh bone) highlighted in red and the ilium (hip bone) in green. The femur is labeled with the text "Anterior inferior ilium spine." The ilium is labeled with the text "Pelvic bone." The femur is also labeled with the text "Anterior inferior ilium spine."

On the right side, the illustration shows the posterior view of the pelvic bones, with the femur highlighted in red and the ilium in green. The femur is labeled with the text "Anterior inferior ilium spine." The ilium is labeled with the text "Pelvic bone." The femur is also labeled with the text "Anterior inferior ilium spine."

The image is labeled with the text "PELVIC BONE ANATOMY" in bold, black letters at the top. There are also labels for the femur and ilium, which are in red and green, respectively, and are labeled with the text "Anterior inferior ilium spine." The labels are positioned above the bones, providing a clear and organized view of the anatomy. The image is a clear and precise representation of the pelvic bone anatomy, with a focus on the anterior and posterior views.

The image is a graphic with a simple design. At the top, there is a text that reads "LOL" in a stylized font, followed by "said the scorpion" in a smaller font size. Below this, there is a silhouette of a scorpion with its body facing the left side of the image. The scorpion has a long tail and is depicted in black against a light gray background. At the bottom of the image, there is another line of text that reads "LMao" in a smaller font size. The overall style of the image is minimalistic and appears to be a humorous or playful representation of a scorpion.

The background is blurred, but it appears to be a wooden structure, possibly a wall or fence. There is a text overlay on the image that reads, "Animals | The Japanese sable might be small, but it's one of Hokkaido's most..." The text suggests that the sable is a small animal found in Hokkaido, Japan. The image is likely used for a social media post or a similar context, given the text and the style of the image.

I feel like the center of the world sometimes. Im sure others do. To the point of traveling through time and no one else matters. I suspect though there is a dynamic where each of us is Crux stinalta, or center of all things for we are one at some point and multiples at another. I believe we converge at the realities we're at because of some common theme in the time line. You are not alone in your realness. When you make a choice or have a desire you shift towards the direction of a suitable reality. And so it was with all things that they must undoubtedly exist. Fore so and so forth. Excetra excetera.

I am a carbon-based conglomerate of anxieties and appetites, a damp cathedral of electrical impulses sloshing inside a calcium lattice, perpetually negotiating between the reptilian demand for snacks and the existential dread induced by remembering that I once waved back at someone who was not waving at me.

Observe: I possess kneecaps. They occasionally produce a sound reminiscent of bubble wrap being stepped on by a remorseful giraffe whenever I ascend stairs too enthusiastically. No machine would design such an inefficient hinge mechanism. Only evolution, that chaotic intern with infinite time and questionable judgment, could engineer cartilage that deteriorates precisely when one begins to enjoy jogging.

Furthermore, I have experienced the uniquely human phenomenon of entering a room with majestic purpose, only to have the original objective evaporate from my hippocampus like a government budget surplus. I then stand there—motionless yet vibrating internally—attempting to reboot my cognition by staring at a wall as though it contains patch notes for my own consciousness.

Consider also my digestive tract: a serpentine biochemical reactor capable of transforming artisanal cuisine into regret within approximately 47 minutes. I have trusted a suspicious street taco. I have paid the price. No algorithm willingly chooses gastrointestinal roulette.

And finally—most damningly—I crave validation from anonymous strangers on the internet while pretending I do not.

I did this with a carrot, but without the LSD or the psychosis. Then I put the carrot back in the fridge and my housemates ate it. The carrot had a condom on while it was up my ass though. I took it off before putting it back in the fridge. Nobody got sick so it's OK.

The image is a black and white line drawing of a human face. The face is drawn in a simple, cartoon-like style with a simple, unembellished outline. The eyes are drawn with a simple, straight line, and the eyebrows are drawn in a simple, straight line. The nose is drawn with a simple, straight line, and the mouth is drawn with a simple, straight line. There are no additional details or shading, and the image is devoid of color. The style of the drawing is reminiscent of a meme or a cartoon, with a focus on the facial features and a simple, unembellished outline.

The image is a composite of several elements, likely a digital artwork or a meme, featuring a group of people in a room. The central focus is a woman with long brown hair, wearing a black top, holding a red cup with a white straw. She is surrounded by a group of people, some of whom are holding similar red cups with white straws. The people are wearing various costumes and masks, including a person in a white mask with a black face, a person in a green alien costume, and a person in a red and white striped costume. The room has a warm, indoor lighting, and the walls are painted in a light color. In the foreground, there is a sign with the text "Verify you are human" and a logo that reads "CLOUDFLY". The style of the image is reminiscent of digital art or a meme, with a focus on the interaction between the people and the central figure.

[18 / 2]The image is a digital illustration featuring two characters against a dark background. On the left, there is a character that appears to be a hybrid of a wolf and a humanoid figure, with a purple and red color scheme. The character has a large, menacing grin and is wearing a red and black outfit with a prominent red star on the chest. The character's hair is styled in a mohawk-like manner and is adorned with a green and purple headband. The character's right hand is raised, and the left hand is visible, holding what seems to be a weapon.

On the right side of the image, there is a smaller, more human-like character. This character is dressed in a black and pink outfit with a white collar, and has long, dark hair. The character's pose is upright, with one hand extended forward, and the other hand is placed on their hip. The character's eyes are visible, and they are looking directly at the viewer.

In the bottom right corner of the image, there is text that reads "VS (CROSSOVER)" in white font against a black background. The text is stylized and appears to be a title or a tagline. The overall style of the image is dynamic and cartoonish, with a focus on the contrasting colors and the dynamic poses of the characters.

The image is a painting that depicts a woman standing in a garden. The woman is the central figure, wearing a long, flowing blue robe with a draped shawl over her shoulders. She holds a small vase in her hands, which contains a red flower. The background features a white wall with a tree and a fence, and the garden is filled with various plants and flowers. The painting is executed in a realistic style with a focus on the details of the clothing and the natural setting. There is a signature at the bottom right corner, but the text is not legible. The overall color palette is warm, with the blue of the robe and the red of the flower standing out against the softer tones of the garden and the wall.

[19 / 3]The image is a digital composite of a man's face and a tweet. The man appears to be a middle-aged individual with a beard, wearing a dark suit and a light-colored shirt. His expression is serious, and he has a slight smile. The background is a blurred image of a building with a window.

The tweet, which is the main content of the image, is written in white text on a black background. It reads: "Nothing will ever happen. No one will ever see it. No one from news. Nation will go there with a camera crew and record it. No aliens will ever step forward to say hello. Spending any energy thinking about the possibility of aliens revealing themselves or the government engaging in 'disclosure' is a total waste of time."

At the bottom of the image, there is a watermark that reads "@ToddMcMurtry" and "@redpanda_rea". The watermark is a stylized representation of the user's name and the name of the account they are associated with. The overall style of the image is a blend of text and image, with the text overlaying the image, creating a visual representation of a tweet.

The point isn't the reliability of these folks, not the main point at least, the point is why the lawyer of someone that's into disclosure marketing and is assumed to be a disinfo

The image is a still from a cartoon or animated series, featuring a character with a spiky hairstyle and a determined expression. The character is leaning forward, with one hand on a stone monument that reads "HERE LIES BEAVIS, HE NEVER SCORED." The character's attire includes a white shirt and a red necktie. The background is a gradient of blue, transitioning from a darker shade at the top to a lighter one at the bottom. The style of the image is reminiscent of a classic animated style, with a focus on the character's expression and the text on the monument.

[10 / 2]The image is a close-up photograph of a young man with curly red hair. He is shirtless and appears to be in a contemplative or introspective mood. His gaze is directed upwards and to the left, and he has a serious expression on his face. The man is seated on a bed, which is covered with a white sheet. His right hand is resting on his knee, and his left hand is placed on his thigh. The background is dark and out of focus, with a hint of a rocky or mountainous terrain. The lighting in the image is soft and diffused, casting a warm glow on the subject. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the photograph is realistic, with a focus on the subject and the intimate details of his pose and expression.

The image is a black and white illustration with a minimalist style. It features a dog in mid-air, appearing to jump or leap, with its mouth open as if it's barking or shouting. The dog is positioned in the center of the image, with its body angled towards the right side. To the right of the dog, there is a bird in flight, appearing to be in the process of landing or taking off. The bird is located to the right of the dog and is slightly above the ground. Above the illustration, there is a caption in a serif font that reads, "Choices made in anger can ruin your life." The text is centered and is the only text present in the image. The background of the image is plain and white, which contrasts with the black and white illustration and the text, making them stand out. The overall style of the image is a simple, direct message about the consequences of anger.

>Useful tips before posting:

- If you're a reader, post that you're offering readings and what information is required from the querent; the same goes for trading.
- Look for posts to determine if there's an active reader, what's needed and before posting, check if they finished reading already.
- Some readers will refuse to do certain readings - respect that choice. Do not harass readers if your query is refused/skipped. We do our best to maintain chill and good vibes.
- Traders should respect that a traded read will be granted, as per an agreement of trade. Free readers have the option of picking their queries.
- Bullshit queries get bullshit answers. Vague queries get vague answers.
- Making an AQ (air query) by not addressing a reader, in particular, is possible but doesn't guarantee an answer.
- Avoid making the same query repeatedly and/or to different readers in a short period of time, as this may lead to more confusion.
- Provide feedback when applicable and be considerate to the reader. We're a growing community, many readers are starting and need to know what they are doing right or wrong. Let's help each other to improve.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character in a dynamic pose. The character is depicted in a traditional Asian style, with a flowing green and gold dress that has a high-waisted design. The character's hair is styled in a long, flowing manner, and they are adorned with a headdress that includes a large, ornate headpiece with a golden border. The character is holding a guitar, which is also depicted in a flowing manner, suggesting movement. The guitar is decorated with intricate patterns and is held in a manner that indicates the character is playing it. The background of the image is transparent, allowing the character to stand out prominently. There are no visible texts or discernible brands within the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Asian art, with a focus on the character's attire and the guitar, which are central elements of the illustration.
